The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

Independent Non-Executive Director. Chair of the Compliance & Culture Committee. 14. Re-elect Roberto Quarta - Chair (Non Executive)
Non-Executive Chair. The Chair is not considered independent owing to a tenure of over nine years. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that a Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Being a non-independent Chair is considered to be incompatible with this.
The chair also holds another chair position at a listed company, which raises time commitment concerns. It is considered that the chair should be able to wholly dedicate their time to the company in times of company crisis. The COVID pandemic has shown that there are times when multiple unrelated companies will require the Chair's full attention in order to be able to handle times of crisis. It is considered that there is insufficient time to be able to effectively chair two or more companies at the same time. Owing to the above, opposition is recommended.

In addition, it is considered that the members of the remuneration committee are responsible for the company's remuneration policy, and there are concerns with the company's remuneration policy. Overall, opposition is recommended.

17. Re-appoint KPMG as the Auditors
KPMG proposed. No non-audit fees were paid to the auditors in the past three years. This approach is commended. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).
The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

The Board is seeking approval to issue up to an additional 10% of the Company's issued share capital for cash for use only in connection with an acquisition or a specified capital investment. 13. Re-appoint PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP as auditor of the Company
PwC proposed. Non-audit fees represented 3.09% of audit fees during the year under review and 8.79% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. 15. Approve Remuneration Policy
Changes proposed: i) Increase of the maximum opportunity for the LTIP award from 300% of the salary to 350% of the salary, ii) Replacement of the formulaic LTIP grant reduction with a discretionary approach and iii) Removal of quantitative cap on salary increases and maximum benefit levels.
Total potential variable pay could reach 560% of the salary for the CEO and 510% of the salary for the Finance Director, this is considered excessive since is higher than 200%. Annual Bonus is paid 50% in cash and 50% defer to shares which is in line with best practices. However, performance conditions apply independently and not interdependently. For the LTIP awards performance period is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term, however, a two year holding period applies which is welcomed. Directors may be entitled to a dividend income which is accrued on vesting share awards from the date of grant. Such rewards misalign shareholders and executive interests as shareholders must subscribe for shares in order to receive dividends whereas participants in the scheme do not.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. 16. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The change in the CEO's salary is in line with the rest of the Company. The CEO's salary is in the lower quartile of the Company's comparator group. The CEO's total variable pay is considered highly excessive at approximately 1072% of salary for the year under review. The bulk of this was due to LTIP awards vesting, which alone amounted to 981.4% of salary. The ratio of CEO pay compared to average employee pay is acceptable at 17:1.

0040. Approve Remuneration Policy
It is proposed to approve the remuneration policy. Variable remuneration appears to be consistently capped, and the payout is in line with best practice. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets for performance criteria for its variable remuneration component, which may lead to overpayment against underperformance. On balance, abstention is recommended.

Vote Cast: Abstain

0060. Approve New Executive Share Plan
The Board proposes the approval of a new executive incentive plan. Under the plan, participants will be allotted shares or rights to shares. Performance targets have not been fully quantified at this time, which makes an informed assessment impossible and may lead to (partial) payment against (partial) failure.
LTIP based schemes are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the Company (creating capital and - lawful - dividends). They act as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute Company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

GRUPO AEROPORTUARIO SURESTE AGM - 26-04-2023

2.C. Authorise Share Repurchase
It is proposed to fix the maximum amount available to directors, for the purpose of buying shares on the market. Although this is technically not an authority to repurchase shares, shareholders in Mexico do not approve individual authorities to repurchase shares. As such, identifying the total amount which can be used for repurchasing shares is considered an indirect authority to buy back shares on the market. These resolutions will not be supported unless the Board has set forth a clear, cogent and compelling case demonstrating how the authority would benefit long-term shareholders. As no clear justification was provided by the Board, an oppose vote is recommended.

NATURA & CO HOLDING SA AGM - 26-04-2023

1. Approve Financial Statements
Disclosure is acceptable and the report was made available sufficiently before the meeting. However, The Company has not disclosed the fees paid to the auditors for the year under review, and what non-audit services have been provided, if any. Under Brazilian legislation, companies are not required in their financial statements to disclose the amount paid for the External Audit except where additional services have been engaged and the value of such services exceeds 5% of the total amount paid to the external auditor. Nevertheless, it is considered that companies should go beyond minimum regulatory requirements. Not disclosing the fees paid to the auditors is considered to be a serious breach of shareholder accountability, as it is impossible to assess the existence of potential conflicts of interest that would hinder the independence of the auditor. On this ground, opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

2. Approve Maximum Remuneration
It is proposed to approve the maximum compensation for Directors, Management and Fiscal Council for next year. It is regrettable that the Company bundled these items, however it is common practice in this market. The amount proposed under this resolution is not the actual remuneration but the global remuneration cap, and includes fixed salaries and short term incentives.
Directors and Fiscal Council receive only fixed fees. For Management, it is proposed to cap remuneration at BRL 54,9 million. Variable remuneration for executives would correspond to up to 632% of the fixed pay, which is deemed excessive. In addition, there is lack of disclosure with respect of targets and measurable criteria for variable remuneration, which prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment. Opposition is recommended.

ELEMENTIS PLC AGM - 26-04-2023

1. Receive the Annual Report
The annual report was made available sufficiently before the meeting and has been audited and certified. However, there are concerns surrounding the sustainability policies and practice at the company and the lack of board level accountability for sustainability issues. Therefore, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. These concerns should have been addressed in the annual report submitted to shareholders, however the annual report fails to address these concerns adequately and therefore this resolution cannot be supported.

Vote Cast: Abstain Results: For: 99.6, Abstain: 0.3, Oppose/Withhold: 0.1,

2. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The CEO's salary is in the median of a peer comparator group. The increase in the CEO salary was in line with the rest of the company. The CEO/average employee pay ratio is considered acceptable at 19:1.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

4. Re-elect John O'Higgins - Chair (Non Executive)
Non-Executive Chair of the Board. As there is no Board-level Sustainability Committee, the Chair of the Board is considered accountable for the Company's sustainability programme. As such, given that the Company's sustainability policies and practice are not considered to be adequate in order to minimize material risks linked to sustainability, an abstain vote is recommended.

8. Re-elect Steve Good - Non-Executive Director
Independent Non-Executive Director. There are serious concerns regarding the remuneration policy at the company and it is considered that chair of the remuneration committee should be held accountable for it when considering re-election. Opposition is recommened.

11. Re-appoint Deloitte as the Auditors
Deloitte proposed. There were no non-audit fees during the year under review and non-audit fees represented 5.63% of audit fees on a three-year aggregate basis.

This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

13. Issue Shares with Pre-emption Rights
The authority is limited to 33% of the Company's issued share capital and expires at the next AGM. Within acceptable limits. Opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose Results: For: 84.3, Abstain: 0.0, Oppose/Withhold: 15.7,

17. Issue Shares for Cash for the Purpose of Financing an Acquisition or Other Capital Investment
The Board is seeking approval to issue up to an additional 5% of the Company's issued share capital for cash for use only in connection with an acquisition or a specified capital investment. Such proposal is not supported as it is considered that the 5% limit sought under the general authority above is sufficient. Best practice would be to seek a specific authority from shareholders in relation to a specific transaction if such situation arises. As this is not the case, an oppose vote is therefore recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose Results: For: 84.3, Abstain: 0.0, Oppose/Withhold: 15.7,

18. Authorise Share Repurchase
The authority is limited to 10% of the Company's issued share capital and will expire at the next AGM. As no clear justification was provided by the Board, an oppose vote is recommended.

1. Receive the Annual Report
The annual report was made available sufficiently before the meeting and has been audited and certified. However, there are concerns surrounding the sustainability policies and practice at the company and the lack of board level accountability for sustainability issues. Therefore, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. These concerns should have been addressed in the annual report submitted to shareholders, more specific the continuously used method of production of energy from biomass, which produced by burning wood pellets is controversial and could lead to an increasingly reputational and financial risk. Therefore an oppose vote is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose Results: For: 99.2, Abstain: 0.3, Oppose/Withhold: 0.6,

2. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. CEO salary is not in line with the workforce, as the salary increase for the CEO was 11% for the year under review and the workforce salary increase by 2%. The CEO salary is in the median of the comparator group. The variable pay for the year under review was was excessive at 729.29% of the salary (Annual Bonus: 153.09%, LTIP: 576.2%). The ratio of CEO pay compared to average employee pay is marginally not acceptable at 25:1. PIRC consider a ratio of 20:1 as appropriate.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

Vote Cast: Oppose Results: For: 85.9, Abstain: 0.2, Oppose/Withhold: 13.9,

3. Approve Remuneration Policy
Changes proposed: i) Annual Bonus: a) Simplification of the wording on the choice of performance metrics. The majority of the annual bonus must still be earned based on performance against financial targets, b) Simplification of current approach to that part of annual bonus which is deferred in shares. The change will specify that 40% of any annual bonus earned is deferred into Drax's shares. This approach replaces the prevailing more complex approach whereby 100% of any bonus earned against strategic targets takes place subject to 40% of the total bonus outcome being deferred and c) Removal of the two-year holding period on deferred bonus shares so that any deferred shares awarded vest after three years. These shares will need to continue to be held (as a minimum on a net of tax basis) until Drax's share ownership guidelines are met.
Some of the changes proposed are in a positive direction as the clarification of the deferral part for the Annual Bonus, however, the proposed policy still raises concerns. More specific, total variable pay could reach 375% of the salary for the CEO and 325% of the salary for the other Executives and is considered excessive since is higher than 200%. On the Annual Bonus 60% is paid in cash and 40% defer to shares for a three year period. This is not considered adequate, it would be preferable 50% of the Bonus to be paid in cash and 50% to defer to shares for at least three years. In addition, the LTIP is based on the achievement of EPS and relative TSR targets. The absence of Non-financial parameters to assess Executives' long-term performance is considered contrary to best practice as such factors are generally beyond an individual director's control. Non-financial parameters allow the remuneration policy to focus on the operational performance of the business as a whole and the individual roles of each of the senior executives in achieving that performance. The performance metrics are not operating interdependently, such that vesting under the incentive plan is only possible where all threshold targets are met. Performance period is three-years which is not considered sufficiently long-term, however, a two-year holding period apply which is welcomed. Malus and clawback provisions apply to all variable pay.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

It is proposed to approve the remuneration policy. Variable remuneration appears to be consistently capped, and the payout is in line with best practice. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets for performance criteria for its variable remuneration component, which may lead to overpayment against underperformance. 11. Authorise Share Repurchase
It is proposed to authorise the Board to purchase Company's shares for 15% and five years. This resolution will not be supported unless the Board has set forth a clear, cogent and compelling case demonstrating how the authority would benefit long-term shareholders. The Company has stated that this resolution may authorise the Board of Directors to allocate all or part of its repurchased shares to remuneration schemes. However, this is not considered to be sufficient, as it includes only part of the requested authority. As no clear justification was provided by the Board regarding the full use of the authority, an oppose vote is recommended.

5. Ratify Acts of the Board of Directors and Officers
Standard resolution. At the company, there is no external whistle-blowing hotline. This suggests that such concerns that should be raised by a whistle-blower are dealt with internally, which may increase the risk of such issues not being followed up or escalating to a level where the higher was the level of the misconduct, the more likely is the issue to be concealed. On this basis, and on the potential unforeseeable consequences for the company, opposition is recommended.

EY proposed. Non-audit fees represented 24.55% of audit fees during the year under review and 33.43% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees raises some concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. PERSIMMON PLC AGM - 26-04-2023

3. Approve Remuneration Policy
Changes proposed: i) Annual Bonus: increase of maximum opportunity for the Chief Financial officer from 150% of the salary to 175% of the salary, ii) Threshold vesting for annual bonus: payment at threshold performance is up to 20% of maximum from 10%, iii) Recruitment policy: No change to the maximum for a new Chief Executive, 500% of salary. For any other Executive Director, the maximum will increase to 475% of salary from 450% of salary, reflecting the change in the bonus maximum and iv) In service shareholding guidelines: Executive Directors will now be required to retain all shares acquired under the PSP and deferred bonus awards, on a net of tax basis, until the shareholding guideline is met, unless in exceptional circumstances the Committee exercises discretion to vary this requirement.
Total variable pay could reach 400% of the salary for the CEO and 375% for the Chief Financial Officer and is considered excessive since is higher than 200%. 50% of the Annual Bonus is deferred to shares for a three-year period and is in line with best practices. For the Performance Share Plan (PSP) performance metrics will be financial and non-financial with the addition of an environmental measure. Vesting period is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term, however a two-year holding period apply which is welcomed. Malus and claw backs provisions apply for all the variable pay.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

4. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The CEO salary for the year under review increase by 3% and is in line with or lower than the increase paid to the workforce. The CEO salary is in the median of the Company's comparator group. For the year under review total variable pay was 171% of the salary and is not consider excessive since is within the limit of 200%. The ratio of the CEO pay compared to average employee pay is not acceptable at 44:1. PIRC consider adequate a ratio of 20:1

12. Re-appoint Ernst & Young LLP as auditor of the Company
EY proposed. No non-audit fees were paid to the auditors in the past three years. This approach is commended. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

17. Issue Shares for Cash for the Purpose of Financing an Acquisition or Other Capital Investment
The Board is seeking approval to issue up to an additional 5% of the Company's issued share capital for cash for use only in connection with an acquisition or a specified capital investment. Such proposal is not supported as it is considered that the 5% limit sought under the general authority above is sufficient. Best practice would be to seek a specific authority from shareholders in relation to a specific transaction if such situation arises. As this is not the case, an oppose vote is therefore recommended.

ELETROBRAS AGM - 27-04-2023

1. Approve Financial Statements
Disclosure is acceptable and the report was made available sufficiently before the meeting. However, The Company has not disclosed the fees paid to the auditors for the year under review, and what non-audit services have been provided, if any. Under Brazilian legislation, companies are not required in their financial statements to disclose the amount paid for the External Audit except where additional services have been engaged and the value of such services exceeds 5% of the total amount paid to the external auditor. Nevertheless, it is considered that companies should go beyond minimum regulatory requirements. Not disclosing the fees paid to the auditors is considered to be a serious breach of shareholder accountability, as it is impossible to assess the existence of potential conflicts of interest that would hinder the independence of the auditor. On this ground, opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

3. Approve Maximum Remuneration
It is proposed to approve the maximum compensation for Directors, Management and Fiscal Council for next year. It is regrettable that the Company bundled these items, however it is common practice in this market. The amount proposed under this resolution is not the actual remuneration but the global remuneration cap, and includes fixed salaries and short term incentives.
Fiscal Council receive only fixed fees. The Board of Directors receive a variable remu neration in top of their fees. For Management, it is proposed to cap remuneration at BRL 64,7 million. Variable remuneration for executives would correspond to up to 296% of the fixed pay, which is deemed excessive. In addition, there is lack of disclosure with respect of targets and measurable criteria for variable remuneration, which prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment. Opposition is recommended.

In terms of good governance, it is considered that all of the candidates to the Fiscal Board should be independent. The candidate Marcos Tadeu de Siqueira is not considered to be independent, as considered to be connected with a significant shareholder, the brazilian government. On this basis, opposition is recommended.

The Board proposes the approval of a new equity-based incentive plan. Under the plan, participants will be allotted shares that will vest over a three-year period. Performance targets have been quantified at this time, which is above market practice. However, the potential total reward raises excessiveness concerns (together with other incentives) and the vesting period of three years is considered to be short term.
LTIP based schemes are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the Company (creating capital and - lawful - dividends). They act as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute Company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

It is proposed to approve the remuneration paid or due to Mr. Thomas Buberl, Chief Executive Officer, with an advisory vote. There are concerns regarding excess as the total variable remuneration exceeded 200% of the salary. The Company has fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated, although there are no claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration component which makes it unlikely that shareholders will be able to reclaim any variable remuneration unfairly paid out. Overall, opposition is recommended.

ASTRAZENECA PLC AGM - 27-04-2023

3. To re-appoint PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP as Auditor

PwC proposed. Non-audit fees represented 0.80% of audit fees during the year under review and 5.60% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state.

PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

During the year under review, litigation against the company has reached an unfavourable verdict and there are concerns over how this could financially or reputationally impact the company. As such, it is not clear that the CEO has performed adequate risk oversight to prevent this issue from leading to damaging legal action. Therefore, opposition is recommended to the election of the CEO.

He has also served on the Board for over nine years. There is sufficient independent representation on the Board. However, the company received significant opposition (18.79 %) on resolution number 5.m ((Re-elect Marcus Wallenberg - Non-Executive Director) at AGM 2022. 6. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the single total remuneration are adequately disclosed. The CEO's salary is in line with the rest of the Company as the CEO's salary increased for the year under review 3% /The CEO's salary is in the upper quartile of the Company's comparator group, which raises concerns for potential excessiveness. Total variable pay for the year under review is highly excessive, amounting to 999.99% of salary for the CEO. It is recommended that total variable pay is limited to 200% of salary. The ratio of CEO pay compared to average employee pay is not acceptable at 44:1, it is recommended that the ratio does not exceed 20:1.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

While re-investment of the bonus in shares, or payment of part or all of the bonus in shares, are considered positive practice, share matching plans are viewed as a de facto discount for executives to buy company shares. All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The change in the CEO's salary was not in line with the average employee, as the CEO's salary increased by 26.2% and the average employee's salary increased by 10.6%. CEO salary is in the upper quartile of the comparator group, which raises concerns for potential excessiveness. The ratio of CEO pay compared to average employee pay is not considered appropriate at 41:1. PIRC considers acceptable a ratio of 20:1.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

3. Approve Remuneration Policy
From 2023, variable pay will be capped at 685% of the salary for the CEO (285% for the Annual Bonus and 400% for the LTIP) which is deemed excessive since is higher than 200% of the salary. Annual Bonus is paid 50% in cash and 50% is deferred to shares. Any deferred element is released 50% after three years and 50% after four years from the date of grant. Concerns are raised on the LTIP award as it only utilizes Relative TSR as the sole metric. According to best practice, the scheme should operate at least two quantifiable performance metrics in an interdependent fashion. In addition, there are no non-financial performance measures attached to the LTIP and so the focus of remuneration policy is not the operational performance of the business as a whole or the individual roles of each of the executives in achieving that performance. Instead, the focus of the remuneration policy is financial KPIs, which mainly include factors beyond an individual director's control. The vesting period is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term, however, there is a holding period of up the three years. Malus and clawback provisions apply to all variable pay.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. 12. Approve Flutter Entertainment plc 2023 Long Term Incentive Plan
It is proposed to approve the Flutter Entertainment plc 2023 Long Term Incentive Plan. If approved, the 2023 LTIP will enable the Company to grant share awards and nil-cost options on a consolidated basis, with a single upfront grant vesting in tranches (if the relevant performance conditions are met), which will vest at the end of the performance period applicable to each tranche. Participation in the 2023 LTIP will be at the discretion of the Remuneration Committee with no employee having any guarantee of participation. The maximum vesting per participant is 400% of base salary, which is considered excessive. Each performance period will be of not less than three years, which is not considered adequately long-term. Performance conditions are at the discretion of the Remuneration Committee and have not been adequately disclosed at this time.
Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. On the other hand, executives are also among the beneficiaries: it is considered that support should not be given to stock or share option plans that do not lay out clear performance criteria, targets and conditions. On balance, opposition is recommended.

13. Approve Flutter Entertainment plc 2016 Restricted Share Plan
It is proposed to amend the existing Flutter Entertainment plc 2016 Restricted Share Plan, under which employees including executives are eligible for awards to incentivise recruitment, incentivisation and retention. The amendment will facilitate the grant of awards on a consolidated basis, whereby a single upfront grant of an award may vest in tranches after the end of the performance period applicable to each tranche. The authority will increase the limit on the aggregate market value of shares awarded under the RSP in any one calendar year to 1,600% of base salary (measured at the time of grant), provided that the maximum value of shares that may in the ordinary course vest in a particular calendar year does not exceed 400% of base salary (also measured at the time of grant). The amendment will also broaden the malus and clawback triggers that will apply. The maximum annual award is considered excessive as it exceeds 200% of base salary.
Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. On the other hand, executives are also among the beneficiaries: it is considered that support should not be given to stock or share option plans that do not lay out clear performance criteria, targets and conditions. SERCO GROUP PLC AGM - 27-04-2023

1. Receive the Annual Report
The annual report was made available sufficiently before the meeting and has been audited and certified. However, there are concerns surrounding the sustainability policies and practice at the company and the lack of board level accountability for sustainability issues. Therefore, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. These concerns should have been addressed in the annual report submitted to shareholders, however the annual report fails to address these concerns adequately and therefore this resolution cannot be supported.

Vote Cast: Abstain Results: For: 98.3, Abstain: 1.3, Oppose/Withhold: 0.3,

2. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. Mr. Nigel Crossley received a workforce aligned salary increase of 2% in 2022. For the year under review the variable pay was excessive at 389.26% of the salary (Annual Bonus: 154%, LTIP: 235.26%). The ratio of CEO pay compared to average employee pay is not acceptable at 58:1. PIRC consider a ratio of 20:1 as appropriate.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

13. Appoint the Auditors

KPMG proposed. Non-audit fees represented 2.56% of audit fees during the year under review and 2.35% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

2. Approve the Remuneration Report

4. Approve Remuneration Policy
Changes proposed: Annual Bonus, i) Updated profit metric from "profit before tax and exceptional items" to "operating profit", ii) Profit measurement approach has been simplified, from two profit target ranges (versus budget and prior year) to a single measure that takes into account budget and prior year, iii) Introduction of a new, ESG-related financial measure. LTIP awards: i) EPS range measured against absolute growth targets, ii) Increased stretch in net new business target range, iii) Shift of climate measure towards portfolio temperature score with 30% weighting.

Potential maximum pay-outs under all incentive schemes are excessive, particularly as the annual bonus has no individual caps and the maximum opportunity for LTIP awards is 400% of salary. There is no individual cap on the Annual bonus which is of concern. The use of variable compensation pool to reward executive Directors is not considered appropriate. Concerns also are raised for the LTIP awards since performance measures do not operate concurrently and the performance period is not considered sufficiently long-term at four years. However, it is noted that a one year holding period apply. In addition, there is no evidence thatdividends may not accrue on vesting awards from the date of grant. Such rewards misalign shareholders and executive interests as shareholders must subscribe for shares in order to receive dividends whereas participants in the scheme do not. Malus and clawback provisions apply to all variable pay.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. 3. Approve Remuneration Policy Changes proposed: i) pension entitlements aligned with those of the wider workforce, ii) bonus deferral equal to 50% of amounts awarded in excess of target performance levels in the form of restricted share awards, with a three-year vesting period, iii) a two-year holding period on shares vested in relation to LTIP awards, iv) malus and clawback provisions on incentives, v) a minimum shareholding requirement, set at 200% of base salary for the Group CEO and 150% for other Executive Directors and vi) a shareholding policy post-cessation of employment, equal to 100% of an individual's minimum shareholding requirement for a period of two years.

Overall disclosure is adequate, the proposed remuneration policy has improvements, however, there are also concerns about it. More specific, total variable pay could reach 375% of the salary for the CEO and 300% of the salary for the CFO and is considered excessive since is higher than 200%. On the Long-Term Incentive Plan performance period is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term, although a two year holding period applies which is welcomed. In addition, dividends may accrue on vesting awards from the date of grant. Such rewards misalign shareholders and executive interests as shareholders must subscribe for shares in order to receive dividends whereas participants in the scheme do not. Furthermore, it is not considered best practice that adjusted EBITDA is a measure for both components of variable remuneration. Malus and clawback provisions apply.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

The Board is seeking approval to issue up to an additional 10% of the Company's issued share capital for cash for use only in connection with an acquisition or a specified capital investment. CIA SANEAMENTO BASICO ESTADO SAO PAULO AGM - 27-04-2023

1. Approve Financial Statements
Disclosure is acceptable and the report was made available sufficiently before the meeting. However, The Company has not disclosed the fees paid to the auditors for the year under review, and what non-audit services have been provided, if any. Under Brazilian legislation, companies are not required in their financial statements to disclose the amount paid for the External Audit except where additional services have been engaged and the value of such services exceeds 5% of the total amount paid to the external auditor. Nevertheless, it is considered that companies should go beyond minimum regulatory requirements. The Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. ALLERGY THERAPEUTICS PLC EGM - 27-04-2023

2. Issue Shares for Cash

Background & Introduction: On 4 October 2022, the Company announced a pause in production at its Freeman facility, part of its Worthing, UK manufacturing site. This followed an internal review of its current operating processes to improve the robustness of its quality systems and build capacity across its manufacturing facilities. As a result of the manufacturing pause occurring during a period of peak production prior to the start of the pollen season, as previously reported, the Company announced that its revenue for the year ended 30 June 2023 is expected to be significantly below previous market expectations. This has led to a need for significant additional near-term funding for the Company. On 6 April 2023, the Company announced that it had entered into a senior secured Facility Agreement pursuant to which the Company's existing substantial Shareholders ZQ Capital (acting through its affiliate SkyGem International) and Southern Fox, agreed to make available to the Company a secured term loan Facility in an aggregate principal amount of GBP 40.75 million. The Facility will be used to refinance the existing GBP 10 million loan notes issued to the Lenders on 28 February 2023, to facilitate the continuation of the Group's pivotal Phase III G306 Trial for Grass MATA MPL, to continue other key clinical trial activities including the Phase I study for Peanut allergy, and to finance trading and provide working capital. In conjunction with the Facility Agreement, the Company also entered into the Equity Commitment Agreement with ZQ Capital (acting through its affiliate SkyGem Acquisition) and Southern Fox, pursuant to which ZQ Capital and Southern Fox agreed conditionally to subscribe for new Ordinary Shares at the Issue Price of 1 pence per new Ordinary Share to raise gross proceeds of GBP 40.75 million.
Proposal: It is proposed to empower the Directors to dis-apply statutory pre-emption rights in respect of the allotment of equity securities (the Subscription Shares and the Open Offer Shares) in Resolution 1.
Rationale: In order for the Directors to issue Subscription Shares and the Open Offer for cash free of statutory preemption rights in section 561 of the Act, such statutory pre-emption rights must be dis-applied. The Directors of the Company do not have any existing authorities to allot equity securities on a non-preemptive basis. Accordingly, the Directors wish to seek separate authorities to dis-apply pre-emption rights in respect of the allotment of the Subscription Shares and the Open Offer Shares pursuant to the Equity Financing.
Recommendation: Such proposals are considered on the basis of whether they are deemed fair; whether they have been adequately explained; and whether there is sufficient independent oversight of the recommended proposal. While there is sufficient independence on the board, it is not considered that the proposal has been adequately justified as an additional authority beyond that granted in resolution 1. In particular, there are concerns over potential dilution, given that the issue of shares without pre-emption rights may exceed 10% of share capital, would not be in the interest of existing shareholders. Opposition is recommended.

BP PLC AGM - 27-04-2023

1. Receive the Annual Report

The annual report was made available sufficiently before the meeting and has been audited and certified. However, there are concerns surrounding the sustainability policies and practice at the company. Therefore, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. These concerns should have been addressed in the annual report submitted to shareholders, however the annual report fails to address these concerns adequately and therefore this resolution cannot be supported.

Despite having some climate targets, the company does not have both a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 and an adequate short-term target(s). These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change not having both adequate short term target and a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors. As such, an oppose vote is recommended.

2. Approve the Remuneration Report

All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The CEO salary is in line with the workforce, since the CEO salary increase by 4% and the workforce salary increase by 5.5%. However, the CEO's salary is in the upper quartile of the Company's comparator group which raises concerns over the excessiveness of his pay. Total variable pay for the year under review is considered excessive, amounting to 610.3% of salary (Annual Bonus: 172.4%, Performance Shares: 437.9%), it is recommended that total variable pay is limited to 200% of salary. The ratio of CEO pay compared to average employee pay is not acceptable at 34:1, it is recommended that the ratio does not exceed 20:1.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

3. Approve Remuneration Policy

Changes proposed: i) Mr. Murray Auchincloss pension allowance will be change from 15% of the salary to 20% of the salary, ii) On the Annual Bonus two new measures are proposed:1) the introduction of a profit measure (adjusted EBITDA) in place of cumulative cash cost reduction and 2) modify the the process safety measure to track tier 1 and tier 2 process safety events separately in order to increase focus on the more serious tier 1 events and iii) On the Performance shares, the introduction of the aim for net zero ambition with 15% weighting.

The changes proposed are consider adequate however, the proposed policy of the Company still raises concerns. More specific, total variable pay could reach 725% of the salary for the CEO and 675% for the other executives and is considered excessive since is higher than 200%. On the Performance Share award, performance period is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term, however, a three years holding period applies which is welcomed. Dividends may accrue on vesting awards from the date of grant. Such rewards misalign shareholders and executive interests as shareholders must subscribe for shares in order to receive dividends whereas participants in the scheme do not.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

Chair. Independent upon appointment.
Despite having some climate targets, the company does not have both a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 and an adequate short-term target(s). These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change not having both adequate short term target and a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors. As such, an oppose vote is recommended.

The Board is seeking approval to issue up to an additional 5% of the Company's issued share capital for cash for use only in connection with an acquisition or a specified capital investment. Such proposal is not supported as it is considered that the 5% limit sought under the general authority above is sufficient. Best practice would be to seek a specific authority from shareholders in relation to a specific transaction if such situation arises. As this is not the case, an oppose vote is therefore recommended.

It is proposed to fix the maximum amount available to directors, for the purpose of buying shares on the market. Although this is technically not an authority to repurchase shares, shareholders in Mexico do not approve individual authorities to repurchase shares. As such, identifying the total amount which can be used for repurchasing shares is considered an indirect authority to buy back shares on the market. These resolutions will not be supported unless the Board has set forth a clear, cogent and compelling case demonstrating how the authority would benefit long-term shareholders. As no clear justification was provided by the Board, an oppose vote is recommended.

EZ TEC EMPREENDIMENTOS AGM - 27-04-2023

1. Approve Financial Statements
Disclosure is acceptable and the report was made available sufficiently before the meeting. However, The Company has not disclosed the fees paid to the auditors for the year under review, and what non-audit services have been provided, if any. Under Brazilian legislation, companies are not required in their financial statements to disclose the amount paid for the External Audit except where additional services have been engaged and the value of such services exceeds 5% of the total amount paid to the external auditor. Nevertheless, it is considered that companies should go beyond minimum regulatory requirements. Not disclosing the fees paid to the auditors is considered to be a serious breach of shareholder accountability, as it is impossible to assess the existence of potential conflicts of interest that would hinder the independence of the auditor. On this ground, opposition is recommended.

Directors and Fiscal Council receive only fixed fees. For Management, it is proposed to cap remuneration at BRL 9,6 million. The Board proposes the approval of a new executive incentive plan. Under the plan, participants will be allotted shares or rights to shares. Performance targets have not been fully quantified at this time, which makes an informed assessment impossible and may lead to (partial) payment against (partial) failure.
LTIP based schemes are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the Company (creating capital and - lawful - dividends). They act as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute Company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal. Furthermore, as the Company has not constituted a Sustainability Committee, the Chair of the Board / CEO is considered accountable for the Company's sustainability programme and the programme is not considered adequate to minimise the material risks linked to sustainability.

During the year under review, the company has been accused of environmental mismanagement, and while no wrongdoing has been identified at this time, there are nevertheless concerns over the potential impact of these allegations. In September 2021, the Company was accused of releasing contaminant into the soil and groundwater exposing people to pollutants and other volatile compounds.

There are also allegations of the poor community relations or human rights practices by the company, and while no wrongdoing has been identified at this time, there are concerns over the potential impacts on the company and its stakeholders. 2. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The change in the CEO's salary is in line with the rest of the Company, since the CEO salary increase by 3.1% for the year under review and the workforce salary increase by 8.7%. The CEO's salary is in the lower quartile of the Company's comparator group. Total variable pay for the year under review was equalled 154.5% of base salary, which is considered acceptable. The ratio of CEO pay compared to average employee pay is not considered to be acceptable at 23:1.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

The Chair is also chairing another company within the FTSE 350 index. It is considered that a chair cannot effectively represent two corporate cultures. The possibility of having to commit additional time to the role in times of crisis is ever present. Given this, a Chair should focus his attention onto the only one FTSE 350 Company.

14. Approve the Ibstock Long-Term Incentive Plan 2023
It is proposed to the shareholders to approve the Company's Long-Term Incentive Plan. Under the plan eligible to participate are, all employees, including the Company's executive directors. The Remuneration Committee may grant Awards as: (i) conditional awards of Shares; (ii) nil or nominal-cost options over Shares; or (iii) forfeitable awards of Shares. No payment is required for the grant of an Award. Awards structured as nil or nominal-cost options will normally be exercisable from the point of vesting (or, where an Award is subject to a holding period, release) until the tenth anniversary of the grant date. Awards will not normally be granted to a participant under the LTIP over Shares with a market value (as determined by the Committee) in excess of 200% of base salary, in respect of any financial year of the Company. Awards may be granted in excess of this limit to an eligible employee in connection with their recruitment by way of compensating them for any awards forfeited as a result of leaving their former employer (a Recruitment Award). The vesting of Awards may (and, in the case of an Award to an Executive Director other than a Recruitment Award, will to the extent required by the Company's shareholder-approved directors' remuneration policy) be subject to the satisfaction of performance conditions. Awards which are subject to performance conditions will normally have those conditions assessed as soon as reasonably practicable after the end of the relevant performance period. The Committee will determine the extent to which the Awards will then vest, taking into account the extent that the performance conditions have been satisfied, the underlying performance of the Company and of the participant, and such other factors the Committee considers relevant.

Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. On the other hand, executives are also among the beneficiaries, therefore opposition is recommended.

Such proposal is not supported as it is considered that the 5% limit sought under the general authority above is sufficient. 12. Re-appoint PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP as Auditors
PwC proposed. Non-audit fees represented 10.00% of audit fees during the year under review and 17.39% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).
The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

18. Approve the Remuneration Report

All elements of the single figure remuneration table are adequately disclosed. The salary increases approved by the Committee range from 6% to 3%, and the Executive Directors and Senior Management will all receive 3%. The total variable remuneration paid in the year under review was 135.507% of base salary and is not considered excessive. The pay ratio for the CEO to average employee is 25:1 which is not acceptable. A ratio of 20:1 would be consider appropriate.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). 19. Approve Remuneration Policy

The company proposes a few changes, most of which are as follows; 1)Group Finance Director's pension contribution to be aligned to the wider workforce from 1

January 2023: 2) PSP threshold vesting to increasefrom 20% to 25% in line with market practice. There are concerns over the excessiveness of CEO's pay under all incentive schemes which stands at 350% of salary (Annual Bonus: 150% : PSP: 200%). The 2022 Annual Bonus performance measures are based on Operating profit (35%), Operating profit margin (15%), Cash conversion (10%), Build quality (15%), Customer service (%15), Carbon intensity targets (5%) and The Board to approve the Net Zero Transition Plan and for it to be submitted to SBTi (5%). One-third of the Annual Bonus is payable in shares which are held in trust for three years. This is not considered adequate it would be preferable that 50% of the Annual Bonus is defer to shares for a three year period at least, which is in line with best practice. The 2022 Long-term incentive plan(LTIP) performance measures are based on TSR v peer group (40%), RONOA (20%), Operating profit margin (20%), and Customer service (20%). The 2023 LTIP performance measures are based on TSR v peer group, Operating profit margin, RONOA, Customer service and Carbon emissions reduction. Due to uncertain market conditions, the precise weightings of the measures and final target ranges have not been finalised by the Remuneration Committee. On performance share plan the Remuneration Committee may vary the measures that are included in the plan and the weightings between the measures from year to year. It is noted that the performance measures include non-financial metrics in line with best practice. However, the performance metrics are not operating interdependently, such that vesting under the incentive plan is only possible where all threshold targets are met. In addition, performance period is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term, however a two year holding period apply which is welcomed. Termination payments are limited to annual salary plus specified benefits and are subject to mitigation. Under the rules of the LTIP, those deemed 'good leavers', receive their shares at the date of vesting subject to the achievement of performance conditions, with any vesting pro-rated in accordance with the proportion of the vesting period served. In respect of DSBP, this would normally allow the Directors, who the Committee determines to be good leavers, to receive their shares, in full, at the end of the holding period. Malus and clawback provisions apply to all variable pay.

It is proposed to approve the implementation of the remuneration policy. The payout is in line with best practice, being under 200% of the fixed salary. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. 12.B. Decision on a Performance Based Personnel Option Plan for 2023
The Board proposes the approval of a new long-term incentive plan. The Board asks for the right to decide on the issuing of performance stock options that can give a maximum of 500 key personnel in the Group the possibility to acquire series A shares.
LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

LONDON STOCK EXCHANGE GROUP PLC AGM - 27-04-2023

3. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. However, the CEO salary is in the upper quartile of the competitor group which is raised concerns over excessiveness. The total realized awards made all incentive schemes are not considered acceptable standing at 340.7% of base salary for the CEO. In addition, the ratio of CEO pay compared to the average employee is not considered acceptable at 33:1. PIRC consider adequate a ratio of 20:1.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

4. Approve Remuneration Policy
Executive Directors' total potential rewards under all incentive schemes is considered to be excessive. Annual Bonus is paid 50% in cash and 50% deferred to shares for a three year period and is in line with Best Practice. Concerns are raised by the LTIP award, since it is based on the achievement of EPS and relative TSR targets. The absence of Non-financial parameters to assess Executives' long-term performance is considered contrary to best practice as such factors are generally beyond an individual director's control. Non-financial parameters allow the remuneration policy to focus on the operational performance of the business as a whole and the individual roles of each of the senior executives in achieving that performance. The vesting period is three-years which is not considered sufficiently long-term, however a two year holding period apply which is welcomed. Malus and clawback provisions apply to all variable pay. There is an 'exceptional' maximum level of variable remuneration which may be awarded on recruitment of directors. This is not considered appropriate. Upside discretion may be exercised by the remuneration committee as it has the discretion to disapply time pro-rata vesting for those deemed 'good leavers' and also on a change of control.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

18. Re-appoint Ernst & Young LLP as auditors of the Company
EY proposed. Non-audit fees represented 7.69% of audit fees during the year under review and 6.45% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

12. Approve Remuneration Policy

Overall policy disclosure is adequate. Maximum potential benefits and maximum salary increases are disclosed. For 2023, the total variable remuneration opportunity for the CEO will be 750% and for the CFO 500%, which are both excessive as they exceed 200%. Bonus deferral will be introduced for the annual incentive in 2023, however it will only apply when the shareholding guidelines have not been met; it is considered that 50% of annual bonus for all executives should be deferred for at least two years. The exceptional award limit under the LTIP for, among other things, recruitment purposes is not considered acceptable as it could lead to exceptional recruitment awards in excess to the normal payment levels. ESG metrics will be introduced into the performance framework for the LTIP for 2023. The vesting period is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term, however, a two-year holding period apply which is welcomed. Malus and clawback provisions apply for all variable pay.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

13. Approve the Remuneration Report

All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The CEO salary is in line with the workforce. However, the CEO's salary is in the upper quartile of the Company's comparator group, which raises concerns for potential excessiveness. Total variable pay for the year under review was 152% of the salary, which consisted only of the Annual Bonus, as no LTIP vested. However, the company awarded a Co-investment award to the CEO of 374.7% of the salary so the overall variable pay is 526.7% of the salary and is considered excessive. The ratio of CEO pay compared to average employee pay is not acceptable at 43:1. PIRC consider adequate a ratio up to 20:1. There were no payments for loss of office made to or agreed for Directors in 2022.

0010. Approve Financial Statements
The financial statements were made available sufficiently before the meeting and has been audited and certified. However, there are concerns surrounding the sustainability policies and practice at the company and the lack of board level accountability for sustainability issues. The company sets itself as leading refining company with 60 years of history and does not clarify how this will be impacted by or will contribute to the energy transition. The board includes a number of executives and family members above practice in this market. The CEO is part of the executive board of the former petroleum association, now called 'energy union for mobility', which considers only new fuels as part of the mobility transitions, excluding electricity and mentions carbon capture as under study for refineries and not clarifying how net zero would be reached without a decided curb of emissions and not simply storing the CO2 produced in the industrial process.

On aggregate, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. These concerns should have been addressed in the annual report submitted to shareholders, however the annual report fails to address these concerns adequately and therefore this resolution cannot be supported.

It is regrettable that the Company bundled these items, however it is common practice in this market. Directors and Fiscal Council receive only fixed fees. For Management, it is proposed to cap remuneration at BRL 87,1 million. Variable remuneration for executives would correspond to up to 370% of the fixed pay, which is deemed excessive. 3. Approve Remuneration Policy
Potential variable pay could reach 350% of the salary for the CEO and 300% of the salary for the CFO, which is higher than the proposed limit of 200% and considered excessive. Any bonus above 60% of the maximum is deferred to shares for a three-year period; however, it is considered best practice that 50% of the bonus to deferred to shares. For 2023, the remuneration policy will include a ESG target for the LTIP based on absolute reduction in Scope 1 and 2 emissions, which is welcomed. The EPS figure used as the performance condition for the LTIP is "adjusted" EPS. PIRC considers that adjustments to EPS for remuneration purposes are inappropriate as these adjustments often take account of, say, restructuring costs or impairment charges. These are real costs which are born by shareholders but which, in the case of executive remuneration, management are not held responsible for. Vesting period is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term, however a two-year holding period apply which is welcomed. Malus and claw back provisions apply for all the variable pay.

All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The CEO salary increase is in line with the workforce average. The CEO's salary is in the lower quartile of the peer comparator group. The CEO's variable pay for the year under review is approximately 87% of base salary, which is lower than 200% and is acceptable. The ratio of CEO pay compared to average employee pay is not considered appropriate at 24:1. PIRC consider appropriate a ratio of up to 20:1

13. Re-appoint Deloitte the Auditors
Deloitte proposed. There were no non-audit fees during the year under review and non-audit fees represented 1.48% of audit fees on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

19. Issue Shares for Cash for the Purpose of Financing an Acquisition or Other Capital Investment
The Board is seeking approval to issue up to an additional 10% of the Company's issued share capital for cash for use only in connection with an acquisition or a specified capital investment. Such proposal is not supported. Best practice would be to seek a specific authority from shareholders in relation to a specific transaction if such situation arises. As this is not the case, an oppose vote is therefore recommended.

22. Meeting Notification-related Proposal
It is proposed that a general meeting of the Company other than an annual general meeting may be called on not less than 14 clear days' notice.
It is considered that all companies should aim to provide at least 20 working days notice for general meetings in order to give shareholders sufficient time to consider what are often complex issues. However, the proposed change is permissible by the Companies Act. Nevertheless, it is noted that the corresponding resolution received significant opposition at the previous AGM and the company does not appear to have disclosed steps taken to address the issue with shareholders. As such, abstention is recommended.

11. Approve Remuneration Policy
It is proposed to approve the maximum compensation for Directors, Management and Fiscal Council for next year. It is regrettable that the Company bundled these items, however it is common practice in this market. The amount proposed under this resolution is not the actual remuneration but the global remuneration cap, and includes fixed salaries and short term incentives.
Directors and Fiscal Council receive only fixed fees. For Management, it is proposed to cap remuneration at BRL 43,1 million. Variable remuneration for executives would correspond to up to 399% of the fixed pay, which is deemed excessive. The Company offers also pension contributions up to xxx% of the total annual remuneration of Executives at the Company. In addition, there is lack of disclosure with respect of targets and measurable criteria for variable remuneration, which prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment. Opposition is recommended.

4. Appoint the Auditors: KPMG

15. Approve the Remuneration Report
It is proposed to approve the implementation of the remuneration policy. The payout is in line with best practice, under 200% of the fixed salary. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. In addition, there are no claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration component which makes it unlikely that shareholders will be able to reclaim any variable remuneration unfairly paid out. On this basis, opposition is recommended.

ABBOTT LABORATORIES AGM - 28-04-2023

1.04. Re-elect Robert B. Ford - Chair & Chief Executive
Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal.
Also, there are recent allegations of product safety issues affecting the company, and while no wrongdoing has yet been identified, there are concerns about the potential legal and reputational implications of this upon the company.
Additionally, during the year under review, the company has been fined for misleading advertisement, and while the full impact of this decision is yet to be ascertained, there are concerns about the reputational and legal implications of this on the company. Owing to this, it is recommended to oppose the CEO.

1.08. Re-elect Nancy McKinstry - Non-Executive Director
Non-Executive Director, Chair of the Audit Committee. Not considered independent due to tenure of over nine years. It is considered that audit committees should be comprised exclusively of independent members, including the chair. Also, at the company, there is no external whistle-blowing hotline. This suggests that such concerns that should be raised by a whistle-blower are dealt with internally, which may increase the risk of such issues not being followed up or escalating to a level where the higher was the level of the misconduct, the more likely is the issue to be concealed. On this basis, and on the potential unforeseeable consequences for the company, opposition is recommended to the re-election of the chair of the audit committee, who is considered to be accountable for the concerns with the whistle-blowing reporting structure.

All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. Increase in CEO salary is in line with the rest Company. The CEO's salary is in the upper quartile of the comparator group, raising concerns about potential excessiveness. In regards to the Statutory Audit Board: Maria José Martins Lourenço da Fonseca (Chair); Daniel Bessa Fernandes Coelho, Manuel Heleno Sismeiro and Sara Manuel Carvalho Teixeira Mendes (alternate). It is proposed to issue non-convertible bonds for private placement. Although there is no indication that these instruments will be convertible into shares, and therefore there is no risk of unexpected dilution of existing shareholders, it is considered that authorities for private placement should be duly justified, namely regarding the rationale and the beneficiary of the placement. Proposed authorization that companies controlled by the Company can purchase up to 10% of the Company's share capital over the next 18 months, under the terms of number 2 of Article 325-B of the Company Law.
Cross ownership has some positive features, however it is considered that it would stagnate the use of capital by preventing reallocation. As a result, the Company may be less able to respond to downturns in the short term. Cross share ownership can also serve to entrench underperforming management and can lead to potential conflicts of interest. Oppositions is recommended.

10. Appoint the Auditors
P/F Januar proposed. Non-audit fees represented 27.09% of audit fees during the year under review and 29.66% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees raises some concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than ten years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

11. Approve Remuneration Policy
It is proposed to approve the remuneration policy. Variable remuneration appears to be consistently capped, and the payout is in line with best practice. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets for the performance criteria of its variable remuneration component, which as a consequence may lead to overpayment against underperformance. In addition, there are no claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration component which makes it unlikely that shareholders will be able to reclaim any variable remuneration unfairly paid out. On these grounds, opposition is recommended.

AMBEV SA COM AGM - 28-04-2023

1. Approve Financial Statements
Disclosure is acceptable and the report was made available sufficiently before the meeting. However, The Company has not disclosed the fees paid to the auditors for the year under review, and what non-audit services have been provided, if any. Under Brazilian legislation, companies are not required in their financial statements to disclose the amount paid for the External Audit except where additional services have been engaged and the value of such services exceeds 5% of the total amount paid to the external auditor. Nevertheless, it is considered that companies should go beyond minimum regulatory requirements. On this ground, opposition is recommended.

It is proposed to authorise the Board to purchase Company's shares for 18 months. 0050. Approve the Remuneration Report
It is proposed to approve the implementation of the remuneration policy. The payout is in line with best practice, being under 200% of the fixed salary. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. On balance, abstention is recommended.

0060. Approve the 2023 Stock Grant Plan
The Board proposes the approval of a new long-term incentive plan. Under the plan, the CEO and other executives will be awarded rights to shares, a portion (or all) of which will vest depending on the achievement of some performance criteria. At this time, it seems that this plan will not be based on any performance criteria but only on the beneficiaries continued employment. As a result, they may receive bonuses unrelated to their performance or even the performance of the Company as a whole, which is considered a serious frustration of shareholder accountability.
LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

0100. Approve Fees Payable to the Board of Directors
No proposal is available at the present time. As per market practice, the proposed remuneration is likely to be made available only at the meeting.

5. Accept Report on Share Repurchase, Set Maximum Amount of Share Repurchase
Report available. However, it is proposed to fix the maximum amount available to directors, for the purpose of buying shares on the market. Although this is technically not an authority to repurchase shares, shareholders in Mexico do not approve individual authorities to repurchase shares. As such, identifying the total amount which can be used for repurchasing shares is considered an indirect authority to buy back shares on the market. 9. Issue Convertible Bonds
It is proposed to issue non-convertible bonds for private placement. Although there is no indication that these instruments will be convertible into shares, and therefore there is no risk of unexpected dilution of existing shareholders, it is considered that authorities for private placement should be duly justified, namely regarding the rationale and the beneficiary of the placement. In lack of it, opposition is recommended.

10. Authorise the Board to Waive Pre-emptive Rights of Convertible Bonds

12.3A. Authorise Share Repurchase
It is proposed to fix the maximum amount available to directors, for the purpose of buying shares on the market. Although this is technically not an authority to repurchase shares, shareholders in Mexico do not approve individual authorities to repurchase shares. As such, identifying the total amount which can be used for repurchasing shares is considered an indirect authority to buy back shares on the market. These resolutions will not be supported unless the Board has set forth a clear, cogent and compelling case demonstrating how the authority would benefit long-term shareholders. As no clear justification was provided by the Board, an oppose vote is recommended.

10. Approve Maximum Remuneration
It is proposed to approve the maximum compensation for Directors, Management and Fiscal Council for next year. It is regrettable that the Company bundled these items, however it is common practice in this market. The amount proposed under this resolution is not the actual remuneration but the global remuneration cap, and includes fixed salaries and short term incentives.
Directors and Fiscal Council receive only fixed fees. For Management, it is proposed to cap remuneration at BRL 8 million. Variable remuneration for executives would correspond to up to 107% of the fixed pay. There is lack of disclosure with respect of targets and measurable criteria for variable remuneration, which prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment. Abstention is recommended.

14.A. Elect Fredrik Arp
Non-Executive Chair of the Board. The chair holds another chair position at a listed company, which raises time commitment concerns. It is considered that the chair should be able to wholly dedicate their time to the company in times of company crisis. The COVID pandemic has shown that there are times when multiple unrelated companies will require the Chair's full attention in order to be able to handle times of crisis. It is considered that there is insufficient time to be able to effectively chair two or more companies at the same time. For this reason, abstention is recommened.

17. Approve the Remuneration Report
It is proposed to approve the implementation of the remuneration policy. There are concerns regarding excess as the total variable remuneration exceeded 200% of the salary. In addition, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. Furthermore, there are no claw back clauses in place, which is against best practices. Opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

18. Authorise Share Repurchase
It is proposed to authorise the Board to purchase Company's shares until next AGM. This resolution will not be supported unless the Board has set forth a clear, cogent and compelling case demonstrating how the authority would benefit long-term shareholders. As no clear justification was provided by the Board, an oppose vote is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

20.A. Approve New Long Term Incentive Plan
The Board proposes the approval of a new long-term incentive plan. Under the plan, the CEO and other executives will be awarded rights to shares, a portion (or all) of which will vest depending on the achievement of some performance criteria. The performance criteria is outlined as Accumulated EBITDA. Vesting period is three years and as such is considered to be short-term, while performance targets have not been fully disclosed in a quantified manner at this time.
LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

20.BII. Authorise Share Repurchase
It is proposed to authorise the Board to purchase Company's shares until next AGM. 20.C. Approve Business Transaction/Contract
The Board proposes for an Equity Swap Agreement with a Third Party. If the requirements of proposal 20B are not met, the Board proposes that the Third Party in question shall be entitled to acquire and transfer shares of Bravida to the participants of the LTIP.
Such proposals are considered on the basis of whether they are deemed fair, whether they have been adequately explained, and whether there is sufficient independent oversight of the recommended proposal. It is considered that the Company has disclosed insufficient details of the transaction. There is insufficient independence on the Board. This is considered to be a potential risk for the decision not to be taken with appropriate independence and objectivity. Abstention is recommended.

ALTRI SGPS SA AGM - 28-04-2023

3. Shareholder Resolution: Discharge the Board of Directors, Management and Auditors
Acionista Promendo Investimentos, S.A, a company shareholder, proposes to discharge the Board of Directors, Management and Auditors. No evidence of wrongdoing from the auditors has been identified at this point. However, discharging the auditors may prevent shareholders from potential lawsuits in the future.

5. Shareholder Resolution: Slate Election of Delegate of General Meeting, Board of Directors, Fiscal Council and Remuneration Committee
A group of shareholders, Actium Capital and Caderno Azul SA; proposes a slate election of delegate of General Meeting, Board of Directors, Fiscal Council and Remuneration Committee. Additionally, it proposes that it be resolved to set the bond of the members of the Board of Directors and of the Supervisory Board to be elected at EUR 250,000.00, constituted by any means permitted by law, and that the members of the Board of Directors to be elected be authorised to hold, for their own account or on behalf of third parties, management positions or other duties in companies with which ALTRI is in a group or control relationship, or in companies in a group or control relationship with them, under the terms and for the purposes of the provisions of article 21 of the Portuguese Securities Code. No limits apply to access to information under the terms and for the purposes of paragraph 4 of Article 398 of the Companies Code.
In regard to the board directors, although slate elections are not considered to be best practice, they are common in this market. There is insufficient independent representation on the Board after the meeting as resulting from this slate of candidates. In addition, with this resolution, the board is seeking authority that members and other executives of the company may participate in boards and/or in the managements of competing companies . This authority is not sought for defined appointments. As a consequence, if approved, this authority may lead to potential time commitment concerns. In addition, an excessive number positions within the same company may develop excessive familiarity and trust, which would eventually hinder an effective independent oversight by directors (while there is already insufficient independent representation on the board).
On these grounds, an oppose vote is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

7. Approve Remuneration Policy
It is proposed to approve the remuneration policy. Variable remuneration appears to be consistently capped, and the payout is in line with best practice. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets for the performance criteria of its variable remuneration component, which as a consequence may lead to overpayment against underperformance. In addition, there are no claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration component which makes it unlikely that shareholders will be able to reclaim any variable remuneration unfairly paid out. On these grounds, opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

8. Authorise Share Repurchase

2A. Re-elect Ian Macfarlane - Non-Executive Director
Independent Non-Executive Director.
Member of the Sustainability Committee. Despite having some climate targets, the company has neither a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 or an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change neither having an adequate short term target nor a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors. The Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. Executive Chair and former CEO of the Company. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that the Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Holding an executive position is incompatible with this and a vote to Oppose is recommended.

IOCHPE-MAXION SA AGM - 28-04-2023

1. Approve Financial Statements
Disclosure is acceptable and the report was made available sufficiently before the meeting. However, The Company has not disclosed the fees paid to the auditors for the year under review, and what non-audit services have been provided, if any. Under Brazilian legislation, companies are not required in their financial statements to disclose the amount paid for the External Audit except where additional services have been engaged and the value of such services exceeds 5% of the total amount paid to the external auditor. Nevertheless, it is considered that companies should go beyond minimum regulatory requirements. Not disclosing the fees paid to the auditors is considered to be a serious breach of shareholder accountability, as it is impossible to assess the existence of potential conflicts of interest that would hinder the independence of the auditor. On this ground, opposition is recommended.

4. Elect Board: Slate Election
Proposal to elect the Board with a bundled election. Although slate elections are not considered to be best practice, they are common in this market. There is insufficient independent representation on the Board after the meeting as resulting from this slate of candidates.

5. In Case One of the Nominees Leaves the Board of Directors Slate Due to a Separate Minority Election, as Allowed Under Articles 161 and 240 of the Brazilian Corporate Law, May Your Votes Still Be Counted for the Proposed Slate?
It is proposed to count shareholders' vote on the slate, in case one of the candidates on the slate is no longer part of it. At this time, no changes have been communicated and abstention is recommended.

Vote Cast: Abstain

6. In Case Cumulative Voting Is Adopted, Do You Wish to Equally Distribute Your Votes Amongst the Nominees below?
It is proposed to equally distribute votes among candidates in the slate, in case cumulative voting is adopted. Based on the profiles of the candidates and the overall independence of the board, it is considered that not all of the candidates should be supported equally.

9. Approve Maximum Remuneration
It is proposed to approve the maximum compensation for Directors, Management and Fiscal Council for next year. It is regrettable that the Company bundled these items, however it is common practice in this market. The amount proposed under this resolution is not the actual remuneration but the global remuneration cap, and includes fixed salaries and short term incentives.
Directors and Fiscal Council receive only fixed fees. For Management, it is proposed to cap remuneration at BRL 20,5 million. Variable remuneration for executives would correspond to up to 166% of the fixed pay. There is lack of disclosure with respect of targets and measurable criteria for variable remuneration, which prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment. Abstention is recommended.

BELLEVUE HEALTHCARE TRUST PLC AGM - 28-04-2023

8. Re-appoint Ernst & Young LLP as auditors to the Company
EY proposed. No non-audit fees were paid to the auditors in the past three years. This approach is commended. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).
The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

1. Receive the Annual Report
The annual report was made available sufficiently before the meeting and has been audited and certified. However, there are concerns surrounding the sustainability policies and practice at the company. Therefore, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. These concerns should have been addressed in the annual report submitted to shareholders, however the annual report fails to address these concerns adequately and therefore this resolution cannot be supported.

3. Re-appoint PwC as the Auditors
PwC proposed. There were no non-audit fees during the year under review and non-audit fees represented 2.02% of audit fees on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

8. Re-elect Said Darwazah - Chair & Chief Executive
Chair and interim CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal. In addition, as there is no single Board committee dedicated to sustainability, the Chair of the Board is considered accountable for the Company's sustainability programme and the Company's sustainability policies and practice are not considered to be adequate in order to minimize material risks linked to sustainability. As such, opposition is recommended.

9. Re-elect Mazen Darwazah - Vice Chair (Executive)
Executive Vice Chair. Acceptable service contract provisions. However, it is noted that this director is also a member of the nomination committee. It is important that this committee be exclusively comprised of independent directors in order to ensure an equitable and unprejudiced appointment process. Membership of the committee by the executives raises serious concerns in this regard
In addition, at the previous AGM, the corresponding resolution received significant opposition (13.4%) and the company does not appear to have disclosed steps taken to address the issue with shareholders. Owing to the above, opposition is recommended. Non-Executive Director.

16. Approve the Remuneration Report

All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The CEO salary is in line with the workforce. The CEO salary is in the median of the comparator group. The total level of variable remuneration paid in the year under review is the equivalent of 222.25% of base salary and is considered excessive. The CEO/average employee pay ratio is excessive at 43:1. There were no payments for loss of office during the financial year.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

Vote Cast: Oppose Results: For: 97.2, Abstain: 0.0, Oppose/Withhold: 2.8,

17. Approve Remuneration Policy

Overall disclosure is acceptable. The total opportunity for variable remuneration is 500% of base salary, which is considered excessive. Half of any bonus will normally be deferred into an award over shares, typically for a period of three years, which is welcomed. There is a three year performance period for the long-term incentive, which is not considered sufficiently long-term; however, there is an additional two-year holding period, which is welcomed. The incentive scheme's performance measures are appropriately linked to non-financial KPIs. Dividend equivalents may accrue for both the annual bonus and the long-term incentive, which is not best practice. The maximum limit of variable remuneration can be increased to 650% of salary, in exceptional circumstances, solely for recruitment. The use of an exceptional limit for recruitment purposes is considered inappropriate.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. 19. Approve the Hikma Pharmaceuticals PLC Long-Term Incentive Plan 2023

It is proposed to approve the Hikma Pharmaceuticals PLC Long-Term Incentive Plan 2023. Under the plan, the Remuneration Committee may grant awards over Ordinary Shares to eligible employees, including Executive Directors, at the Committee's discretion. In normal circumstances, awards are limited to 300% of the individual's salary, which is considered excessive. Awards to Executive Directors are subject to performance conditions, which are at the Remuneration Committee's discretion and not disclosed at this time. Participants are eligible to receive dividend equivalents.
Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. On the other hand, executives are also among the beneficiaries: it is considered that support should not be given to stock or share option plans that do not lay out clear performance criteria, targets and conditions. On balance, opposition is recommended.

22. Issue Shares for Cash for the Purpose of Financing an Acquisition or Other Capital Investment

The Board is seeking approval to issue up to an additional 10% of the Company's issued share capital for cash for use only in connection with an acquisition or a specified capital investment. Such proposal is not supported. Best practice would be to seek a specific authority from shareholders in relation to a specific transaction if such situation arises. As this is not the case, an oppose vote is therefore recommended.

It is proposed that a general meeting of the Company other than an annual general meeting may be called on not less than 14 clear days' notice.

It is considered that all companies should aim to provide at least 20 working days notice for general meetings in order to give shareholders sufficient time to consider what are often complex issues. However, the proposed change is permissible by the Companies Act.

Nevertheless, at the previous AGM, the corresponding resolution received significant opposition (11.69%). As the company does not appear to have disclosed steps taken to address the issue with shareholders, opposition is recommended.

BBGI GLOBAL INFRASTRUCTURE S.A. AGM - 28-04-2023

10. Re-appointment of PricewaterhouseCoopers, société cooperative as independent auditor of the Company
PwC proposed. Non-audit fees represented 2.10% of audit fees during the year under review and 0.83% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. Authority is sought to repurchase up to 14.99% of the issued share capital. The authority would expire at the next AGM. Before considering approval of buybacks (and this should come from the board, not the manager), we would like to see a public statement:
- addressing how much of the discount can be explained by capitalisation of the costs (the Total Expense Ratio),
- setting out why the board believes that the performance of the incumbent management is not a contributory factor to the discount, and
- setting out how the current fee structure might be contributing to the discount, for example some investment companies cap management fees, or reduce the manager fee the larger the fund gets,
- setting out the effect of prior year buybacks to help determine the effectiveness of prior buybacks.

17. Approve Remuneration Policy And Other Terms of Employment For Executive Management
It is proposed to approve the remuneration policy. Variable remuneration appears to be consistently capped, and the payout is in line with best practice. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets for the performance criteria of its variable remuneration component, which as a consequence may lead to overpayment against underperformance. In addition, there are no claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration component which makes it unlikely that shareholders will be able to reclaim any variable remuneration unfairly paid out. On these grounds, opposition is recommended.

18. Decision to acquire own shares pursuant to the Securities Market Act
It is proposed to authorise the Board to purchase Company's shares until next AGM. 21b. Approve Deferred Share Bonus Plan for Key Employees (IP 2022)
It is proposed to approve a restricted share plan for key employees and corporate officers for up to 100% of the share capital in aggregate. The Board would receive the authority to set beneficiaries and other conditions. After allotment, 60 % of the performance shares will be received in the first half of 2024 and payment of deferred cash will be made in 2027, after a five-year deferral period, which is considered to be sufficiently long term. The Company states that exercise of shares will be based on targets, which have not been disclosed.
LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

21c. Approve Equity Plan Financing
The Board requests authority to repurchase and re-issue the shares to participants in the EKEN Programme and the Individual Performance Plan. This is considered to be an enabling resolution to resolutions 21a and 21b. Due to concerns over resolution 21b, opposition is recommended.

23. Shareholder Resolution: Bank's IT management
Proponent's argument: Shareholder Carl Axel Bruno proposes that the company changes the mainframe software, so that only the Bank has the opportunity to start a second process as long as the Bank does not know who is starting a second process.
Company's response: The board recommends a vote against this proposal. "The Bank constantly monitors developments within cyber-threats and fraud, as well as technical and societal developments, to ensure that the Bank's security solutions fulfil security requirements, availability requirements, etc. In the Bank's assessment, a correction or adjustment of the software in Handelsbanken's central computers such as the shareholder is requesting would be neither correct nor necessary."
PIRC analysis: Sufficient information regarding the rationale, the scope or the goal of the proposal was disclosed by the shareholder, however it is not considered to be the company's responsibility whether users would keep their PIN code safe. Opposition is recommended.

25. Shareholder Resolution: establishment of a Swedish/Danish chamber of commerce with office in Landskrona
Proponent's argument: Shareholder Tommy Jonasson proposed that the Board of Directors be instructed to participate in the formation of an integration institute with operations in the Öresund region (Landskrona - Copenhagen) and to set aside SEK 10,000,000 (ten million) of the profit for the year.
PIRC analysis: While no statement in response from the company has been made a available at this time, the rationale, the goal of the proposal was disclosed by the shareholder, however, it is not considered to be of responsibility of the board to instruct the government to create chambers of commerce. Writing to the government is lobbying practice and there is a risk of potential governance issues. Opposition is recommended

24. Shareholder Resolution: allocation of funds for a study on the legal certainty for bank customers with guardians, trustees, etc

Proponent's argument: The shareholder Tommy Jonasson proposes that the Annual General Meeting resolves to allocate an appropriate amount – SEK 5,000,000 five million – for the implementation of a study on the legal certainty of bank customers with guardians, trustees and other types of representatives (liquidators, official receiver etc.). "Sometimes - perhaps often – it is about language misunderstanding. The principal, who is an immigrant, Afghan, etc., does not understand Swedish well enough, and of course not the legal terminology. We see the problems, now in our immediate area, with Brexit. Even English is a problem that I personally face. One problem that has been brought to my attention is that principals do not even receive bank statements from their respective banks. Trying to understand government decisions creates a lot of frustration in the language misunderstanding society."

Company's response: No response has been made available at this time. Language barrier does not seem the actual purpose of this proposal, rather adding a scrutiny on those foreign individuals who, by law, may not be entitled to open a bank account without a trustee or other types of representatives. It is considered that the law already regulates this process and this proposal be redundant.

ELI LILLY AND COMPANY AGM - 01-05-2023

10. Shareholder Resolution: Report on Risks of Supporting Abortion

Proponent's argument: National Center for Public Policy Research request the Company issue a public report prior to December 31, 2023, omitting confidential and privileged information and at a reasonable expense, detailing the known and reasonably foreseeable risks and costs to the Company caused by opposing or otherwise altering Company policy in response to enacted or proposed state policies regulating abortion, and detailing any strategies beyond litigation and legal compliance that the Company may deploy to minimize or mitigate these risks. "In spite of making [...] statements and policy changes that demonstrate a clear pro-abortion stance, the Company criticized state officials for taking a stance on such a controversial issue. Indeed, the Company claimed to recognize abortion as a "divisive and deeply personal issue with no clear consensus among the citizens of Indiana," but then itself went on to take a position through its condemnation. "Despite this lack of agreement, Indiana has opted to quickly adopt one of the most restrictive anti-abortion laws in the United States," the Company stated.18 We agree with the Company that abortion is a "divisive and deeply personal issue." Views on the topic are often rooted in an individual's religious or other core belief system, making taking a position on it a potential reputational, legal, and financial liability for a company-yet Eli Lilly has insisted on doing just that. By criticizing laws that restrict abortion and implementing a benefit to pay for abortion access, the Company makes clear its opposition to pro-life legislation that limit abortion. This positioning is particularly troubling considering the emphasis the Company has placed on so-called "Diversity & Inclusion." The Company claims that embracing differences drives its business success,19 but apparently that embrace of diversity ends at diversity of thought, opinion, and religious convictions."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "Workforce management is a complicated topic that is core to management's ability to run the business. Determining health benefits such as employee leave and insurance coverage for a multitude of issues is informed by a number of factors such as local market data, employee input, and financial affordability. The Company must consider our benefit offerings with our global workforce in mind where roughly 55 percent of our full-time workforce works outside of the United States and benefit packages are developed at the individual country level. In the U.S., nearly 40 percent of our workforce lives outside of the state of Indiana, which is also an important consideration for benefits packages being developed for our U.S. employees. We believe the healthcare coverage options offered to our employees are competitive in the markets in which we operate. We review benefit offerings frequently for compliance with applicable law and to be responsive to the needs of our current employees as well as those we are seeking to recruit."

PIRC analysis: Social issues have caught momentum for investors since the COVID-19 pandemic has become a global health crisis, where women have suffered a higher toll, in their ability to conciliate work with family, access to work or even return to work after the pandemic. More specifically on reproductive health, the UN High Commissioner for Human rights stated that human rights bodies have characterized restrictive abortion laws as a form of discrimination against women, and that treaty body jurisprudence has indicated that denying women access to abortion can amount to violations of the rights to health, privacy and, in certain cases, the right to be free from cruel, inhumane and degrading treatment (updated in 2020). It is considered that this report on such practices associated with business activities and with a direct impact on the company's very workforce composition is in shareholders' interests both as a means of informing shareholders of potential risks and opportunities faced by the company. On the contrary, this resolution appears to be filed by a right-wing policy think tanks as a spoiler resolution to prevent other shareholders from filing resolutions regarding the company's diversity and focuses on diversity analysis with the clear intent to ensure that conservative views are represented on the board as well as so-called liberal perspectives. In addition, its focus appears to be flawed and artificially focusing on the short-term risks, while deliberately ignoring the long-term impacts from effective diversity and inclusion at the company. A vote against the resolution is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose Results: For: 96.8, Abstain: 0.2, Oppose/Withhold: 3.0,

6. Shareholder Resolution: Workplace Non-Discrimination Audit
Proponent's argument: National Center for Public Policy Research request that the Board of Directors commission an audit analyzing the impacts of the Company's Diversity, Equity & Inclusion policies on civil rights, non-discrimination and returns to merit, and the impacts of those issues on the Company's business. "Under the guise of ESG, many companies - including Bank of America, American Express, Verizon, Pfizer, CVS and BMS itself2 - have adopted DEI programs, trainings and officers that seek to establish racial and social "equity." But in practice, what "equity" really means is the distribution of pay and authority on the basis of race, sex, orientation and ethnicity rather than by merit. Where adopted, such programs have raised significant objections, including the concern that the programs and practices themselves are deeply racist, sexist, otherwise discriminatory and potentially in violation of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. And that by devaluing merit, corporations have sacrificed employee competence, moral and productivity to the altar of "diversity." These practices create massive reputational, legal and financial risk. If the Company is, in the name of so-called "equity," committing illegal or unconscionable discrimination against employees deemed "non-diverse," then the Company will suffer in myriad ways - all of them both unforgivable and avoidable."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "The proponent mischaracterizes the Company's Inclusion & Diversity Goals and Health Equity Commitments and the means by which it seeks to achieve them by suggesting that the Company's policies are discriminatory. The opposite is true. Our culture of inclusion enables us to create a work environment where all are free to fully contribute and reach their maximum potential in a workplace that is respectful, welcoming to all individuals and free from harassment and discrimination. Our employees as well as our vendors, partners and independent contractors have an impact on our Equal Employment Opportunity ("EEO") efforts and share in the responsibility to uphold the legal requirements of EEO policies." "
PIRC analysis: The potential benefits of staff diversity lie in widening the perspectives on human resources brought to bear on decision-making, avoiding too great a similarity of attitude and helping companies understand their workforces as a kaleidoscope of customers, marketplace, supply chain and society as a whole. Disclosure surrounding the company's staff composition allows shareholders to consider diversity in the context of the long-term interests of the company, including the ability to attract and retain key talent. Disclosure of a policy to improve diversity and goals that have been set to meet this policy also reassures shareholders that a diverse board is not just an aspiration but a goal. However, this resolution appears to be filed by a right-wing policy think tanks as a spoiler resolution to prevent other shareholders from filing resolutions regarding the company's diversity and focuses on ideological diversity with the clear intent to ensure that conservative views are represented on the board as well as so-called liberal perspectives. Given the diversity that already exists on company's staff, a vote against the resolution is recommended.

I. Approve Consolidated Financial Statements
The financial statements were made available sufficiently before the meeting and has been audited and certified. However, there are serious concerns surrounding the board-level governance of sustainability issues, policies and practice. As such, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. These concerns should have been addressed in the financial statements submitted to shareholders, but the financial statements fail to address these concerns and it is recommended to oppose this resolution.
Despite having some climate targets, the company does not have both a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 and an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change not having both adequate short term target and a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors. As such, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. These concerns should have been addressed in the financial statements submitted to shareholders, but the financial statements fail to address these concerns and it is recommended to oppose this resolution.

V. Approve the Remuneration Report
It is proposed to approve the implementation of the remuneration policy. There are concerns regarding excess as the total variable remuneration exceeded 200% of the salary. The Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. However, opposition is recommended based on excessive remuneration.

Holding an executive position is incompatible with this and a vote to Oppose is recommended.

XV. Approve New Long Term Incentive Plan (Executive Office PSU Plan)
The Board proposes the approval of a new long-term incentive plan. Under the plan, the CEO and other executives will be awarded rights to shares, a portion (or all) of which will vest depending on the achievement of some performance criteria. Vesting period is three years and as such is considered to be short-term, while performance targets have not been fully disclosed in a quantified manner at this time.
LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

Executive Chair. Not considered independent owing to a tenure of over nine years. Additionally, she is considered to be connected with a significant shareholder: Melker Schörling AB. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that the Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. As the Chair of the Sustainability Committee is not up for election, the Chair of the Board is considered accountable for the Company's sustainability programme. The Company's sustainability policies and practice are not considered adequate to minimise the material risks linked to sustainability. On balance, a vote to oppose is recommended. It is also noted the director has time commitments, but attended all board and committee meetings this year.

On this basis, opposition is recommended.

2. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The increase in CEO salary (3.5%), is considered in line with the rest of the company (5.7 %). The CEO salary is in the lower quartile of the competitor group. Total realized pay for the year under review is not considered excessive at approximately 157.7% of the salary. The ratio of pay between CEO and the average employee is not considered acceptable at 55:1.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of ‘alignment’ with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of ‘alignment’ which can actually create a competing set of director ‘duties’.

5. Re-elect Stephen Daintith - Executive Director
Executive Director. Acceptable service contract provisions. 19. Approve New 2023 Long Term Incentive Plan
The Board proposes the approval of a new long-term incentive plan. Under the plan, the CEO and other executives will be awarded rights to shares, a portion (or all) of which will vest depending on the achievement of some performance criteria. Vesting period is three years and as such is considered to be short-term, while performance targets have not been fully disclosed in a quantified manner at this time.
LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

20. Authorise Share Repurchase
It is proposed to authorise the Board to purchase Company's shares until next AGM. This resolution will not be supported unless the Board has set forth a clear, cogent and compelling case demonstrating how the authority would benefit long-term shareholders. As no clear justification was provided by the Board, an oppose vote is recommended.

RAYTHEON TECHNOLOGIES CORP AGM - 02-05-2023

1d. Elect Gregory J. Hayes - Chair & Chief Executive
Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal.
During the year under review, the company has been accused of anti-competitive practices. On 11 January 2022, Raytheon Technologies Corp. unit Pratt & Whitney was hit with lawsuits from engineers allegedly compromised by their alleged "no poach" pact, according to which competing companies would refrain from recruiting one another's engineers or other skilled workers. There are concerns over the potential impact of these allegations.
Despite having some climate targets, the company has neither a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 or an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change neither having an adequate short term target nor a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors. As such, an oppose vote is recommended.

20. Authorise the Board to Increase the Number of Securities Issued in case of Exceptional Demand
In addition to the share issuance authorities sought above, the Board requests shareholder authority for a capital increase of additional 15%, in case of exceptional demand.
A green shoe authorisation enables an authorization of additional shares in the event of exceptional public demand. In this case, the authorization would increase allow the placement of up to 15% additional new shares within a thirty day period at a price equal to that of the initial offer. There are concerns with such authorities as they may potentially represent a discount superior to the discount to which the initial authorisation is limited due to a potential rise in share price in the period between original issuance and secondary issuance. 8. Shareholder Resolution: Congruency Report on Net-Zero Emissions Policies

Proponent's argument: National Center for Public Policy Research request that PepsiCo publish an annual report, at reasonable expense, analyzing the congruency of the Company's in-house personnel, travel and related policies and corporate expenditures during the preceding year against publicly stated Company values and policies about the need to achieve net-zero carbon emissions as a company and worldwide. "Despite American companies engaging in public commitments to risky and costly political-schedule decarbonization, recent reports indicate that the very directors and executives who lead these engagements are not aligning their executive or personal practices with their public commitments. According to data from ISS Corporate Solutions, spending by U.S. companies on private jets for personal use by chief executives and chairs hit the highest level for a decade in 2021. The ISS study revealed that spending increased by 35 percent to nearly $34 million among S&P 500 companies in 2021, the highest since 2012.5 It estimates that on average, companies spent about $170,000 on private jets in 2021. At half a million dollars in 2021, PepsiCo's spending on private air travel far exceeded the average amount. In fact, according to ISS, PepsiCo's spending landed it within the top 15 of U.S. companies. This significant cost undermines the Company's public statements on addressing the issue of climate change that it deems so critical. The "rules for thee, but not for me" mentality has become pervasive throughout corporate c-suites. It has become vital that companies address and remove the inconsistencies between corporate positioning and executive behavior, and report to shareholders and to the public the workplace footprints of executives and directors at PepsiCo."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "We strive to operate our business in an efficient manner and to reduce our greenhouse gas (GHG) emissions across our value chain. We already provide transparent and stakeholder-centric reporting as we work towards achieving these ambitions, including reporting under the Carbon Disclosure Project and the Task Force on Climate-Related Financial Disclosures. The Board believes that the additional reporting called for in this proposal is neither necessary nor a good use of Company resources. Reducing greenhouse gas emissions is a critical part of our PepsiCo Positive (pep+) framework, a strategic end-to-end transformation with sustainability and human capital at the center of how we will create growth and value. Implementing solutions to address climate change is important to the future of our company, customers, consumers and our shared world. At PepsiCo, we're striving to achieve net-zero emissions by 2040. As an interim step, we're working to reduce absolute GHG emissions by more than 40% across our entire value chain by 2030. Our emissions target aligns to the Business Ambition for 1.5C pledge and has been approved by the Science Based Targets initiative."
PIRC analysis: The requested disclosure on the congruency of corporate expenditure with net zero ambitions appears to be a spoiler resolution to prevent other shareholders from filing resolutions regarding the company's alignment with net zero, or emission reduction targets, and focuses on executive behaviour with the clear intent to ensure that views against what the filers describe as "risky and costly political-schedule decarbonization" are represented within the company's political activities, as opposed to promoting accountability around the potential benefits of decarbonization and requesting transparency over the financial impact from non-traditionally financial issues, particularly the climate emergency, or avoid any suspicion and any damage that may cause to the company's reputation, or that the company may adopt a conduct different from what it has committed to. Opposition is recommended.

Such proposal is not supported as it is considered that the 5% limit sought under the general authority above is sufficient. Best practice

- addressing how much of the discount can be explained by capitalisation of the costs (the Total Expense Ratio),
- setting out why the board believes that the performance of the incumbent management is not a contributory factor to the discount, and
- setting out how the current fee structure might be contributing to the discount, for example some investment companies cap management fees, or reduce the manager fee the larger the fund gets,
- setting out the effect of prior year buybacks to help determine the effectiveness of prior buybacks.

2. Approve the Remuneration Report

All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. CEO salary is in line with the workforce. The CEO salary is at the upper quartile of the competitors group, which raises concerns over potential excessiveness. Total variable pay for the year under review is considered excessive at approximately 239.1% (Annual Bonus: 199.5% & MCIP: 39.6%) of salary. Furthermore, the CEO to average employee pay ratio currently stands at 113:1, a ratio of 20:1 is considered adequate.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of ‘alignment’ with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are

employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

3. Re-elect Nils Andersen - Chair (Non Executive)
Independent Non-Executive Chair. The chair holds another chair position at a listed company, which raises time commitment concerns. It is considered that the chair should be able to wholly dedicate their time to the company in times of company crisis. The COVID pandemic has shown that there are times when multiple unrelated companies will require the Chair's full attention in order to be able to handle times of crisis. It is considered that there is insufficient time to be able to effectively chair two or more companies at the same time.
Despite having some climate targets, the company does not have both a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 and an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change not having both adequate short term target and a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors. As such, an oppose vote is recommended.

Non-Executive Director. Not considered independent as the director is considered to be connected with a significant shareholder: he is Chief Executive and founding partner of Trian Fund Management, LP which held interests in approximately 1.5% of the company's share capital on his date of appointment. There is a sufficient independent representation on the Board. However, the director is a member of the Remuneration Committee, and it is considered that this committee should be composed of exclusively of independent members. Opposition is therefore recommended.

KPMG proposed. Non-audit fees represented 1.74% of audit fees during the year under review and 17.81% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).
The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The increase in CEO salary did not exceed the rest of the Company. The salary for the position of CEO is in the upper quartile of the Company's comparator group which raises concerns over the excessiveness of her pay. Total variable pay for the CEO was also excessive at 540% of salary, it is recommended that total variable pay should not exceed 200% of salary. CEO pay compared to average employee pay is not acceptable at 67:1; it is recommended that the ratio does not exceed 20:1.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). It is proposed a share matching plan.
The long-term variable remuneration program for employees within Investor, consisting of a Stock Matching Plan and a Performance-Based Share Program, has been approved by the AGM since 2006 and the long-term variable remuneration program for employees within Patricia Industries has been approved by the AGM since 2017.
Under the plan, the CEO and other executives will be awarded rights to receive shares in exchange for part of the reinvestment of their salary. The shares resulting from reinvestment will be matched by free shares awarded by the Company. While re-investment of the bonus in shares, or payment of part or all of the bonus in

4. Approve Enbridge's Shareholder Rights Plan
The board is seeking approval of the continuation of our shareholder rights plan with no material amendments under the terms of an agreement between Enbridge and CST Trust Company (the rights agent. Under the terms of the Plan, eight trading days after an acquisition of, or offer to acquire 20% or more of our-shares that is not by way of a permitted bid the rights separate from the Enbridge shares and shareholders can then exercise their rights and transfer or trade them separately. Any rights held by the bidder become void when a flip-in event occurs. While issuing rights is not initially dilutive, reported earnings per share on a fully diluted or non-diluted basis may be affected by a flip-in event. Rights holders who do not exercise their rights when a flip-in event occurs may suffer substantial dilution. The Board can in good faith waive the application of the rights plan to a particular flip-in event before the event happens; if the bid is made by way of a takeover bid circular to all shareholders. The Board can also amend the rights plan as long as they have been approved by a majority of shareholders at a special meeting. PIRC recognises that rights plans can offer significant shareholder protection but also that due to the difficulty of demonstrating that a Board has acted against its fiduciary responsibilities, there is a considerable risk of abuse. There is also the counter argument that the Shareholder Rights Plan may prevent mergers and help to entrench under-performing management. In addition, the Shareholder Rights Plan should be subject to a shareholder vote subsequent to their being triggered by the Board in order to ensure that their use is accountable to shareholders. Based on these concerns an oppose vote is recommended.

BARCLAYS PLC AGM - 03-05-2023

2. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The CEO salary is in line with the workforce, since for the year under review the CEO salary increased by 2% and the workforce salary increased by 7%. However, the CEO salary is in the upper quartile of the competitor group which raises concerns for potential excessiveness. Total variable pay for the year under review was not excessive, amounting to 70.4% (Annual Bonus: 70.4% & LTIP: 0%)of salary. The ratio of the CEO pay compared to average employee pay is not acceptable at 93:1. PIRC consider adequate a ratio of 20:1.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

3. Approve Remuneration Policy
Changes proposed: The only changes proposed are for simplifying the shareholders requirement: i) to align the definition of which shares count towards that requirement with market practice, which is simpler and provides a more consistent treatment during and after employment. Currently, shares from unvested deferred bonuses and unvested Long Term Incentive Plan (LTIP) awards do not count towards the shareholding requirement during employment, but do count towards post termination shareholding requirements (net of estimated taxes) provided there are no remaining performance conditions. In the new DRP those shares will count towards the requirement during employment, as well as post-termination and ii) For two years after stepping down as an Executive Director, they must maintain a shareholding equal to the number of shares required to be held immediately prior to stepping down as an Executive Director, or the actual number of shares held on stepping down if lower.
Total potential variable pay is at 233% for the CEO and 224% for the GFD and is considered slightly above the limit of 200% of the salary. Annual Bonus is deferred to shares, the deferral proportion and vesting profile will be structured so that, in combination with any LTIP award, the proportion of variable pay that is deferred is no less than that required by regulations (currently 60%).Performance measures for the Annual Bonus are financial (minimum 60%) , non-financial (25%) and individual personal objectives (15%). LTIP awards, performance measures will be minimum 70% financial metrics. Vesting period is three years after which there is further deferral of up to an additional 4 years, and an additional one-year holding period. Malus and clawback provisions apply for all variable pay.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).
The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

22. Issue Shares for Cash for the Purpose of Financing an Acquisition or Other Capital Investment
The Board is seeking approval to issue up to an additional 5% of the Company's issued share capital for cash for use only in connection with an acquisition or a specified capital investment. Such proposal is not supported as it is considered that the 5% limit sought under the general authority above is sufficient. Best practice would be to seek a specific authority from shareholders in relation to a specific transaction if such situation arises. As this is not the case, an oppose vote is therefore recommended.

23. Authorise Issue of Equity in Relation to the Issuance of Contingent Equity Conversion Notes
It is proposed to give the Directors the authority to allot ECNs, or shares issued upon conversion or exchange of ECNs, up to an aggregate nominal amount of £825,000,000 representing approximately 20.79% of the Company's issued ordinary share capital (excluding shares held in treasury) as at 13 March 2023. The Company explains that this resolution is a recurring resolution at its AGM and will be used to comply or maintain compliance with regulatory capital requirements or targets applicable to the Group.
The use of Contingent Convertible Securities or CoCos is not considered appropriate as they put investors at significant risk of dilution in the event that conversion occurs. CoCos are relatively new instruments and there are concerns that CoCos may create a situation which whilst converting some debt to equity actually disincentives equity investors from putting more new funds in to banks via rights issues, due to the dilutive effect of the conversion taking away much, or some, of the premium that would ordinarily accrue to shareholders. Recent events at Deutsche Bank has led to others voicing their concerns about the destabilizing effect of CoCos on both the CoCo price and the share price. Based on these concerns, an oppose vote is recommended.

Authority to allot ECNs, or shares issued upon conversion or exchange of ECNs, for cash up to an aggregate nominal amount of GBP 825,000,000, representing approximately 20.79% of the Company's issued ordinary share capital as at 13 March 2023. This authority is supplementary to Resolution 23, giving the company the additional flexibility to offer ECNs without first offering them to existing shareholders and will expire at next AGM. MALAYAN BANKING BHD EGM - 03-05-2023

1. Approve Employees' Share Grant Plan

Approval is sought for the Employees' Share Grant Plan (ESGP). The scheme expires in seven years.
There is no evidence the scheme is open to all employees. The Plan is proposed in additional to an existing one, which contravenes best practice as multiple plans should not be used for the purpose of simplification of the remuneration structure. It is noted that the amount of awards that may be granted under the scheme shall not exceed 3.5% of the Company's issued ordinary share capital. Maximum individual limits have not been provided which may allow for excessive grant to participants. The performance period may be set at three years, which is considered insufficiently long. The Company does not disclose any performance criteria or specific targets which deprives shareholders with the opportunity to assess whether they are considered challenging. The Remuneration Committee has an inappropriate level of discretion on how outstanding awards vest in the event of termination of employment or takeover. There is no evidence a clawback policy is in place. Given these concerns, opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

2. Approve Grant of Shares to Abdul Farid Alias Under the Proposed ESGP

Approval is sought to grant to the CEO of the Company awards under the ESGP up a maximum of 1,080,000 shares. Performance conditions and specific targets have not provided. As per Resolution 1, an oppose vote is recommended.

SAIPEM SPA AGM - 03-05-2023

0070. Approve Remuneration Policy

It is proposed to approve the remuneration policy with a binding vote. Variable remuneration appears to be consistently capped, although the pay-out may exceed 200% of the fixed remuneration for the highest paid director. The Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets for performance criteria for its variable remuneration component, which may lead to overpayment against underperformance. In addition, there are concerns with some of the performance criteria. For example, financial performance targets are adjusted to extraordinary expenses so-called "non recurring", including litigation expenses: it is considered that compliance and litigation costs should not be included in performance metrics, rather should be the core of a sustainable business. It is considered that executives should not be rewarded for not having incurred in litigations or compliance issues. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. Nevertheless, opposition is recommended based on potential excessive variable remuneration and absence of quantified targets.

Vote Cast: Oppose

0080. Approve the Remuneration Report

It is proposed to approve the implementation of the remuneration policy. The payout is in line with best practice, being under 200% of the fixed salary. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. On balance, abstention is recommended.

Vote Cast: Abstain

0090. Approve New New 2023-2025 Long-Term Variable Incentive Plan
The Board proposes the approval of a new executive incentive plan. Under the plan, participants will be allotted shares or rights to shares. Performance targets have not been fully quantified at this time, which makes an informed assessment impossible and may lead to (partial) payment against (partial) failure.
LTIP based schemes are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the Company (creating capital and - lawful - dividends). They act as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute Company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

0100. Authorisation to buy-back treasury shares for the 2023 allocation of the 2023-2025 Long-Term Variable Incentive Plan

RECKITT BENCKISER GROUP PLC AGM - 03-05-2023

2. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the single total remuneration are adequately disclosed. There was no salary increase for the CEO and a 5.4% increase for the CFO. Total variable pay for the year under review is highly excessive, amounting to 679.99% of salary for the CFO. It is recommended that total variable pay is limited to 200% of salary. The ratio of CEO pay compared to average employee pay is not acceptable at 67:1, it is recommended that the ratio does not exceed 20:1.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

17. Re-appoint KPMG LLP as Auditors
KPMG proposed. Non-audit fees represented 13.85% of audit fees during the year under review and 6.34% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

4. Authorise the Board to Fix Directors' Remuneration
No proposal is available at the present time. As per market practice the proposed remuneration is likely to be made available only at the meeting.

RWE AG AGM - 04-05-2023

4.1. Discharge members of the Supervisory Board: Dr. Werner Brandt (Chairman)
Standard proposal. Despite having some climate targets, the company does not have both a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 and an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change not having both adequate short term target and a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors. TRAVIS PERKINS PLC AGM - 04-05-2023

2. Approve the Remuneration Report

All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The highest paid director salary is in line with the workforce. The highest paid director salary is at the median quartile of the competitors group. The variable pay to the CEO during the year represents approximately 166.05% of his base salary, which is below the recommended limit of 200%. The ratio of CEO pay compared to average employee pay is not acceptable at 23:1. PIRC consider a ratio of 20:1 as appropriate.

PwC proposed. No non-audit fees were paid to the auditors in the past three years. This approach is commended.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).
The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

The Board is seeking approval to issue up to an additional 5% of the Company's issued share capital for cash for use only in connection with an acquisition or a specified capital investment. Such proposal is not supported as it is considered that the 5% limit sought under the general authority above is sufficient. The financial statements were made available sufficiently before the meeting and has been audited and certified. However, there are some concerns surrounding the board-level governance of sustainability issues, policies and practice. As such, given that the Company's sustainability policies and practice are not considered to be adequate in order to minimize material risks linked to sustainability. In addition, Mr. Roney is also chairing another company within the FTSE 350 index. It is considered that a chair cannot effectively represent two corporate cultures. The possibility of having to commit additional time to the role in times of crisis is ever present. Given this, a Chair should focus his attention onto the only one FTSE 350 Company. Overall opposition is recommended.

6. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The highest paid director salary is in the lower quartile of the comparator group. Total variable pay for the year did not exceed guidelines, amounting to 130.2% of salary (Annual Bonus: 48.5% & LTIP: 81.7%) for the CFO. The ratio of the CEO's pay to the average employee has been calculated at 20:1, which is not considered to be excessive
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

7. Approve Remuneration Policy
Total variable pay could potentially reach 350% of the salary for the CEO and 300% of the salary for the CFO which is above the recommended limit of 200% and is deemed excessive. Annual Bonus is paid in cash. An Executive Director is required to apply 30% of their annual bonus after statutory deductions for the purchase of shares in the Group until their shareholding is equivalent to at least 200% of basic salary. However, best practices proposed 50% of the annual Bonus to deferred to shares for a three years period which is not the case for the company. Performance measures are primarily financial but may also include an element for non-financial measures. LTIP award performance measures are EPS and TSR, there are no non-financial performance measures attached to the LTIP and so the focus of remuneration policy is not the operational performance of the business as a whole or the individual roles of each of the executives in achieving that performance. Instead, the focus of the remuneration policy is financial KPIs, which mainly include factors beyond an individual director's control. Vesting period is three-years which is not considered sufficiently long-term, however a two-year holding period apply which is welcomed.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Governance
The climate policy appears to be adequately linked to the governance of the company overall. The chair is indicated as being responsible for oversight of the climate strategy and members of the senior management have accrued significant experience in climate-related issues within the sector of the company.

There is adequate experience and knowledge of climate change on the board of directors, including at least one non-executive director with significant experience of decarbonisation measures from within the core sector of operations of the company.
The company has pledged to review or end membership of trade associations or industry environmental lobbying groups, where these pursue goals or advertise actions contrary to the company's climate strategy.
However, there is no evidence of adequate training and learning on the Board or senior management of climate-related issues, most relevantly decarbonization.
Disclosure
The company climate strategy for the overall required energy transition includes a defined timeline, by which progress in emission reductions can be measured.
The company's targets are in line with a plan to limit global warming to 1.5 degrees when compared to pre-industrial levels. This is considered to be best practice, and represents one of the more resilient scenarios.
The company has committed to net zero by 2050 but this commitment only extends to part of its Scope 1, Scope 2 and Scope 3 emissions. This is considered to be inconsistent with an adequate commitment to a full energy transition, as shareholders are unable to make an informed assessment on the material efforts to reduce emissions and increase the resilience of the company in the long term.
On this basis, a vote to oppose is recommended.

The maximum potential award under all incentive schemes for the CEO is 595% of salary which is considered excessive. Annual Bonus is paid two third in cash and one third is defer to shares for a three year period, this is not considered adequate, it would be preferable 50% of the bonus to deferred to shares in line with best practices. The performance share plan vesting period is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term however, a two year holding period applies which is welcomed. The performance metrics are not operating interdependently, such that vesting under the incentive plan is only possible where all threshold targets are met. For executive directors, employment contracts will generally be on terms that allow them to be terminated on up to 12 months' notice from either party or by way of payment of base salary in lieu of notice, at the Company's discretion. Neither notice nor a payment in lieu of notice will be given in the event of gross misconduct. Any termination payment made in connection with the departure of an executive director will be subject to approval by the Remuneration Committee, having regard to the terms of the service contract or other legal obligations and the specific circumstances of the termination holding period.

The ratio of CEO pay compared to average employee pay is unacceptable at 48:1; it is recommended that the ratio does not exceed 20:1.All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The CEO's salary was in the upper quartile of the comparator group, raising concerns about potential excessiveness.

21. Approve BAE Systems Long-term Incentive Plan 2023
It is proposed to approve the BAE Systems Long-term Incentive Plan 2023, under which employees and executive directors are eligible to participate at the discretion of the Remuneration Committee. Participants may be granted performance awards, market value options or restricted awards. Awards may be subject to performance conditions at the committee's discretion, however performance conditions have not been disclosed or quantified at this time. Dividend equivalents may be granted to participants, which is not best practice. Performance periods are at the discretion of the committee but expected to be three years, which is considered short term. Awards are limited to the following percentages of the participant's salary: Performance Awards 440%; Market Value Options 400%; and Restricted Awards 200%; and as such may be excessive.
Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. On the other hand, executives are also among the beneficiaries: it is considered that support should not be given to stock or share option plans that do not lay out clear performance criteria, targets and conditions. On balance, opposition is recommended.

1. Receive the Annual Report
The annual report was made available sufficiently before the meeting and has been audited and certified. However, there are concerns surrounding the sustainability policies and practice at the company. Therefore, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. These concerns should have been addressed in the annual report submitted to shareholders, however the annual report fails to address these concerns adequately and therefore this resolution cannot be supported.

2. Re-appoint PwC as the Auditors
PwC proposed. Non-audit fees represented 11.11% of audit fees during the year under review and 16.00% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).
The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

5. Re-elect Matt Shattock - Chair (Non Executive)
Independent Non-Executive Director. The chair holds another chair position at a listed company, which raises time commitment concerns. It is considered that the chair should be able to wholly dedicate their time to the company in times of company crisis. The COVID pandemic has shown that there are times when multiple unrelated companies will require the Chair's full attention in order to be able to handle times of crisis. It is considered that there is insufficient time to be able to effectively chair two or more companies at the same time. For this reason, abstention is recommened.

Chair of Audit Committee. In August 2022, U.S. District Judge Mitchell Goldberg ruled that Indivior Inc must face a lawsuit by 42 state attorneys general in which the company is accused of shielding its opioid addiction treatment Suboxone from generic competition. The company had previously switched the drug from tablet to sublingual film, claiming that there were safety concerns with the pill format. Judge Goldberg found that a reasonable jury could find the switch, which came as generic manufacturers had introduced competitor pills, was intended to extend the company's monopoly. States have said that the company's conduct have caused consumers to pay inflated prices amid an opioid epidemic. During the year under review, the company has been found fined for its accounting practices and, and while the full impact of this decision is yet to be ascertained, there are concerns about the financial or legal implications on the company. 2. Approve Remuneration Policy
Maximum potential awards under all incentive schemes are considered excessive at 415% for the CEO and 380% of the salary for the CFO. The performance metrics for both the Annual Bonus and the LTIP are not operating interdependently, such that vesting under the incentive plan is only possible where all threshold targets are met. In addition, There are no non-financial performance measures attached to the LTIP and so the focus of remuneration policy is not the operational performance of the business as a whole or the individual roles of each of the executives in achieving that performance. Instead, the focus of the remuneration policy is financial KPIs, which mainly include factors beyond an individual director's control. Performance period is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term, however, a two year holding period applies which is welcomed. Executive Director contracts are terminable by either party on twelve months' notice which is considered in line with best practice. A mitigation statement is made. Upside discretion may be exercised by the remuneration committee as under the LTIP rules, it has the discretion to disapply the application of performance conditions and/or time pro-rating for those deemed 'good leavers'.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports in the wider UK market, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

20. Meeting Notification-related Proposal
It is proposed that a general meeting of the Company other than an annual general meeting may be called on not less than 14 clear days' notice.
It is considered that all companies should aim to provide at least 20 working days notice for general meetings in order to give shareholders sufficient time to consider what are often complex issues. However, the proposed change is permissible by the Companies Act.
At the previous AGM, the corresponding resolution was met with significant opposition, and the company does not appear to have disclosed steps taken to address the issue with shareholders. As such, abstention is recommended.

TELUS CORPORATION AGM - 04-05-2023

2. Appoint the Auditors: Deloitte
Deloitte proposed. Non-audit fees represented 33.98% of audit fees during the year under review and 34.81% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees raises some concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than ten years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

3. Advisory Vote on Executive Compensation
The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment. The compensation rating is: ADB. Based on this rating, opposition is recommended.

4. Approval of an increase to the share reserve under TELUS' Restricted Share Unit Plan
The Board is seeking an approval to an increase of the maximum number of shares to be reserved for issuance from 20,000,000 shares to 49,000,000 shares for RSU Plan.
Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. On the other hand, executives are the beneficiaries: it is considered that support should not be given to stock or share option plans that do not lay out clear performance criteria, targets and conditions. On balance, opposition is recommended.

5. Approval of an increase to the share reserve under TELUS' Performance Share Unit Plan
The Board is seeking an approval to an increase of the maximum number of shares to be reserved for issuance from 20,000,000 shares to 49,000,000 shares for PSU Plan.
Performance measures have adequately been disclosed, however, not tied to ESG. Total variable remuneration exceeds 200% of base salary.
Additionally, LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

IMI PLC AGM - 04-05-2023

3. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The CEO salary is in the upper quartile of the competitor group which raises concerns over potential excessiveness. Variable remuneration paid to Mr. Roy Twite in the year under review amounts to 372% of base salary which is excessive. The CEO pay ratio compared to the average employee is considered excessive at 34:1.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

B. Issue Shares for Cash for the Purpose of Financing an Acquisition or Other Capital Investment
The Board is seeking approval to issue up to an additional 5% of the Company's issued share capital for cash for use only in connection with an acquisition or a specified capital investment. Such proposal is not supported as it is considered that the 5% limit sought under the general authority above is sufficient. Best practice would be to seek a specific authority from shareholders in relation to a specific transaction if such situation arises. As this is not the case, an oppose vote is therefore recommended.

5. Approve the Remuneration Report for Directors and Corporate Officers
It is proposed to approve the remuneration paid or due to Directors and Corporate Officers with a binding vote. There are concerns regarding excess as the total variable remuneration exceeded 200% of the salary. In addition, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. Furthermore, there are no claw back clauses in place, which is against best practices. Opposition is recommended.

7. Approve Remuneration Policy for the Chairman & Chief Executive Officer (1st January 2023 - 3rd May 2023)
It is proposed to approve the remuneration policy for the Chair & CEO. Variable remuneration appears to be consistently capped, although the payout may exceed 200% of fixed salary. In addition, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets for the performance criteria of its variable remuneration component, which as a consequence may lead to overpayment against underperformance. In addition, there are no claw-back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration component which makes it unlikely that shareholders will be able to reclaim any variable remuneration unfairly paid out. 17. Say on Climate
It is proposed to approve the Company Climate Strategy. There is adequate experience and knowledge of climate change on the board of directors, including at least one non-executive director with significant experience of decarbonisation measures from within the core sector of operations of the company.
There is evidence of adequate training and learning on the Board and senior management of climate-related issues.
The company's targets are in line with a plan to limit global warming to 1.5 degrees when compared to pre-industrial levels. This is considered to be best practice, and represents one of the more resilient scenarios.
However, there does not appear to be any individual accountability for the policy, and the policy does not list the chair as responsible for the climate strategy. Company management and the sustainability committee hold collective responsibility, which is considered insufficiently focussed for effective execution of policy and for overall accountability.
The company has not pledged to review or end membership of trade associations or industry environmental lobbying groups, where these pursue goals or advertise actions contrary to the company's climate strategy, which appears inconsistent with its goals and an obstacle to its effectiveness.
On balance, opposition is recommended.

The Board requests authority to approve a global authority for the issue of capital related securities without pre-emptive rights by private placement. The authorisation is valid up to 10% of the issued share capital over a period of 26 months. This authority is not requested in connection with a particular operation and has not been duly justified by the Company. Opposition is therefore recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose Results: For: 93.7, Abstain: 0.0, Oppose/Withhold: 6.3,

22. Authorise the Board to Increase the Number of Shares Issued in case of Exceptional Demand
In addition to the share issuance authorities sought above, the Board requests shareholder authority for a capital increase of additional 15%, in case of exceptional demand.

A green shoe authorisation enables an authorization of additional shares in the event of exceptional public demand. In this case, the authorization would increase allow the placement of up to 15% additional new shares within a thirty day period at a price equal to that of the initial offer. There are concerns with such authorities as they may potentially represent a discount superior to the discount to which the initial authorisation is limited due to a potential rise in share price in the period between original issuance and secondary issuance. Given the potential for inequitable treatment of shareholders, opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose Results: For: 85.3, Abstain: 0.5, Oppose/Withhold: 14.2,

23. Approve Issue of Shares for Contribution in Kind

Changes proposed: i) introduction of Restricted Share Awards (RSAs) under the Company's Restricted Share Plan in place of the LTIP and ii) strengthened post-employment shareholding guidance, with Executive Directors required to hold their full in-employment guideline for two years following cessation, in line with best practice.

Total variable pay could reach 237.5% of the salary for the CEO and 210% of the salary for the other Executives and is considered excessive since is higher than 200%. On the Annual Bonus one third of the Bonus could be deferred to shares for a three year period, this is not considered adequate, it would be preferable 50% of the Bonus to be paid in cash and 50% to defer to shares for at least three years. On the Restricted Share Award, no specific performance conditions are required for the vesting of RSAs, although the awards will normally be subject to one or more underpin conditions over the vesting period. Should any of the underpins not be met, the Committee would consider whether a discretionary reduction in the vesting of awards was required. The underpins applying to each award will be determined by the Committee each year but may include measures related to key financial, strategic, governance, ESG or share price metrics. Performance period is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term, however, a two year holding period applies which is welcomed. In addition, dividends may accrue on vesting awards from the date of grant. Such rewards misalign shareholders and executive interests as shareholders must subscribe for shares in order to receive dividends whereas participants in the scheme do not. Malus and clawback provisions apply to all variable pay.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

4. Approve the Restricted Share Plan (RSP)

It is proposed to the shareholders to approve the Restricted Share Plan. Under the proposed plan awards may be granted to any of the employees of the Company or its subsidiaries, including the Executive Directors. Participation by the Executive Directors shall be in accordance with the terms of the Company's remuneration policy. Awards will generally take the form of either: (i) a conditional right to receive ordinary shares in the Company which will be automatically transferred to the participant following vesting; or (ii) a nil or nominal cost option to acquire shares in the Company which may generally be exercised following vesting for a period of up to 10 years from the date of grant. The RSP provides that the maximum market value of the shares over which an award to any eligible employee may be granted in any financial year shall not exceed an amount equal to 87.5% of the employee's gross annual basic salary as at the date of grant. In exceptional circumstances, this limit may be increased to 100% at the discretion of the Board. The RSP may, in addition, be used to facilitate "buy-out" awards granted on the recruitment of an eligible employee.

The Board may determine that the vesting of awards granted to eligible employees shall be subject to one or more (or no) performance underpin(s). As set out in the Remuneration Policy, awards to be granted Executive Directors will normally be subject to robust performance underpins, which will be set out in the relevant annual report on directors' remuneration. Different performance underpins may be applied to awards granted to different eligible employees, and the Board may apply different performance underpins for different award grants. Awards granted to an Executive Director will normally only vest after a minimum of three years from the date of grant, while the Executive Director remains in office or employment with the Group. Awards granted to participants who are not Executive Directors will vest on such basis as the Board shall determine (which may, for example, include annual vesting on a phased basis over the three years from the date of grant while the participant remains in office or employment with the Group). In all cases, a shorter vesting period may apply in exceptional circumstances or where an award is granted in connection with the recruitment or promotion of an eligible employee. The Board has the discretion to apply a vesting period of longer than three years to an award. Awards granted to Executive Directors (and others at the discretion of the Board) will be subject to a holding period following the vesting of an award during which a participant shall not be permitted to dispose of shares acquired on vesting (other than to cover tax liabilities or in the event of a corporate action). For awards granted to Executive Directors, a holding period of two years will apply to all of the shares in respect of which an award vests, except that if an award is granted with a vesting period which is longer than three years, then the Board may proportionately reduce the retention period. For awards granted to other eligible employees or in connection with the recruitment or promotion of an Executive Director, a holding period may apply to such number of the shares which vest and for such period as the Board may determine. Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. On the other hand, executives are also among the beneficiaries: it is considered that support should not be given to stock or share option plans that do not lay out clear performance criteria, targets and conditions. On balance, opposition is recommended.

13. Re-appoint KPMG LLP as auditor of the Company

KPMG proposed. Non-audit fees represented 6.67% of audit fees during the year under review and 9.41% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than ten years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

The Board is seeking approval to issue up to an additional 5% of the Company's issued share capital for cash for use only in connection with an acquisition or a specified capital investment. Such proposal is not supported as it is considered that the 5% limit sought under the general authority above is sufficient. Best practice would be to seek a specific authority from shareholders in relation to a specific transaction if such situation arises. 2. Approve Remuneration Report for UK Law Purposes
In accordance with Section 250R of the Australian Corporations Act, the directors are seeking approval of the remuneration report. The Act does not require directors to act on approval of the resolution and the vote is advisory.
There are concerns regarding excess as the total variable remuneration exceeded 200% of the salary. The Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. However, opposition is recommended based on excessive remuneration.

It is proposed to approve for all purposes (including for the purposes of sections 200B and 200E of the Australian Corporations Act 2001) the giving of benefits to persons (Relevant Executives) who are key management personnel (KMP) of Rio Tinto Limited or who hold a managerial or executive office in Rio Tinto Limited or a related body corporate, in connection with the person ceasing to hold an office, or position of employment, in Rio Tinto Limited or a related body corporate for a period of three years from the date the resolution is passed.
Under the current Remuneration policy, an initial notice period of 24 months, reducing to 12 months after two years, can be given for recruitment purposes. This can allow for excessive severance payments for Executives appointed under these terms. The termination provisions are fully disclosed in the Remuneration policy. There are significant concerns with regards to the fact that the outstanding PSP awards, after the first 36 months from the date of grant, will not be pro-rated for period served. The overall discretion given to the Committee with regard to treatment of incentive schemes upon termination is not considered appropriate. Based on these concerns, an oppose vote is recommended.

Lead Independent Director. Considered independent.
Lead Independent Director. Despite having some climate targets, the company has neither a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 or an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change neither having an adequate short term target nor a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors. In this case, the authorization would increase allow the placement of up to 15% additional new shares within a thirty day period at a price equal to that of the initial offer. There are concerns with such authorities as they may potentially represent a discount superior to the discount to which the initial authorisation is limited due to a potential rise in share price in the period between original issuance and secondary issuance. It is considered that the chair should be able to wholly dedicate their time to the company in times of company crisis. The COVID pandemic has shown that there are times when multiple unrelated companies will require the Chair's full attention in order to be able to handle times of crisis. It is considered that there is insufficient time to be able to effectively chair two or more companies at the same time. Overall, an oppose vote is recommended.

11. To re-appoint KPMG LLP ('KPMG') as auditor of the Company
KPMG proposed. No non-audit fees were paid to the auditors in the past three years. This approach is commended. [KPMG] proposed as new auditor. Auditor rotation is considered a positive factor. Acceptable proposal.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).
The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

AVIVA PLC AGM - 04-05-2023

2. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. CEO salary was increased by 3% for the year under review and employee pay increased by 6.5%. However, the CEO salary is in the upper quartile of the competitor group, which raises concerns for potential excessiveness. The CEO's variable pay has been estimated and is found excessive at 421.9% of salary (Annual Bonus: 195.6% & LTIP: 226.3%). The ratio of CEO to average employee pay has been estimated and is found unacceptable at 70:1. PIRC consider acceptable a ratio of 20:1.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

17. Re-appoint PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP as Auditor of the Company
PwC proposed. Non-audit fees represented 6.56% of audit fees during the year under review and 12.43% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than ten years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. The Board is seeking approval to issue up to an additional 5% of the Company's issued share capital for cash for use only in connection with an acquisition or a specified capital investment. Such proposal is not supported as it is considered that the 5% limit sought under the general authority above is sufficient. Authority is sought to allot shares and grant rights to subscribe for or to convert any security into ordinary shares in the Company up to an aggregate nominal amount of GBP150,000,000, representing approximately 16.27% of the Company's issued ordinary share capital as at 17 March 2023, such authority to be exercised in connection with the issue of Solvency II (SII) instruments. The authority expires at the next AGM. The Company explains that this authority is needed so that the Company has the flexibility to manage and maintain the Group's capital structure more effectively in the light of evolving regulatory capital requirements, market conditions and appetite for different instruments and their cost-effectiveness. It is noted that these SII instruments include Tier 1 instruments such as Equity Convertible Instruments or ECIs.
The use of Contingent Convertible Securities or CoCos is not considered appropriate as they put investors at significant risk of dilution in the event that conversion occurs. CoCos are relatively new instruments and there are concerns that CoCos may create a situation which whilst converting some debt to equity actually disincentivises equity investors from putting more new funds in to banks via rights issues, due to the dilutive effect of the conversion taking away much, or some, of the premium that would ordinarily accrue to shareholders. Recent events at Deutsche Bank has led to others voicing their concerns about the destabilising effect of CoCos on both the CoCo price and the share price. 15. Approve Remuneration Policy
It is proposed to approve the remuneration policy. Variable remuneration appears to be consistently capped, and the payout is in line with best practice. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets for the performance criteria of its variable remuneration component, which as a consequence may lead to overpayment against underperformance. In addition, there are no claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration component which makes it unlikely that shareholders will be able to reclaim any variable remuneration unfairly paid out. On these grounds, opposition is recommended.

16. Resolution on the implementation of a performance based long-term incentive program (Incentive Program 2023/2026) and transfer of the company's own shares
It is proposed a new incentive plan. Under the plan, the CEO and other executives will be awarded rights to receive shares in exchange for part of the reinvestment of their salary. The shares resulting from reinvestment will be matched by free shares awarded by the Company. While re-investment of the bonus in shares, or payment of part or all of the bonus in shares, are considered positive practice, share matching plans are viewed as a de facto discount for executives to buy company shares. They can eventually result in excessive payments versus performance. On this basis, opposition is recommended.

All elements of the single figure table are adequately disclosed. The change in base salary of the CEO is considered to be in line with the change in the salary of the workforce. It is noted that for the FY2023 there will be no increase on the CEO salary. The CEO's salary is in the upper quartile of the a peer comparator group, which raises concerns for potential excessiveness. The CEO's realised variable pay which is inclusive of the annual incentive and the fixed pay allowance stands at 290.7% of his base salary and is considered excessive since is higher than 200%. Chief Executive. Acceptable service contract provisions. During the year under review, the company was accused by the All-Parliamentary Group (APPG) on Hong Kong of being complicit in human rights abuses, by denying pension pay-outs to those who fled Hong Kong's authoritarian crackdown. The bank has abided by the Hong Kong government's directive, which refused to recognise the documentation of more than 88,000 people who sought a new life in the UK. In addition, on 25 February 2023, it was reported that HSBC acknowledged that its operations could undermine human rights after a pivot to Asia in recent years that has seen it publicly support China's suppression of Hong Kong's pro-democracy protests. An internal review found that freedom of speech and freedom from arbitrary arrest were the main human rights that the bank was at risk of undermining and five new human rights including freedom of opinion and expression; freedom from arbitrary arrest, detention or exile; and right to privacy could be negatively affected due to the bank's business activities and relationships. According to the HSBC's internal review, "these are the human rights at risk of the most severe potential negative impact through our business activities and relationships." In recent months the FTSE 100 bank has been widely criticised by politicians in the UK and the US due to its activities such as freezing the bank accounts of activists in Hong Kong and blocking pension pay-outs for Hong Kong citizens who fled to the UK. While the full impact of this issues is yet to be ascertained, these practices are considered to be examples of a corporate culture not aligned with the interests of all stakeholders. Therefore, it is recommended to oppose the re-election of the Chief Executive Officer.

Authority to allot shares and grant rights to subscribe for or to convert any security into ordinary shares in the Company up to an aggregate nominal amount of USD 1,997,127,937, representing approximately 20% of the Company's issued ordinary share capital, such authority to be exercised in connection with the issue of CCSs. CCSs are debt securities which convert into ordinary shares in certain prescribed circumstances. They benefit from a specific regulatory capital treatment under European Union legislation. This authority is in addition to resolution 16 and will expire at next AGM. The Company explains that this resolution is a recurring resolution at its AGM and will be used to comply or maintain compliance with regulatory capital requirements or targets applicable to the Group. The terms of HSBC's existing CCSs have received regulatory approval from the Prudential Regulation Authority (PRA). The dilution involved for those shareholders not able to subscribe may significantly decrease their interest in the Bank. Dis-applying pre-emption rights may result in excessive dilution.
The use of CCSs are not considered appropriate as they put investors at significant risk of dilution in the event that conversion occurs. CCSs are relatively new instruments and there are concerns that they may create a situation which whilst converting some debt to equity actually disincentives equity investors from putting more new funds in to banks via rights issues, due to the dilutive effect of the conversion taking away much, or some, of the premium that would ordinarily accrue to shareholders. Based on these concerns, an oppose vote is recommended.

If passed, Resolution 14 will authorise the Directors to allot shares and grant rights to subscribe for or to convert any security into shares in the Company on a

18. Shareholder Resolution: Alternative Dividend Policy

Proponent's argument: Mr Lui Yu Kin requests that HSBC devise and implement a long-term and stable dividend policy that for and as long as there are sufficient distributable profits, HSBC should distribute dividends to its members at the pre-Covid-19 pandemic level i.e. not less than US$0.51 per share per annum (to be paid quarterly)." First, a stable dividends policy is immensely important to a listed company for attracting long-term and quality investors, even when the listed company is not able to maintain rapid growth in its value.[...]) Second, unstable or even nil distribution of dividends seriously affects investors' loyalty and confidence in HSBC. In 2020, when HSBC backtracked on its already announced dividend distribution and suspended its annual dividend payout to shareholders for the first time in nearly 75 years, the share price of HSBC plummeted for almost 10% in a single trading day in April 2020 and subsequently hit a historical low of HK$27.5 per share by 23 September 2020, which was even lower than its rights issue price of HK$28 per share in 2009. The fluctuation of HSBC's share prices serves to prove that suspension of dividend distribution was a serious blow to long-term investors' loyalty and confidence in HSBC and HSBC had suffered greatly by losing such quality investors as a consequence"

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "s the Company already has a long-term sustainable dividend strategy that is providing ongoing attractive returns to shareholders. The Company's improved profitability has created substantial distribution capacity, with a 50% dividend payout ratio established for 2023 and 2024, a return to quarterly dividends from the first quarter 2023, consideration of share repurchases brought forward to first quarter 2023 results, and on top of this, priority consideration of a special dividend of US$0.21 per share to be paid in early 2024 (subject to the completion of the Company's disposal of HSBC Canada and necessary approvals). Our objective is to restore the dividend to pre Covid-19 levels as soon as possible whilst making sure the dividend policy is sustainable over time by adopting a Dividend Payout Ratio (DPR) approach as opposed to being prescriptive on dividend amounts each year. Moving forward, the Board is acutely aware of the value its shareholders place on dividends and actively challenges management to deliver the strategy and performance to continue to increase revenues, profits, returns, and distributions. "

PIRC analysis: It is considered that dividend should be paid to shareholders where possible and from earnings or retained earnings only. Since the outbreak of the COVID-19 pandemic, companies globally have withdrawn dividend payments, in order to replenish reserves or funding them for future times. The company has maintained its dividend pay-out over the years, which is welcomed, and the company has disclosed the rationale behind cutting dividends from the current level, in addition to providing a roadmap for future dividend payment, including pay-out ratio. Opposition is recommended.

1. Approve Financial Statements

The financial statements were made available sufficiently before the meeting and has been audited and certified. However, there are some concerns surrounding the board-level governance of sustainability issues, policies and practice. As such, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. These concerns should have been addressed in the financial statements submitted to shareholders, but the financial statements fail to address these concerns and it is recommended to abstain from voting on this resolution.

The Company has fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. However, opposition is recommended based on excessive remuneration.

There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. However, the Company has not disclosed quantified targets for performance criteria for its variable remuneration component, which may lead to overpayment against underperformance. On balance, opposition is recommended based on excessiveness concerns.

9.1. Amend Articles: Deletion of the Current Article 4a and the Introduction of a Capital Range
It is proposed to amend the articles in order to introduce a capital range of authorised conditional share capital, and disapply pre-emptive rights for a portion of this range. Under the revised Swiss corporate law, shareholders may authorise the Board of Directors to increase or reduce the authorised share capital within a certain range, for a period of up to five years. The board has proposed a capital range of CHF 21,986,800 and CHF 999,400, to last for five years following the date of the upcoming meeting. The restriction of pre-emption rights does not exceed 10% of share capital. However, the duration of the authority exceeds 12 months. It is considered that shareholders should have the opportunity to vote on any exclusion of pre-emption rights annually. As the time limit for the exclusion of pre-emptive rights exceeds guidelines, opposition is recommended.

2. Appoint the Auditors: KPMG
KPMG proposed. Non-audit fees represented 19.43% of audit fees during the year under review and 13.35% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than ten years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

10. Approve Authority to Increase Authorised Share Capital
Authority is sought to increase the authorised share capital of the Company up to 20%. 11. Authorisation for the Board of Directors to decide on acquisition and transfer of treasury shares
It is proposed to authorise the Board to purchase Company's shares for 15% and five years. The Company has stated that this resolution may authorise the Board of Directors to allocate all or part of its repurchased shares to remuneration schemes. As no clear justification was provided by the Board regarding the full use of the authority, an oppose vote is recommended.

INTERCONTINENTAL HOTELS GROUP PLC AGM - 05-05-2023

2. Approve Remuneration Policy
The company proposes a few changes, reasons for which are as follows; 1) The need to prepare for the future – The Executive Directors have been in role for a number of years and the Committee recognized the likelihood of having to attract successors during the life of the next policy. Succession risk has been realised with the resignation of Paul Edgecliffe-Johnson, Chief Financial Officer and Group Head of Strategy (see below for further details), 2) US talent market – we have previously highlighted that IHG is a global business in a global industry driven by US-based global competitors. The US represents around 61% of revenue, 57% of system size and 81% of operating profit from re-portable segments. US experience is essential for executive director roles and to sustain an effective succession plan, 3)• Disconnect between Company performance, strategy and pay outcomes – IHG continues to be a high-performing Company. However, volatility in LTIP measures, particularly TSR, undermines our strong 'pay for performance' ethos. Potential maximum LTIP could reach 500% of salary for the CEO and US executive directors and 300% of salary for other executive directors and is considered excessive since is higher than 200%. Annual Bonus performance measures are based on 70% operating profit from reportable segments and 30% other strategic measures. Under normal circumstances, awards are made annually, 50% in cash after the end of the relevant financial year and 50% in the form of share awards which vest after three years, subject to leaver provisions. From 2024, subject to meeting the minimum shareholding requirement, up to 70% of the award may be paid in cash and at least 30% in deferred shares. However, it is also designed to cover exceptional circumstances such as severe ill health or death, in which it may not be deemed appropriate by the committee to defer awards. Long-term incentive plan(LTIP) performance measures are based on TRelative Total Shareholder Return (20%), relative net system size growth (20%), absolute cash flow (20%), ESG metrics (20%), and adjusted earnings per share compound annual growth rate (20%). For the LTIP awards the vesting period is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term, however, a two-year holding period applies which is welcomed. There are no defined takeover provisions, rather that the committee has upside discretion and the ability to decide the period for which awards may be pro-rated, whether awards are payable as cash or shares and the discretion to accelerate vesting, this level of discretion is considered inappropriate.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval at general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties, including the new s172 duties, should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'. As such, PIRC may recommend opposition on any remuneration policy or report proposals containing variable remuneration.

3. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. In 2022, salary increases for the UK and US corporate populations were in line with those for Executive Directors. The overall budget for 2023 increases is around 4.5% for UK and US corporate employees and 3% for the CEO. Changes in CEO pay under the last five years are not considered in line with changes in TSR during the same period. Total variable pay for the year under review is 328.34% (Annual Bonus: 193.36% LTIP: 134.98%) of the salary and is considered excessive since is higher than 200%. The ratio of CEO to average employee pay has been estimated and is found appropriate at 12:1.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. 6. Re-appoint Pricewaterhouse Coopers LLP as Auditors

PwC proposed. No non-audit fees were paid to the auditors in the past three years. This approach is commended.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).
The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

9. Adoption of new Deferred Award Plan rules

It is proposed to approve a restricted share plan for employees and corporate officers. The Board would receive the authority to set beneficiaries and other conditions. After allotment, shares will be restricted for three years, which is not considered to be sufficiently long term. The Company states that exercise of shares will be based on targets, which at this time remain undisclosed.
Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. On the other hand, executives are also among the beneficiaries: it is considered that support should not be given to stock or share option plans that do not lay out clear performance criteria, targets and conditions. On balance, opposition is recommended.

The Board is seeking approval to issue up to an additional 10% of the Company's issued share capital for cash for use only in connection with an acquisition or a specified capital investment. Such proposal is not supported as it is considered that the 5% limit sought under the general authority above is sufficient. Best practice would be to seek a specific authority from shareholders in relation to a specific transaction if such situation arises. As this is not the case, an oppose vote is therefore recommended.

2. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. Increase in CEO salary is in line with the rest of the company. The CEO's salary is in the lower quartile of PIRC's comparator group. The CEO to average employee ratio is considered acceptable at 20:1.
The CEO's maximum potential award under all incentive schemes can amount up to 375% of salary which is excessive. Shareholding requirements are considered sufficient. The PSP does not use any non-financial metric to measure performance. The performance conditions for both the annual bonus and the LTIP are not operating interdependently. 60% of the annual bonus will be deferred into shares for two years, which is welcomed. The three-year performance period for the PSP is not considered sufficiently long-term but the introduction of a two-year post-vesting holding period is welcomed. The committee retain the discretion to apply early vesting of awards for a 'good leaver' only in the event of death which is considered appropriate. No additional contractual provisions apply upon a change in control except that share plans may allow options and awards granted to directors to vest on a takeover.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are

SKYWORTH DIGITAL HLDS LTD EGM - 05-05-2023

1. Approve Conditional Cash Offer
Introduction: On 23 December 2022, the Board announced that the Offer would be made by CLSA Limited on behalf of the Company to buy-back for cancellation, subject to the Conditions, up to the Maximum Number, being 100,000,000 Shares, representing approximately 3.87% of the issued Shares as at the Latest Practicable Date, at the Initial Offer Price of HKD 3.8 per Share. On 28 March 2023, the Board announced in the Price Increase Announcement that the Initial Offer Price of HKD 3.8 per Share will be increased to the Offer Price of HKD 5.0 per Share, representing an increase of HKD 1.2 per Share.
Proposal: It is proposed to approve the conditional cash offer by CLSA Limited on behalf of the company to buy back up to 100,000,000 shares at a price of HKD 5.0 per share, representing approximately 3.87% of the issued Shares as at the Latest Practicable Date. The offer price represents a premium of approximately 24.07% over the closing price of the shares as quoted on the stock exchange on the Latest Practicable Date.
Rationale: The Directors (other than members of the Independent Board Committee who have expressed their view in the letter from the Independent Board Committee set out in this Offer Document) believe that the Offer provides an opportunity for the Shareholders to realise part of their investments in the Company at a premium over recent market prices, in particular, where a reference is made to the closing price of the Shares on 28 March 2023, or to increase their proportionate equity interests in the Company by retaining their shareholdings and participating in the future prospects of the Group. The directors note that 35.38% discount to the Group's net asset value per Share as at 31 December 2022 as implied by the Offer Price when compared to the historical discounts to the Group's net asset value per Share of HKD 7.74 as at 31 December 2022 also represents an opportunity for the Shareholders to monetise their shareholding at a smaller discount to the Group's net asset value per Share as at 31 December 2022.

Recommendation: Such proposals are considered on the basis of whether they are deemed fair, whether they have been adequately explained, and whether there is sufficient independent oversight of the recommended proposal. Although the Company has disclosed sufficient details of the transaction, there is insufficient independence on the Board. This is considered to be a potential risk for the decision not to be taken with appropriate independence and objectivity. In addition, while it is noted that the Independent Board Committee has recommended to accept the offer, it is noted that two of the three members of this committee are not considered independent by PIRC's definition. As abstention is not a valid voting outcome, opposition is recommended.

2. Approve Unconditional General Cash Offer
In the event that the acceptance level of the Offer results in the Wong Concert Party Group becoming interested in more than 50% of the Shares and thereby becoming the actual controllerof the Company, pursuant to the relevant regulatory requirements in the PRC, Mr. Wong, whether by himself or through entities controlled by him, will be obliged to make a mandatory unconditional general offer for all the shares of Skyworth Digital, other than the treasury shares held by Skyworth Digital, certain restricted shares and those already owned and/or agreed to be acquired by Mr. Wong and/or parties acting in concert with him. As this proposal is considered to be enabling of proposal 1, concerns regarding a lack of independent oversight of the transaction are maintained for this resolution. As abstention is not a valid voting outcome, opposition is recommended.

3. Approve Whitewash Waiver
Depending on the level of acceptances received from the Accepting Shareholders pursuant to the Offer and assuming that no Share Options will be exercised by their holders prior to completion of the Offer, the aggregate interests of the Wong Concert Party Group may increase to a maximum level of approximately 50.35% upon completion of the Offer, thereby triggering an obligation under Rule 26 of the Takeovers Code for Mr. Wong to make a mandatory general offer for all the Shares not already owned by the Wong Concert Party Group. Consequently, an application has been made to the Executive by Mr. Wong for the Whitewash Waiver. The Executive has agreed, subject to the approval of the Independent Shareholders for the Offer, the Whitewash Waiver and the PRC MGO at the SGM by way of poll, to waive any obligation of Mr. Wong to make a general offer which might result from completion of the Offer. As this proposal is considered to be enabling of proposal 1, concerns regarding a lack of independent oversight of the transaction are maintained for this resolution. As abstention is not a valid voting outcome, opposition is recommended.

RCS MEDIAGROUP AGM - 08-05-2023

0030. Approve Remuneration Policy
It is proposed to approve the remuneration policy. Variable remuneration appears to be consistently capped, and the payout is in line with best practice. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets for the performance criteria of its variable remuneration component, which as a consequence may lead to overpayment against underperformance. In addition, there are no claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration component which makes it unlikely that shareholders will be able to reclaim any variable remuneration unfairly paid out. On these grounds, opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

0040. Approve the Remuneration Report
It is proposed to approve the implementation of the remuneration policy. The payout is in line with best practice, under 200% of the fixed salary. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. In addition, there are no claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration component which makes it unlikely that shareholders will be able to reclaim any variable remuneration unfairly paid out. On this basis, opposition is recommended.

0050. Authorise Share Repurchase
It is proposed to authorise the Board to purchase Company's shares for 18 months. This resolution will not be supported unless the Board has set forth a clear, cogent and compelling case demonstrating how the authority would benefit long-term shareholders. As no clear justification was provided by the Board, an oppose vote is recommended.

KINNEVIK AB AGM - 08-05-2023

13. Approve the Remuneration Report
It is proposed to approve the annual report on remuneration of Executive and Non-Executive directors with an advisory vote. There are excessiveness concerns as the total variable remuneration exceeded 200% of the salary for the highest paid director. The Company has fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. However, opposition is recommended based on excessive remuneration.

21A. Approve Performance Based Share Plan LTIP 2023
It is proposed a new incentive plan. Under the plan, the CEO and other executives will be awarded rights to receive shares in exchange for part of the reinvestment of their salary. The shares resulting from reinvestment will be matched by free shares awarded by the Company. While re-investment of the bonus in shares, or payment of part or all of the bonus in shares, are considered positive practice, share matching plans are viewed as a de facto discount for executives to buy company shares. They can eventually result in excessive payments versus performance. On this basis, opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

21B. Amend Articles: Introduce New Share Classes for Incentive Plan
In order to implement LTIP 2023 and enable the issue of Incentive Shares in accordance with the resolutions proposed under items 20(a) and (c)-(f), respectively, the Board proposes that provision 4 in the Articles of Association is restated and amended with the introduction of two new share classes of reclassifiable, sub-ordinated incentive shares of Class C 2023and Class D 2023. Opposition is recommended based on the concerns identified on the proposed incentive plan.

21C. Approve Equity Plan Financing Through Issuance of Shares

20D. Approve Equity Plan Financing Through Repurchase of Shares
The Board proposes that, on one or more occasions during the period until the next Annual General Meeting, the Board shall be authorised to resolve to repurchase own Incentive Shares of Class C 2022, Class D 2022, Class C 2023 and Class D 2023. The reason for Kinnevik to repurchase the Incentive Shares is to transfer such shares to the participants in LTIP 2023 and to the Participation Company in order to enable participation in LTIP 2023 for employees in the UK, but repurchases may also be effected in order to enable Kinnevik to repurchase Incentive Shares from the Chief Executive Officer and members of Kinnevik's investment team during the term of the plan as set out under item 21(a) and the terms of Kinnevik's long-term share incentive plan for 2021 and 2022. Opposition is recommended based on the concerns identified on the proposed incentive plan.

21E. Approve Transfer of Shares in Connection with Incentive Plan

KPMG proposed. Non-audit fees represented 20.00% of audit fees during the year under review and 20.00% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal. As the Company has not constituted a Sustainability Committee, the Chair of the Board / CEO is considered accountable for the Company's sustainability programme and the programme is not considered adequate to minimise the material risks linked to sustainability.

1h. Elect Ralph J. Nicoletti
Independent Non-Executive and Audit Committee Chair.
During the year under review, there have been allegations of bribery or corruption at the company, and while no wrongdoing has been identified at this time, there are nevertheless concerns over the potential impact of these allegations. There are concerns about the sufficiency of the board-level oversight of ethical and fair conduct with cultural understanding. The Audit Committee is considered responsible for overseeing the company's compliance policies, including through effective whistleblower policies. In November 2022, it was reported that insurance broker Arthur J. Gallagher was the subject of a wide-reaching investigation into corruption in Ecuador, according to the company's third quarter results. The company received a subpoena from the U.S. Department of Justice's Foreign Corrupt Practices Act (FCPA) unit, seeking information related to its business with state owned companies in Ecuador. Owing to the apparent failure or inaction, opposition is recommended to the re-election of the Audit Committee Chair. Furthermore, it is not clear if the Audit committee is responsible for or alerted to cases from the whistle-blowing hotline. This suggests that such concerns that should be raised by a whistle-blower are dealt with internally, which may increase the risk of such issues not being followed up or escalating to a level where the higher was the level of the misconduct, the more likely is the issue to be concealed. On this basis, and on the potential unforeseeable consequences for the company, opposition is recommended to the re-election of the chair of the audit committee, who is considered to be accountable for the concerns with the whistle-blowing reporting structure. Overall, opposition is recommended.

Vesting period is three years and as such is considered to be short-term, while performance targets have not been fully disclosed in a quantified manner at this time.
LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

1. Receive the Annual Report
The annual report was made available sufficiently before the meeting and has been audited and certified. However, there are concerns surrounding the sustainability policies and practice at the company and the lack of board level accountability for sustainability issues. Therefore, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. These concerns should have been addressed in the annual report submitted to shareholders, however the annual report fails to address these concerns adequately and therefore this resolution cannot be supported.

2. Approve Remuneration Policy

Total variable pay could reach 400% of the salary and is deemed excessive since is higher than 200%. On the Annual Bonus 50% is paid in cash and 50% defer to shares which is in line with best practices. On the Performance Share Plan (PSP), there are no non-financial performance measures attached to the LTIP and so the focus of remuneration policy is not the operational performance of the business as a whole or the individual roles of each of the executives in achieving that performance. Instead, the focus of the remuneration policy is financial KPIs, which mainly include factors beyond an individual director's control. In addition, The PSP only utilises relative TSR as the sole metric. According to best practice, the scheme should operate at least two quantifiable performance metrics in an interdependent fashion. Performance period is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term, however, a two year holding period applies which is welcomed. Malus and clawback provisions apply to all variable pay. Executive Directors have service contracts with the Group which can be terminated by the Company or the Director by giving 12 months' notice. The service contract policy for new appointments will be on similar terms as existing Executive Directors, with the facility to include a notice period of no more than 12 months. The Company may terminate the employment of the Executive Directors by making a payment in lieu of notice which would not exceed 12 months' salary.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

3. Approve the Remuneration Report

All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The CEO's salary is in the upper quartile of the Company's comparator group, which raises concerns about excessiveness. Total variable pay for the year under review is not considered excessive at 50% (Annual Bonus: 50% and PSP: 0%) of salary. The ratio of CEO pay compared to average employee pay is not considered to be acceptable at 32:1. It is recommended that the ratio does not exceed 20:1.

4. Re-appoint KPMG Ireland as independent auditor of the Company
KPMG proposed. No non-audit fees were paid for the year under review and non-audit fees represents 10.79% of audit fees on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).
The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

In addition, it is a generally accepted norm of good practice that a Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Being a non-independent Chair is considered to be incompatible with this. In addition, as the Company do not have a Board level Sustainability Committee, the Chair of the Board is considered accountable for the Company's sustainability programme. The ratio of CEO pay compared to average employee pay is acceptable at 17:1.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

3. Approve Remuneration Policy

Total variable pay could reach 350% of the salary for the CEO and 275% of the salary for the Executives and is deemed excessive since is higher than 200%. On the Annual Bonus, 40% of the Bonus will defer to shares for a period of three years. While the deferral part of the Bonus is welcomed, it would be preferable 50% of the Bonus to be paid in cash and 50% to defer to shares for at least three years. On the LTIP award performance period is three years which is not considered sufficiently, long term, however, a two year holding period applies which is welcomed. Dividends may not accrue on vesting awards from the date of grant. Such rewards misalign shareholders and executive interests as shareholders must subscribe for shares in order to receive dividends whereas participants in the scheme do not. Malus and clawback provisions apply to all variable pay.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. 12. Re-appoint PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP as the Company's auditor

PwC proposed. Non-audit fees represented 10.81% of audit fees during the year under review and 12.05% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

Authority to allot Equity of Restricted Tier 1 Bonds, up to an aggregate nominal amount of GBP 50,000,000 representing approximately 48% of the Company's issued ordinary share capital. This authority expires at next AGM.
The use of Contingent Convertible Securities or CoCos is not considered appropriate as they put investors at significant risk of dilution in the event that conversion occurs. CoCos are relatively new instruments and there are concerns that CoCos may create a situation which whilst converting some debt to equity actually disincentives equity investors from putting more new funds in to banks via rights issues, due to the dilutive effect of the conversion taking away much, or some, of the premium that would ordinarily accrue to shareholders. Recent events at Deutsche Bank has led to others voicing their concerns about the destabilising effect of CoCos on both the CoCo price and the share price. Based on these concerns, an oppose vote is recommended.

22. Approve Just Group plc Long Term Incentive Plan
It is proposed to the shareholders to approve the new Long-Term Incentive plan. The Remuneration Committee has recently undertaken a review of the Existing LTIP and concluded that shareholder authority should be sought under Resolution 22 for a new arrangement, the Just Group plc Long Term Incentive Plan (the "New LTIP"). The terms of the New LTIP have been designed to materially continue with the main elements and related features of the Existing LTIP but with appropriate changes that align the New LTIP to the latest best practice expectations and the long-term incentive aspects of the new Directors' Remuneration Policy proposed for approval under Resolution 3 The Board proposes the approval of a new long-term incentive plan. Under the plan, the CEO and other executives will be awarded rights to shares, a portion (or all) of which will vest depending on the achievement of some performance criteria. Vesting period is three years and as such is considered to be short-term, while performance targets have not been fully disclosed in a quantified manner at this time.

LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

23. Approve the Just Group plc Deferred Share Bonus Plan
It is proposed to the shareholders to approve the Company's Deferred Share Bonus Plan (DSBP). The DSBP will be operated in conjunction with the Short Term Incentive Plan for Executive Directors and other senior managers of the Company or any of its subsidiaries Awards under the DSBP ("Awards") will usually be granted over shares with a market value of 40% (or such other percentage as has been determined by the Remuneration Committee) of any bonus payable to such employees under any of the Company's annual bonus arrangements, unless the Remuneration Committee decides otherwise. The market value of shares under Awards is determined by reference to the average of the middle-market quotation for shares for the five dealing days preceding the grant of the Award, or for such shorter period as the Remuneration Committee may determine. Awards granted to Executive Directors shall necessarily be granted on terms consistent with the applicable shareholder approved Directors' Remuneration Policy. Although the Bonus has a deferral plan this is not considered adequate as it would be preferable 50% instead of 40% of the Bonus to defer to shares for at least three years. In addition, maximum opportunity for the Bonus is 150% of the salary which in aggregate with the LTIP award is above the recommended limit of 200%. Therefore, an oppose vote is recommended.

3. Approve Remuneration Policy
Total potential variable pay could reach 375% of the salary and is considered excessive. 40% of the Annual Bonus is defer to shares for three years. This is not considered adequate, it would be preferable 50% of the Bonus to be paid in cash and 50% to defer to shares for at least three years. The performance metrics for both the Annual Bonus and the LTIP award are not operating interdependently, such that vesting under the incentive plan is only possible where all threshold targets are met. Performance period for the LTIP award is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term, however, a two year holding period applies which is welcomed. Malus and clawback provisions apply to all variable pay.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. CEO salary is in line with the workforce. The CEO salary is in the median of the competitor group. The CEO's variable pay for the year under review represents 117% of his salary (Annual Bonus: 76.3% : LTIP: 40.7%) which is not excessive. Ratio of CEO pay compared to average employee pay is unacceptable at 36:1. PIRC consider acceptable a ratio of 20:1.

Changes proposed: i) From 1 January 2023 the Executive Directors pension provision reduced from 15% to 7% of salary, ii) Introduction of a separate ESG component into the STIP and more clearly enabling the ability to introduce ESG measures into the LTIP during the Policy period, iii) Increasing the flexibility with respect to performance metrics used in both the STIP and LTIP, and to increase flexibility of metric weightings in the STIP, and iv)Increase in STIP opportunity of 25% of salary to 150% of salary.

Although some of the changes proposed are in a positive direction such as the introduction of ESG measures for the STIP award, still concerns are raised on the remuneration policy of the company. More specific, total variable pay could reach 300% of the salary and is deemed excessive since is higher than 200%. On the STIP award 70% of the award is paid in cash and 30% defer to shares. This is not considered adequate it would be preferable 50% of the STIP award to be paid in cash and 50% to defer to shares for at least three years. On the LTIP award although the flexibility by the new policy for the use of a non-financial measure, still for the FY2023, there are no non-financial performance measures attached and so the focus of remuneration policy is not the operational performance of the business as a whole or the individual roles of each of the executives in achieving that performance. Instead, the focus of the remuneration policy is financial KPIs, which mainly include factors beyond an individual director's control. Performance period is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term, however, a two year holding period applies which is welcomed. In addition, dividends may accrue on vesting awards from the date of grant. Such rewards misalign shareholders and executive interests as shareholders must subscribe for shares in order to receive dividends whereas participants in the scheme do not. Chair of Supervisory Board. Despite having some climate targets, the company does not have both a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 and an adequate short-term target. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change not having both adequate short term target and a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors. 13. Approve the Remuneration Report
It is proposed to approve the implementation of the remuneration policy. The payout is in line with best practice, under 200% of the fixed salary. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. In addition, there are no claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration component which makes it unlikely that shareholders will be able to reclaim any variable remuneration unfairly paid out. On this basis, opposition is recommended.

14. Approve New Long Term Incentive Plan
The Board proposes the approval of a new long-term incentive plan. Under the plan, the CEO and other executives will be awarded rights to shares, a portion (or all) of which will vest depending on the achievement of some performance criteria. Vesting period is three years and as such is considered to be short-term, while performance targets have not been fully disclosed in a quantified manner at this time.
LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change not having both adequate short term target and a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors.

The proposed chair has a strong financial background, an experience that can be valuable in linking appropriately link financial aspects of transitioning to a low-carbon economy. However, at this time, the candidate's understanding of the energy sector and their commitment to leading the company towards decarbonizations is yet to be evaluated. There is evidence that the company provides some training on climate skills at the board level, although better and more detailed disclosure would be welcomed. It is considered that the proposed chair is expected to gain the necessary knowledge to address climate-related risks and opportunities effectively and effective gaining of skills in this domain should be monitored during his tenure. Lastly, and given the above, there are concerns over the candidate's ability to drive the company towards stronger climate commitments, demonstrating a clear vision for the company's transition towards a low-carbon future and effectively communicate this vision to the board, management, and investors.
Based on these considerations, it is recommended to abstain from voting on this resolution. The chair's performance in leading the company towards deacarbonisation should be monitored in the early stages of his tenure to ensure alignment with the company's long-term sustainability objectives.

0110. Long term incentive Plan 2023-2025 and disposal of Eni treasury shares to serve the Plan
The Board proposes the approval of a new equity-based incentive plan. Under the plan, participants will be allotted shares that will vest over a three-year period. Performance targets have been quantified at this time, which is above market practice. However, the potential total reward raises excessiveness concerns (together with other incentives) and the vesting period of three years is considered to be short term.
LTIP based schemes are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the Company (creating capital and - lawful - dividends). They act as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute Company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

0120. Approve Remuneration Policy 2023-2026
It is proposed to approve the remuneration policy with a binding vote. Variable remuneration appears to be consistently capped, although the pay-out may exceed 200% of the fixed remuneration for the highest paid director. The Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets for performance criteria for its variable remuneration component, which may lead to overpayment against underperformance. In addition, part of the short-term bonus for the CEO and GM depends on Hydrocarbon production (12.5%) which appears to be contradicting ENI's mission and just transition statement. The aim of just transition is to shift from an extractive economy to a regenerative economy, while linking variable bonus for the CEO to hydrocarbon production seems to be in contradiction to it. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. Nevertheless, opposition is recommended based on potential excessive variable remuneration and absence of quantified targets.

It is proposed to approve the annual report on remuneration of Executive and Non-Executive directors with an advisory vote. There are excessiveness concerns as the total variable remuneration exceeded 200% of the salary for the highest paid director. The Company has fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. It is proposed to approve the dividend expected for 2023 at EUR 0.94 per share for quarterly payment. The Shareholders' Remuneration Policy is based on the close correlation between the Brent price level and company performance. While there are no serious concerns with these dividends from distributable reserves, it is of concern that shareholders are remunerated based on the Brent price level, which is in apparent contradiction with the just transition and does not link shareholders' remuneration with the energy transition, rather with a business segment (fossil fuels) which is risky and may see increasing costs in the medium term. EQUINOR ASA AGM - 10-05-2023

6. Approval of the annual report and accounts for Equinor ASA and the Equinor group for 2022, including the board of directors' proposal for distribution of fourth quarter 2022 dividend
The Board seeks shareholders' approval for the consolidated and individual financial statements for the year under review. The financial statements have been audited and the auditors have not qualified their opinion. The reports have been made available to shareholders sufficiently prior to the date of the general meeting. A fourth quarter 2022 ordinary dividend of USD 0.30 per share and an extraordinary dividend of USD 0.60 per share are proposed. It would be welcomed that the Company submitted the approval of the financial statements and the allocation of income individually, under two separate resolutions.
Despite having some climate targets, the company does not have both a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 and an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change not having both adequate short term target and a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors. 8. Shareholder Resolution: ban the use of fiberglass rotor blades in all new wind farms, commits to buy into existing hydropower projects and conduct research on other energy sources such as thorium

Proponent's argument: Shareholder Roald Skjoldheim proposed that 1. Equinor bans the use of fiberglass rotor blades in all new wind farms. And do not replace old fiberglass rotor blades with new ones. 2. Equinor must make a greater commitment to buying into existing hydropower projects, aiming to upgrade the plants nationwide. 3. Equinor should conduct research on other energy sources, such as thorium."Basically, wind power is a good and smart solution. Until the wind farm reaches its design life, and things need to be replaced. And recycled. This is where things start to get tricky. All metal is treated separately, the oil is treated separately, and the rotor blades... well, the rotor blades... they are garbage. There is currently no effective way to get rid of them. There have been some attempts at doing away with them. In some places, the rotor blades are used for other things. They are often reused in play parks for children, they can be shaped as parking sheds for bicycles, they can end up as "art". In some places, the rotor blades are ground up to dust. And the dust has been mixed with concrete. However, this has more or less stopped. Either because the quality of the concrete turned out to be so poor that the concrete could not be used, or it was stopped because the amount of dust was much greater than what could be mixed into the concrete. In any case, they have now come up with another "ingenious" solution. Simply burying the waste. Let future generations solve our problems. Meanwhile, Mother Nature decomposes the rotor blades. And it is not difficult to imagine particles from the rotor blades finding their way into water and soil. The medical profession in the future is going to be extremely busy because of the mistakes we make today."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "Circular economy and recycling opportunities represent key perspectives in an offshore wind project lifecycle and includes specific recycling opportunities such as wind turbine blades and other materials from the decommissioning and removal of offshore facilities. Reference is here made to the recent partnership between Equinor and the circular upstart Gjenkraft AS for recycling of turbine blades as well as the recently announced tender criteria for Sørlige NordsjøII and Utsira High, both of which include recycling and circularity as qualitative bidding criteria. Equinor is applying its competitive advantage to create value in new areas of the energy system and to deliver on our net zero ambition. A central element in this effort is our ambition to become a leading global player in offshore wind. At the same time, we recognize the potential in both existing and emerging technologies. Examples of relevant technologies within our current portfolio include battery technologies, solar and wind renewable energy as well as nuclear fusion"

PIRC analysis: The proponent raises valid concerns about the disposal of fiberglass rotor blades. These materials have been widely used due to their lightweight and high strength-to-weight ratio, but traditional recycling methods, such as mechanical grinding or pyrolysis, can be inefficient, energy-intensive, and may produce low-value products. Hydropower is a more mature and reliable technology, and it can produce electricity at a more consistent rate. On the other hand, wind power is a fast-growing renewable energy source with lower environmental impacts in terms of land and water use. It has a lower upfront cost compared to hydropower and can be deployed more rapidly. Lastly, research suggest that existing long-term (240,000 years or more) nuclear waste can be burned up in a thorium reactor to become a nuclear waste that can be disposed over 500 years. However, there are some points of concern regarding the proposal. First, nuclear power is presently a sustainable energy source, but not a renewable one. While thorium can be disposed in a shorter term, it is still considered long term while the technology to build thorium plants is still in early staged. The proponent's statement to live off nuclear waste as long as there is uranium available carries risks regarding the transport and storage of such waste while thorium technology becomes scalable. While hydropower is more consolidate as electricity generation technology, wind power is still in early stages and it is considered that brings a double benefit: technology can be improved and escalated (in terms of alternative materials and circular design) while providing very low possibility of land conflict. On balance, opposition is recommended.

These concerns should have been addressed in the annual report submitted to shareholders, however the annual report fails to address these concerns adequately and therefore this resolution cannot be supported.

2. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The CEO salary for the year under review is in line with the workforce. The salary of the CEO is in the median of the comparator group. The CEO's total realized awards during the year under review stands at approximately 150% of the annual salary which consists of only the Annual Bonus. The ratio of CEO pay compared to average employee pay stands at 22:1 which is not considered acceptable.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

14. Re-appoint EY as the Auditors
EY proposed. Non-audit fees represented 25.00% of audit fees during the year under review and 30.56% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees raises some concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).
The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state.

PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

The total realised rewards under all incentive scheme for the CEO is considered acceptable standing at 75.5% of the salary. The ratio of CEO pay compared to average employee pay is

4. Approve Remuneration Policy
Total variable pay could reach 250% of the salary and is deemed excessive since is higher than 200%. On the Annual Bonus, where an executive has not met their shareholding guideline, or is not on course to meet the guideline, then it is expected that the executive invests at least 50% of the post-tax annual bonus into Company shares. This is not considered adequate, it would be suggested that Annual Bonus is paid 50% in cash and 50% to defer to shares for at least three years. On the Performance Share Plan (PSP), The PSP is based on the achievement of EPS and relative TSR targets. The absence of Non-financial parameters to assess Executives' long-term performance is considered contrary to best practice as such factors are generally beyond an individual director's control. Non-financial parameters allow the remuneration policy to focus on the operational performance of the business as a whole and the individual roles of each of the senior executives in achieving that performance. Performance period is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term, however, a two year holding period applies which is welcomed. Malus and clawback provisions apply to all variable pay.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. ANTOFAGASTA PLC AGM - 10-05-2023

1. Receive the Annual Report
The annual report was made available sufficiently before the meeting and has been audited and certified. However, there are concerns surrounding the sustainability policies and practice at the company. Therefore, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. These concerns should have been addressed in the annual report submitted to shareholders, however the annual report fails to address these concerns adequately and therefore this resolution cannot be supported.

2. Approve the Remuneration Report
All aspects of the CEOs pay are adequately disclosed. The CEO's salary is in the lower quartile of a peer comparator group. The ratio of the CEO pay compared to average employee pay stands at 38:1 which is not considered acceptable. The total realised rewards stands at 463.4% of salary which is considered to be excessive.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

3. Approve Remuneration Policy
Total potential rewards for the CEO under all incentive schemes are considered excessive at 525% of salary exceptionally and 400% of salary normally. The LTIP comprises of two elements: Restricted Awards which is 30% of overall award and Performance Awards which is 70% of overall award. The LTIP performance period is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term and no further holding period is used. The LTIP is appropriately linked to non-financial KPIs however performance conditions do not operate interdependently. There is no annual bonus deferral. The company notes that clawback has not been introduced as it is not legally enforceable in Chile, although the LTIP is subject to malus.

pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. 16. Re-appoint PwC as the Auditors
PwC proposed. Non-audit fees represented 12.94% of audit fees during the year under review and 12.45% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).
The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

It is proposed to approve the implementation of the remuneration report. There are concerns regarding excess as the total variable remuneration exceeded 200% of the salary. In addition, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. It is proposed to approve the remuneration policy. Variable remuneration appears to be consistently capped, although the payout may exceed 200% of fixed salary. In addition, the Company has not disclosed quantified targets for the performance criteria of its variable remuneration component, which as a consequence may lead to overpayment against underperformance. In addition, there are no claw-back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration component which makes it unlikely that shareholders will be able to reclaim any variable remuneration unfairly paid out. In addition to the share issuance authorities sought above, the Board requests shareholder authority for a capital increase of additional 15%, in case of exceptional demand.
A green shoe authorisation enables an authorization of additional shares in the event of exceptional public demand. In this case, the authorization would increase allow the placement of up to 15% additional new shares within a thirty day period at a price equal to that of the initial offer. There are concerns with such authorities as they may potentially represent a discount superior to the discount to which the initial authorisation is limited due to a potential rise in share price in the period between original issuance and secondary issuance. Given the potential for inequitable treatment of shareholders, opposition is recommended.

However, the discount to be applied exceeds guidelines (20%). Opposition is therefore recommended.

27. Approve free issue of shares for Employees and Executive Officers
The Board proposes the approval of a new equity-based incentive plan. Under the plan, participants will be allotted shares that will vest over a three-year period. Performance targets have been quantified at this time, which is above market practice. However, the potential total reward raises excessiveness concerns (together with other incentives) and the vesting period of three years is considered to be short term.
LTIP based schemes are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the Company (creating capital and - lawful - dividends). They act as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute Company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

13. Approve Remuneration Policy
The company proposes a few changes. The 2023 Policy has not materially changed from the current Policy, other than a minor governance-led amendment to the pension wording to align the pension contributions for Executive Directors to the majority of employees. Total potential variable pay is excessive at 250% of salary; it is recommended that variable pay is limited to 200% of salary. The Annual Bonus performance measures are based on EPS (75%); and ratio of OCF to EBITDA (25%). In the MIP Element A plan 50% of the award is paid in cash and 50% converted into shares or share-linked units. 100% of the balance in the final year of the Plan will normally be settled in the form of shares transferred or allotted to the participant, which is in line with best practice. Long-term incentive plan(LTIP) performance measures are based on EPS (75%); and ratio of OCF to EBITDA (25%). Concerns are raised for the LTIP award since there are no non-financial performance measures attached to the LTIP and so the focus of remuneration policy is not the operational performance of the business as a whole or the individual roles of each of the executives in achieving that performance. Instead, the focus of the remuneration policy is financial KPIs, which mainly include factors beyond an individual director's control. The vesting period is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term, however, a two year holding period apply which is welcomed. Directors may be entitled to a dividend income on share awards which are paid out at the point of vesting. Such rewards misalign shareholders and executive interests as shareholders must subscribe for shares in order to receive dividends whereas participants in the scheme do not. Performance conditions do not operate interdependently, such that no payment is made for performance unless all performance conditions are achieved. Malus and clawback provisions apply to all variable pay.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval at general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties, including the new s172 duties, should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'. Total variable pay for the year under review is not excessive at 40.57% of salary. The ratio of CEO pay compared to average employee pay is not acceptable at 21:1. PIRC consider a ratio of 20:1 as appropriate.

2. Approve Remuneration Policy

The company proposes a few changes, most of which are as follows; 1) The CEO's base salary would be increased in 2023 in order to ensure it maintains parity with market levels. The CEO's salary was raised to GBP 750,000 per annum. The CFO has received a salary increase of 5.3%. The salaries effective 1st January 2023 are: Group Chief Executive: GBP 750,000 and Chief Financial Officer: GBP 529,448, 2)Pension contributions for the Executive Directors will be:Group Chief Executive: 10% of salary and Chief Financial Officer: 10% of salary, 3) The annual bonus opportunities for the Executive Directors will be: Group Chief Executive: 150% of salary and Chief Financial Officer: 125% of salary, 4)The 2023 PSP award levels will be: Group Chief Executive: 200% of base salary and Chief Financial Officer: 175% of base salary, 5)Director fees Effective from 1st January 2023, the Non-Executive Director basic fee was increased by 3.00%. Total variable pay can reach 350% of the salary for the CEO and 300% of the salary for the CFO and is deemed excessive since is higher than the limit of 200%. Annual Bonus performance measures are based on Group operating profit (70%), Cash generation (20%) and Personal strategic objectives (10%). Annual Bonus performance measures are at least 70% financial and the rest non-financials. The Bonus is paid in cash, however the executives can use the net of tax amount of any bonus they earn above 80% of the maximum opportunity to increase the level of shareholding they have and to hold for a further two years. It would be preferable 50% of the Bonus to deferred to shares for a two-year period. Long-term incentive plan(LTIP) performance measures are based on EPS growth (50%), Relative TSR (30%) and Greenhouse Gas emissions 2025 (20%). Non-financial parameters allow the remuneration policy to focus on the operational performance of the business as a whole and the individual roles of each of the senior executives in achieving that performance. The performance period is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term. However, Executives are required to hold their vested shares for two years, which is welcomed. Malus and claw back provisions apply for the variable pay. Executive Directors have service agreements that are terminable by either the Company or the Executive Director on 12 months' notice. In the event of termination or resignation, and subject to business reasons, the Company would not necessarily hold the Executive Director to his or her full notice period.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval at general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). 3. Approve the Remuneration Report

All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. In January 2022 a 2.7% salary increase was awarded to the Executive Directors. The Chief Financial Officer and senior managers received a 2023 salary increase of 5.3%. The CEO salary is in the lower quartile of the competitor group. The CEO's total realized awards under all incentive schemes during the year amounts to 358.46% of salary (Annual bonus: 88.90% : PSP: 269.56%), which is excessive. The ratio of CEO pay compared to average employee pay is not acceptable at 25:1. PIRC consider a ratio of 20:1 as appropriate.

18. Approve The Spirax-Sarco 2023 Performance Share Plan
It is proposed to approveThe Spirax-Sarco 2023 Performance Share Plan. Awards may be granted to any of the employees of the Company or its subsidiaries, including the Executive Directors. Awards will vest following an assessment of the performance condition, which will normally be no earlier than the third anniversary of the date of grant. Where the normal grant date has been delayed as a result of the Company being restricted from making grants, the Board may deem the award to have been granted, for these purposes, on the normal grant date. Awards granted in exceptional circumstances, for example in connection with the recruitment or promotion of an eligible employee, may have a shorter vesting period.
Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. On the other hand, executives are also among the beneficiaries: it is considered that support should not be given to stock or share option plans that do not lay out clear performance criteria, targets and conditions. 3. Re-appoint KPMG LLP as auditors of the Company
KPMG proposed. Non-audit fees represented 1.61% of audit fees during the year under review and 5.91% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).
The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

5. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The CEO's salary is in the upper quartile of the competitors group which raises concerns for potential excessiveness. The CEO variable pay for the year under review was 75.6% of the salary and is not considered excessive, since is lower than 200%. The ratio of CEO pay compared to average employee pay, which currently stands at 18:1, is within guidelines.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. 6. Approve Remuneration Policy
Changes proposed: The Remuneration Committee, proposes to make a limited change in emphasis in the annual bonus plan, adjusting the minimum weighting of financial components to 65% (from 75%). This ensures that financial elements still maintain an overall majority but gives scope to increase non-financial metrics to 35% of the overall award.
Total potential variable pay could reach 600% of the salary for the CEO and 350% of the salary for the CFO and is considered excessive since its higher than 200%. Annual Bonus is paid 50% in cash and 50% defer to shares for a three year period which is in line with best practice. For the LTIP award there are no non-financial performance measures attached to the LTIP and so the focus of remuneration policy is not the operational performance of the business as a whole or the individual roles of each of the executives in achieving that performance. Instead, the focus of the remuneration policy is financial KPIs, which mainly include factors beyond an individual director's control. Performance period is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term, however, a two year holding period applies which is welcomed. Dividend equivalent payments are permitted under the plan. Such payments misalign shareholder and executive interests as shareholders must subscribe for shares in order to receive dividends whereas participants in the scheme do not. Malus and clawback provisions apply to all variable pay.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. Awards will be granted in one or more of the following forms, at the discretion of the Committee: A) a restricted stock unit (RSU), being a conditional right to acquire either fully paid ordinary shares in the capital of the Company (Shares) or American Depository Shares (ADS) in the future, B) an option to acquire Shares or ADSs in the future or C) a phantom RSU, being a conditional right to receive a cash sum in the future linked to the value of a number of notional Shares or ADSs. The Board proposes the approval of a new equity-based incentive plan. Under the plan, participants will be allotted shares that will vest over a three-year period. Performance targets have been quantified at this time, which is above market practice. However, the potential total reward raises excessiveness concerns (together with other incentives) and the vesting period of three years is considered to be short term.
LTIP based schemes are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the Company (creating capital and - lawful - dividends). They act as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute Company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

- setting out how the current fee structure might be contributing to the discount, for example some investment companies cap management fees, or reduce the manager fee the larger the fund gets,
- setting out the effect of prior year buybacks to help determine the effectiveness of prior buybacks.

4.3. Approve Variable Remuneration of Executive Directors in the Amount of CHF 6.9 Million
Approve Variable Remuneration of members of the Executive Management of the Company, which means that the proposed amount will not be the actual amount to be paid, but only the cap for the variable remuneration component. The voting outcome of this resolution will be binding for the Company.
It is proposed to fix the remuneration of members of the Executive Committee until next AGM at CHF 6.9 million. The Company submitted two separate proposals for Executives fixed and variable remuneration, which is welcomed. With this separation, if shareholders rejected the variable compensation at a future potential retrospective proposal, the Company may nevertheless pay fixed salaries. The Ordinance Against Excessive Payments provides that if compensation is not approved, it may not be paid.
Variable remuneration appears to be consistently capped, although the payout may exceed 200% of fixed salary. In addition, the Company has not disclosed quantified targets for the performance criteria of its variable remuneration component, which as a consequence may lead to overpayment against underperformance. In addition, there are no claw-back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration component which makes it unlikely that shareholders will be able to reclaim any variable remuneration unfairly paid out. On these grounds, opposition is recommended.

4.4. Approve Variable Remuneration of Executive Committee in the Amount of CHF 14.5 Million
Approve Variable Remuneration of members of the Executive Management of the Company, which means that the proposed amount will not be the actual amount to be paid, but only the cap for the variable remuneration component. The voting outcome of this resolution will be binding for the Company.
It is proposed to fix the remuneration of members of the Executive Committee until next AGM at CHF 14.5 million. The Company submitted two separate proposals for Executives fixed and variable remuneration, which is welcomed. With this separation, if shareholders rejected the variable compensation at a future potential retrospective proposal, the Company may nevertheless pay fixed salaries. The Ordinance Against Excessive Payments provides that if compensation is not approved, it may not be paid.
Variable remuneration appears to be consistently capped, although the payout may exceed 200% of fixed salary. In addition, the Company has not disclosed quantified targets for the performance criteria of its variable remuneration component, which as a consequence may lead to overpayment against underperformance. In addition, there are no claw-back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration component which makes it unlikely that shareholders will be able to reclaim any variable remuneration unfairly paid out. On these grounds, opposition is recommended.

2. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total remuneration table are disclosed. The salary of the CEO is in the median of the competitor Group. Total realized variable pay for the highest-paid director, the CEO, Justin Ash is considered excessive at 341.7% of the salary (Annual Bonus: 78.7%, LTIP: 263%). The ratio of highest-paid director to average employee pay has been estimated and is found inappropriate at 33:1.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of ‘alignment’ with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of ‘alignment’ which can actually create a competing set of director ‘duties’.

15. Re-appoint Ernst & Young LLP as Auditor of the Company

EY proposed. Non-audit fees represented 0.08% of audit fees during the year under review and 0.25% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than ten years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn’t an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn’t merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC’s view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an ’expectations gap’ does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

During the year under review, the company agreed to pay USD 17.5m for engaging in deceptive practises that inflated its retail sales figures. During the year under review, the company has been investigated for failing to comply with anti-competitive allegations, alleged of inflating sales records in the US, and alleged of polluting water supplies via lithium extraction carried out by Livent. Standard proposal. However, the company's sustainability policies and practice are not considered to be adequate in order to minimize material risks linked to sustainability.
During the year under review, the company has been accused of environmental mismanagement. In December 2022, German broadcaster NDR began investigations into environmental concerns over the operations of BMW supplier Livent in lithium mines in South America. While no wrongdoing has been identified at this time, there are nevertheless concerns over the potential impact of these allegations. As the company has no sustainability committee, the Chair is deemend to have supervisory responsibility of this issue.
During the year under review, the company has been investigated failing to comply with the CMA's investigation into anti-competitive practices. While the full impact of this decision is yet to be ascertained, opposition is recommended for the audit committee chair, who is considered to be accountable for these matters. On balance, a vote to oppose is recommended.
Despite having some climate targets, the company does not have both a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 and an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change not having both adequate short term target and a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors. As such, an oppose vote is recommended.

UNIVERSAL MUSIC GROUP N.V. AGM - 11-05-2023

3. Approve the Remuneration Report
It is proposed to approve the annual report on remuneration of Executive and Non-Executive directors with an advisory vote. There are excessiveness concerns as the total variable remuneration exceeded 200% of the salary for the highest paid director. The Company has fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. However, opposition is recommended based on excessive remuneration.

There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. The Company has disclosed quantified targets for performance criteria for the entirety of its variable remuneration component. CAPITA PLC AGM - 11-05-2023

2. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. CEO salary for the year under review is in line with the workforce. However, the CEO salary is at the upper quartile of the competitors group, which raises concerns for potential excessiveness. Total variable pay for the year under review was 128.9% of the salary and is not considered excessive. The ratio of CEO pay compared to average employee pay is considered unacceptable at 55:1. PIRC consider adequate a ratio of 20:1.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

11. Re-appoint KPMG LLP as Auditor of the Company

KPMG proposed. Non-audit fees represented 26.23% of audit fees during the year under review and 23.32% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees raises some concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than ten years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

2. Approve Remuneration Policy

The company proposes a few changes, most of which are as follows; 1) Reward the delivery of Hiscox's wider strategy by introducing a scorecard approach to the short- and long-term incentives, allowing inclusion of strategic non-financial metrics, 2) Bonus deferral – in order to align with market practice and make deferral simpler, bonus deferral will be applied at a flat rate of 40% of bonus with amounts deferred into Hiscox shares and released three years following the end of the relevant performance year, 3) Post-employment shareholding guidelines – in recognition of the Investment Association's Principles of Remuneration, Executive Directors will be expected to maintain an interest in Hiscox shares for two years after they step down from the Board at the level of the in-employment shareholding guideline, 4) Malus and clawback – the circumstances that may trigger use of malus and clawback by the Committee have been extended under the short- and long-term incentive plans. Total potential awards for the CEO under all incentive schemes are excessive as these can amount to significantly more than 200% of base salary. Annual Bonus performance measures are based on Pre-tax ROE (75%), Strategic personal objectives (15%), Retail claims transactional NPS (5%) and Global employee engagement score (5%). Long-term incentive plan(LTIP) performance measures are based on growth plus dividends (60% weighting) and relative TSR (40% weighting). Dividend equivalent payments are permitted under the plan. Such payments misalign shareholder and executive interests as shareholders must subscribe for shares in order to receive dividends whereas participants in the scheme do not. There are no non-financial performance measures attached to the LTIP and so the focus of remuneration policy is not the operational performance of the business as a whole or the individual roles of each of the executives in achieving that performance. Instead, the focus of the remuneration policy is financial KPIs, which mainly include factors beyond an individual director's control. The performance condition is not considered to be sufficiently long-term at three years. However, a two year post-vesting holding period apply which is welcomed. The Committee may determine that an Executive Director is eligible to receive a bonus for the year. The Committee will determine the level of bonus taking into account performance. Malus and clawback provisions apply for the entire variable pay. Upside discretion may be exercised by the remuneration committee as under the LTIP rules it has the discretion to dis-apply time pro-rata vesting. The committee also has discretion to allow early vesting of awards on a change of control which is considered inappropriate.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval at general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties, including the new s172 duties, should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'. As such, PIRC may recommend opposition on any remuneration policy or report proposals containing variable remuneration.

The use of Regulatory Capital Convertible Instrument is not considered appropriate as they put investors at significant risk of dilution in the event that conversion occurs. Despite having some climate targets, the company does not have both a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 and an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change not having both adequate short term target and a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors. The COVID pandemic has shown that there are times when multiple unrelated companies will require the Chair's full attention in order to be able to handle times of crisis. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

3. Re-elect John Treharne - Chair (Executive)
Executive Chair. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that the Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Holding an executive position is incompatible with this and a vote to Oppose is recommended.

11. Re-appoint EY as the Auditors
EY proposed. No non-audit fees were paid to the auditors in the past three years. This approach is commended. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).
The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

The Board is seeking approval to issue up to an additional 10% of the Company's issued share capital for cash for use only in connection with an acquisition or a

4. Approve Remuneration Policy for Chairman and CEO
It is proposed to approve the remuneration policy. Variable remuneration appears to be consistently capped, although the payout may exceed 200% of fixed salary. In addition, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets for the performance criteria of its variable remuneration component, which as a consequence may lead to overpayment against underperformance. In addition, there are no claw-back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration component which makes it unlikely that shareholders will be able to reclaim any variable remuneration unfairly paid out. On these grounds, opposition is recommended.

5. Shareholder Resolution: Report on Government Take-Down Requests
Proponent's argument: National Legal and Policy Center request that Verizon Communications Inc. ("Company") provide a report, published on the company's website and updated semi-annually – and omitting proprietary information and at reasonable cost – that specifies the Company's policy in responding to requests to remove or take down content, or content-producing entities, from its platforms by the Executive Office of the President, Members of Congress, or any other agency or entity of the United States Government. "Circumstantial evidence shows that the Company may have been the recipient of overtures, possibly from government, to censor. For example: A presidential campaign's text-messaging system to voters, controlled by the Company, was shut down at a critical time during the 2020 election. Two top members of the House Energy and Commerce Committee wrote the Company asking if it still intended to carry television networks that broadcast so-called "misinformation". After pressure from public officials, the Company removed TV network OAN from its channel lineup."
Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "As a network provider, Verizon enables access to content that we do not own, develop, or control. We also recognize that we are one actor in a broader technology ecosystem, and that the inter-connected platforms for content delivery, including for content such as text messages, are constantly evolving. Like others in our industry, we face challenges with respect to unwanted, unsolicited or "spam" texts, and we have worked closely with industry partners, including SMS aggregators and CTIA, an industry association, to develop public guidelines and best practices to address this issue. [...] We publicly report on our website [...] that we require businesses and other organizations, including political campaigns, to adhere to these guidelines, and will review customer complaints about "spam" texts against both these guidelines and our own content policies and internal guidelines. We apply these guidelines without regard to the political views of the individuals or organizations involved."
PIRC analysis: The proposal does not request the company to consult with technology and civil liberties experts and civil and human rights advocates to assess the level of risk of misrepresenting facts and allowing or even inciting misinformation by its platform being used by any customer. Rather, the proponent appears to consider that misinformation (such as denying the reality of anthropogenic global warming, or that of the COVID pandemic) should be treated with the same dignity of scientific and fact-based information, on the basis of a flawed assumption of freedom of expression. Research has shown that misinformation has deep impact across society as a whole and appear to be tied to lower-income section of society. This proposal seemingly aims to ensure that misinformative views are represented on Google, as opposed to promoting transparency and accountability around the potential benefits of diversity and requesting transparency over the financial impact from these issues, avoid any suspicion and any damage that may cause to the company's reputation, or that the company may adopt a conduct different from what it has committed to. Opposition is thus recommended.

MARTIN MARIETTA MATERIALS INC. AGM - 11-05-2023

1.1. Elect Dorothy M. Ables - Non-Executive Director
Independent Non-Executive Director. Chair of Ethics, Environment, Safety and Health Committee. Despite having some climate targets, the company has neither a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 or an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change neither having an adequate short term target nor a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors. JOHN WOOD GROUP PLC AGM - 11-05-2023

2. Approve the Remuneration Report

considered acceptable at 13:1.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

Vote Cast: Oppose Results: For: 76.5, Abstain: 0.6, Oppose/Withhold: 22.9,

3. Approve Remuneration Policy
Changes proposed: i) Enhancement of post cessation shareholding requirements to 100% of shareholding for two years following cessation of employment. Current requirements are 100% of shareholding held for one year, reducing to 50% in the second year following cessation of employment, ii) Short-term incentive: updated to allow for the inclusion or exclusion of either corporate or personal objectives within the non-financial element and iii) Long-term incentive: aligned to market practice, with the removal of 18-month qualifying service for long-term incentives for good leaver.
Overall disclosure is consider adequate. Potential variable pay could reach more than 200% of the salary and is considered excessive. On the Annual Bonus At least 50% of the maximum potential bonus is based on financial measures with the remainder being based on non-financial measures. 25% of the annual bonus is deferred into shares for at least two years. While bonus deferral is welcomed, best practice is for at least half of the bonus to be deferred. The LTIP performance period is three years which is not considered sufficiently long term however a two year holding period is used. The LTP performance conditions work independently. It is considered best practice that they operate concurrently. Dividend equivalent payments are permitted under the plan. Such payments misalign shareholder and executive interests as shareholders must subscribe for shares in order to receive dividends whereas participants in the scheme do not. Malus and clawback provisions apply to all variable pay.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

13. Re-appoint KPMG LLP as auditors of the Company
KPMG proposed. Non-audit fees represented 11.97% of audit fees during the year under review and 6.04% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

17. Approval of the Wood Discretionary Share Plan

It is proposed to the shareholders to approve the discretionary share plan of the Company. Eligible to participate are employees (including employed executive directors) of the Company and its subsidiaries. Under the plan awards will be granted in one or more of the following forms, at the discretion of the Board: i) a share award, being a conditional right to acquire fully paid ordinary shares in the capital of the Company (Shares) in the future, ii) a share option, structured as an option to acquire Shares in the future and iii) a phantom award, being a conditional right to receive a cash sum in the future linked to the value of a number of notional Shares. Awards cannot be made if they would cause the "total plan shares" to exceed 10%, or the "discretionary plan shares" to exceed 5%, of the ordinary share capital of the Company in issue immediately before the Awards are made. Awards to Executive Directors may only be granted in accordance with the limit set out in the Remuneration Policy. For other participants, Awards may only be granted, in respect of any one financial year, with an aggregate market value at each relevant grant date of up to two times that participant's gross basic annual salary or up to two and a half times in exceptional circumstances. Awards may be granted subject to performance conditions, or other conditions, that must normally be satisfied in order for Awards to vest. All Awards granted to Executive Directors will be subject to performance conditions if required by the Remuneration Policy, with a performance period consistent with the Remuneration Policy. Awards may (and will, for an Executive Director) be granted subject to a holding period meaning that participants may not normally dispose of the Shares acquired for a specified period following vesting (or exercise for options).
Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. On the other hand, executives are also among the beneficiaries. On balance, opposition is recommended.

It is proposed to approve the implementation of the remuneration policy. The payout is in line with best practice, being under 200% of the fixed salary. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. On balance, abstention is recommended.

3. Approve the grant of Conditional Rights under the Company's LTI Plan for 2023 to the Group CEO
The Boards is seeking shareholder approval for the purposes of ASX Listing Rule 10.14 for the grant of 251,734 performance shares to the Chief Executive And Managing Director, under the company's Long-term Incentive Plan. The proposed grant has an approximate value of AUD 3,780,000 which equates to 200% of the CE's fixed remuneration.

Although the potential award is not considered to be excessive, concerns over the plan are raised as awards are based on performance conditions which do not run interdependently.
LTIP based schemes are inherently flawed. LTIPs are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance. These schemes are not considered to be properly long term and are subject to manipulation due to their discretionary nature.

LTIP based schemes are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the Company (creating capital and - lawful - dividends). They act as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute Company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

19.a. Approve Performance Share Matching Plan LTI 2023
The Board proposes the approval of a new long-term incentive plan. Under the plan, approximately 200 senior executives and other key employees will be awarded rights to shares, a portion (or all) of which will vest depending on the achievement of some performance criteria. Vesting period is three years and as such is considered to be short-term, while performance targets have not been fully disclosed in a quantified manner at this time.
LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

19.c. Authorise Share Repurchase
It is proposed to authorise the Board to purchase Company's shares until next AGM. This resolution will not be supported unless the Board has set forth a clear, cogent and compelling case demonstrating how the authority would benefit long-term shareholders. 21.a. Shareholder Resolution: Investigation that Current Members of the Board and Management Meet the Relevant Requirements of Laws, Regulations and the Ethical Values that Society Imposes on Individuals in Senior Positions
Proposal from shareholder Martin Green.
It is proposed that an investigation is carried out regarding the company's procedures to ensure that the current members of the board and Leadership Team fulfil the relevant legislative and regulatory requirements, as well as the demands that the public opinions ethical values places on persons in leading positions. In addition, the investigation shall include the current attitude and practical handling performed by the company's administrators and executives. Despite the possible good intentions, alignment with broad societal values and an assessment of what the public opinion demands as ethical is a disputable and vague criterion and used to prevent that certain views are represented. On the other hand, the potential benefits of board diversity lie in widening the perspectives on business issues brought to bear on decision-making, avoiding too great a similarity of attitude and helping companies understand their customers, marketplace, supply chain and workforces. Opposition is recommended.

This authority has not been duly justified by the Company. Opposition is therefore recommended.

It is proposed to approve the remuneration policy for the CEO and Vice-CEOs. Variable remuneration appears to be consistently capped, and the payout is in line with best practice. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets for performance criteria for its variable remuneration component, which may lead to overpayment against underperformance. It is proposed to approve the remuneration paid or due to non-executive board members with an advisory vote. Directors received only fixed remuneration. This approach is commended. However, it is also proposed to approve the remuneration paid or due to Corporate Officers with a binding vote. The payout is in line with best practice, being under 200% of the fixed salary. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. DIALIGHT PLC AGM - 16-05-2023

3. To approve the adoption of and rules of the Dialight plc 2023 Restricted Share Plan
It is proposed to approve a restricted share plan for employees and corporate officers. The Board would receive the authority to set beneficiaries and other conditions. After allotment, shares will be restricted for three years, which is not considered to be sufficiently long term. The Company states that exercise of shares will be based on targets, which at this time remain undisclosed.
Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. On the other hand, executives are also among the beneficiaries: it is considered that support should not be given to stock or share option plans that do not lay out clear performance criteria, targets and conditions. On balance, opposition is recommended.

15. Issue Shares for Cash for the Purpose of Financing an Acquisition or Other Capital Investment
The Board is seeking approval to issue up to an additional 5% of the Company's issued share capital for cash for use only in connection with an acquisition or a

2. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The variable pay for the year under review was 226.69% of the salary, which is considered excessive. The ratio of CEO pay compared to average employee pay is not acceptable at 63:1, it is recommended that the ratio does not exceed 20:1.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

13. Re-elect Stephen Thomas - Non-Executive Director
Non-Executive Director. There is sufficient independent representation on the Board. However, the corresponding resolution received 18.75% opposition at the previous AGM, which is considered to be significant by PIRC, and the company does not appear to have disclosed steps taken to address shareholders' concerns on the issue. As such, abstention is recommended.

Vote Cast: Abstain Results: For: 92.2, Abstain: 7.4, Oppose/Withhold: 0.4,

14. Re-appoint PwC as the Auditors
PwC proposed. Non-audit fees represented 4.65% of audit fees during the year under review and 7.76% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).
The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

RESTORE PLC AGM - 16-05-2023

1. Receive the Annual Report
Disclosure is adequate and the Annual report was made available sufficiently before the meeting. The financial statements have been audited and unqualified. Although not required to do so under AIM listing regulations, it is considered best practice for the Remuneration report to be submitted to a shareholder vote. As the Company has failed to do this, an oppose vote is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

2. To re-appoint PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP as auditors to the Company
PwC proposed. No non-audit fees were paid to the auditors in the past three years. This approach is commended.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).
The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

14. Amend Investment Policy
The board is seeking shareholder approval for a proposed change in the Investment Policy.
Proposed Changes to the Company's Investment Policy:
It is proposed that the investment policy is amended to more accurate describe the sectors and markets in which the manager invests. Specifically, the policy will explain that: a. HGT invests in businesses, in which Hg can work collaboratively with management teams to help those business achieve their full potential and grow, organically and inorganically; b. HGT's investments are focused on a range of sub-sectors within the software and technology-enabled business services in industry verticals, where the Manager can utilise the full extent of its knowledge and experience; c. The businesses HGT invests in often operate across multiple countries but are substantially headquartered in Europe, with a minority based in North America.
Recommendation:
Disclosure of rationale for the proposed change in policy is adequate. It is believed that any change in investment mandate can only be recommended where a fully independent management committee is in place, given that investment managers may be incentivised to alter a mandate to reweight or newly include a geography, sector or style by factors beyond the interests of this investment trust. As the management committee is not considered to be fully independent, an abstain vote is recommended.

16. Authorise Share Repurchase
Authority is sought to repurchase up to 14.99% of the issued share capital. The authority would expire at the next AGM. Before considering approval of buybacks (and this should come from the board, not the manager, nor a company secretary in the employ of the fund manager), we would like to see a public statement: - addressing whether any part of the discount can be explained by capitalisation of the costs (the total costs as in the Key Investor information Document - 'KID'), - setting out why the board believes that the performance of the incumbent management is not a contributory factor to the discount, and - setting out how the current fee structure might be contributing to the discount, for example some investment companies cap management fees, or reduce the manager fee the larger the fund gets, - setting out the effect of prior year buybacks to help determine the effectiveness of prior buybacks.

4.1.1. Re-elect Anastassis G. David - Chair (Non Executive)
Chair. Not independent upon appointment as he is a representative of Kar-Tess Holding SA, a significant shareholder of the Company (23 % of the share capital). It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that a Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Support will be recommended for the election or re-election of designated NEDs provided that no significant employment relations issues have been identified.
In addition, Ms. Boyle is Chair of the remuneration committee, there are serious concerns regarding the implementation of remuneration at the company and it is considered that chair of the remuneration committee should be held accountable for it when considering re-election. 7. Advisory vote on the UK Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The CEO salary is in line with the workforce. The CEO salary is in the median of the competitor group. The CEO variable pay is 311.9% of the salary (109.5% Annual Bonus and 202.4% PSP) and is considered excessive, since is higher than 200%. The ratio of CEO pay compared to average employee pay is not acceptable, standing at 83:1. PIRC consider appropriate a ratio of 20:1.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

8. Advisory vote on the Remuneration Policy
Total potential variable pay could reach 650% of the salary for the CEO and is considered excessive since is higher than 200%. The MIP (Management Incentive Plan) is paid 50% in cash and 50% is defer to shares for three years which is in line with best practice. The Performance Share Plan (PSP) has financial and non-financial KPI's as performance measures which is welcomed. The vesting period is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term, however, a two year holding period apply which is welcomed. Concerns are raised since Dividend accrual is not prohibited. Such rewards misalign shareholders and executive interests as shareholders must subscribe for shares in order to receive dividends whereas participants in the scheme do not. The performance metrics are not operating interdependently, such that vesting under the incentive plan is only possible where all threshold targets are met. Malus and clawback provisions apply to all variable pay.

There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. However, opposition is recommended based on excessive remuneration.

10.2. Approval of the maximum aggregate amount of remuneration for the e Executive Leadership Team
The Board of Directors propose a maximum aggregate amount of compensation for members of the operating committee/executive directors in the amount of EUR 41.5 million. Total target payments for the MIP amount to 109.5% of total salaries and total target payments for the PSP amount to 202.4% of salary. This is considered excessive. In addition, the playout under these schemes at maximum level are considered excessive. Due to recommended opposition to the Company's Remuneration policy , an oppose vote is recommended.

All elements of each director's cash remuneration and pension contribution are disclosed. The CEO salary is in line with the workforce. The CEO's salary is in the lower quartile of the Company's comparator group. Total variable pay for the year under review amounts to 140.2% of the salary (Annual Bonus: 89.8%, PSP: 50.4%). Total variable pay from 2023 is increased to 350% of the salary for the CEO and 325% of the salary for the CFO and is excessive since is higher than the limit of 200%. Annual Bonus performance measures are, operating profit (50%), sales(20%) and strategic objectives (30%). Any bonus paid in excess of 50% of the maximum will be payable in shares, which must be held in the Employee Benefit Trust for two years after receipt. The new policy includes flexibility for the inclusion of non-financial or ESG targets in the performance criteria, which is welcomed. The performance period is three years which is not considered adequately long term. However, executives are required to hold their vested shares for two years, which is welcomed. Malus and claw back provisions apply to all variable pay.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

14. Amend Greggs plc Performance Share Plan

It is proposed to amend the existing Greggs plc Performance Share Plan to increase individual award limits to be in line with the new Remuneration Policy, with maximum awards of 200% of base salary for the CEO and 175% of base salary for the CFO. The total variable remuneration including the annual bonus will be excessive at 350% of base salary for the CEO and 325% of base salary for other executives.
LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

COATS GROUP PLC AGM - 17-05-2023

2. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The CEO salary is in line with the workforce. However, the CEO salary is in the upper quartile of the competitor group, which raises concerns for potential excessiveness. Total variable pay for the year under review was not excessive at 158.67% of salary. The ratio of CEO pay compared to average employee pay is not acceptable at 88:1, it is recommended that the ratio does not exceed 20:1.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of ‘alignment’ with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of ‘alignment’ which can actually create a competing set of director ‘duties’.

3. Approve Remuneration Policy
Changes proposed; i) Increase of the Bonus opportunity for the CFO to 125% of the salary from 115% of the salary, ii) Annual Bonus: performance metrics adjusting the weighting of the performance measures so that EBIT and Free Cash Flow will each have an equal weighting of 35% of the total bonus opportunity (2022: 30% and 20% respectively), with Group Sales weighted at a reduced 10% (2022: 30%) and individual strategic objectives remaining at 20% and iii) Long-Term Incentive plan (LTIP): increase the weighting on relative TSR performance so that TSR and EPS have an equal weighting of 30% (2022:20% and 40% respectively) and replace the current measure of Free Cash Flow with three-year average cash conversion with an unchanged weighting of 20%.
Total potential variable pay could reach 325% of the salary for the CEO and 275% of the salary for the CFO, and is deemed excessive since is higher than 200%. Any bonuses awarded will be subject to a mandatory deferral which is normally 50% of any bonus earned where the maximum bonus opportunity is 150% of salary and 40% of any bonus earned where the maximum bonus opportunity is below 150% of salary. Directors may be entitled to a dividend income on share awards which are paid out at the point of vesting. Such rewards misalign shareholders and executive interests as shareholders must subscribe for shares in order to receive dividends whereas participants in the scheme do not. The performance period for the LTIP award is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term, however, a two year holding period apply which is welcomed. Malus and clawback provisions apply to all variable pay.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The ‘binding’ pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders’ for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of ‘alignment’ with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. 13. Appoint Ernst & Young LLP as Auditor of the Company
EY proposed as new auditor. Auditor rotation is considered a positive factor.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn’t an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

The salary of the CEO for the year under review is in the upper quartile of the Company's comparator group which raises concerns over the excessiveness of his pay. Total variable pay for the year under review is at 504.7% of the salary, which is not considered acceptable. 4. Approve Remuneration Policy

Overall policy disclosure is adequate. Maximum benefits for Executive Directors are disclosed. The maximum potential award under all incentive schemes is considered excessive at 650% of salary. Long-term incentive awards are now granted under the Executive Performance Share Plan (EPSP). The EPSP's performance period is three years which is not considered sufficiently long term. However, a two-year holding period applies for vested shares which is welcomed. It is noted that the plan is not linked to non-financial performance conditions. The absence of non-financial parameters to assess Executives' long-term performance is considered contrary to best practice as such factors allow the remuneration policy to focus on the operational performance of the business as a whole and the individual roles of each of the senior executives in achieving that performance. Furthermore, the performance measures are applied independently and awards can vest regardless of the performance in respect to other elements. Dividend equivalent payments on share awards are permitted under the policy. Such payments mis-align shareholder and executive interests as shareholders must subscribe for shares in order to receive dividends whereas participants in the scheme do not. For new executive recruits, the aggregate maximum face value for annual short- and long-term variable compensation will be eight times base salary. For a new joiner, the contract may commence with a notice period of up to two years reducing to the standard 12 months over time. This is considered inappropriate. The Remuneration Committee, in exceptional circumstances, can exercise discretion to dis-apply time pro-rating and performance conditions for good leavers; such upside discretion is considered inappropriate.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that a Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Being a non-independent Chair is considered to be incompatible with this. In addition, The Chair is also chairing another company within the FTSE 350 index. 2. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The CEO salary is in line with the workforce, since the salary for the CEO increased by 3% for the year under review and the workforce salary increased by 4.5%. However, the CEO salary is in the upper quartile of the competitor group which raises concerns for potential excessiveness. Total variable pay for the year under review was 111.10% of the salary (Annual Bonus: 5.9%, PSP: 105.2%) and is not excessive. The ratio of CEO to average employee pay is considered acceptable at 10:1.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

4. Re-appoint Ernst & Young LLP as the Auditors of the Company
EY proposed. Non-audit fees represented 7.14% of audit fees during the year under review and 6.00% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).
The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

The Board is seeking approval to issue up to an additional 10% of the Company's issued share capital for cash for use only in connection with an acquisition or a specified capital investment. Such proposal is not supported. Best practice would be to seek a specific authority from shareholders in relation to a specific transaction if such situation arises. As this is not the case, an oppose vote is therefore recommended.

16. Approve the Board to Grant Performance Shares
The Board proposes the approval of a new executive incentive plan. Under the plan, participants will be allotted shares or rights to shares. Performance targets have not been quantified at this time, which makes an informed assessment impossible and may lead to (partial) payment against (partial) failure.
LTIP based schemes are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the Company (creating capital and - lawful - dividends). They act as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute Company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

20. Issue Debt Securities
The board seeks authority to issue convertible bonds and to exclude subscription rights for a nominal amount corresponding to more than 10% of the share capital and for five years. 21. Authorise the Board of Directors to increase the number of securities to be issued in the case of issuing securities with or without subscription rights
The Board requests authority for using the previous delegation to issue shares in the event of a public offer on the share capital of the Company. This is considered an anti-takeover measure which can be used to entrench under-performing management in the event of a hostile takeover. On this basis, opposition is recommended.

In addition to the share issuance authorities sought above, the Board requests shareholder authority for a capital increase of additional 15%, in case of exceptional demand.

Regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders. 6. Elect Evan G. Greenberg as Chairman
Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal.

TENCENT HOLDINGS LTD EGM - 17-05-2023

1A. Approve Share Option Scheme
The Board proposes the approval of the 2023 share option scheme. Under the plan, the CEO and other executives will be awarded rights to shares, a portion (or all) of which will vest depending on the achievement of some performance criteria. The exact performance criteria against which shares will be awarded have not been adequately disclosed.
LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

12. Approve the Remuneration Report
It is proposed to approve the implementation of the remuneration policy. The payout is in line with best practice, under 200% of the fixed salary. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. 18.2. Appoint the Auditors
KPMG proposed. Non-audit fees represented 4.00% of audit fees during the year under review and 64.80% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees raises major concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than ten years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

19.A. Approve Incentive Plan 2023 for Key Employees
It is proposed to approve a stock option plan for employees and corporate officers. The Board would receive the authority to set beneficiaries and other conditions. There seem to be no performance criteria besides employment and tenure.
Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. On the other hand, executives are also among the beneficiaries: it is considered that support should not be given to stock or share option plans that do not lay out clearly performance criteria and conditions. On balance, opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

19.B. Approve Equity Plan 20232 Financing Through Issuance of Class C Shares
It is proposed a new incentive plan. Under the plan, the CEO and other executives will be awarded rights to receive shares in exchange for part of the reinvestment of their salary. The shares resulting from reinvestment will be matched by free shares awarded by the Company. While re-investment of the bonus in shares, or payment of part or all of the bonus in shares, are considered positive practice, share matching plans are viewed as a de facto discount for executives to buy company shares. They can eventually result in excessive payments versus performance. On this basis, opposition is recommended.

19.C. Approve Equity Plan 2023 Financing Through Repurchase of Class C Shares

19.E. Approve Alternative Equity Plan Financing Through Equity Swap Agreement with Third Party
The Board requests authority to repurchase and re-issue the shares to participants in the long term incentive plan proposed at the present meeting. 23. Authorise the Board to Waive Pre-emptive Rights
It is proposed to exclude pre-emption rights on shares issued over a period of 18 months. However it is considered that shareholders should be allowed to vote on such resolutions annually. Opposition is recommended.

24. Approve Related Party Transaction; Approve Issuance of 6 Million Shares to Sellers of Ninja Kiwi
It is proposed to extend the insurance cover to the members of the governing bodies of all Group companies. The insurance policy covers the civil liability (and related legal and advisory expenses) of the members of the governing bodies of all Group companies versus third parties, deriving from non-fraudulent conduct in breach of the obligations deriving from the law or intrinsic to their duties. In addition, the insurance does not explicitly exclude that it would cover also liabilities arising from fraudulent conduct, and fines handed down by the supervisory authorities. On this basis, shareholders would pay wilful violations and fraudulent conduct led by directors and executives. Opposition is thus recommended.

Executive Chair. Not considered independent as the director is considered to be connected with a significant shareholder: Neqst D2 AB. Additionally, not considered independent owing to a tenure of over nine years. In addition, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets for the performance criteria for its variable remuneration component, which as a consequence may lead to overpayment against underperformance. In addition, there are no claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration component which makes it unlikely that shareholders will be able to reclaim any variable remuneration unfairly paid out. 2. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The Executive Chair salary is in line with the workforce. The Executive Chair salary is in the lower quartile of the competitor group. Total variable remuneration for the Executive Chair is amounted to 313.5% of the salary and is considered excessive since is higher than 200%, The ratio of CEO pay compared to average employee pay has been calculate at 38:1 and is not considered acceptable. PIRC consider acceptable a pay ratio up to 20:1
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

4. Re-elect David Abery - Senior Independent Director
Senior Independent Director. Considered independent. However, Mr. Abery is chair of the audit committee. At the company, there is no external whistle-blowing hotline. This suggests that such concerns that should be raised by a whistle-blower are dealt with internally, which may increase the risk of such issues not being followed up or escalating to a level where the higher was the level of the misconduct, the more likely is the issue to be concealed. On this basis, and on the potential unforeseeable consequences for the company, opposition is recommended to the re-election of the chair of the audit committee, who is considered to be accountable for the concerns with the whistle-blowing reporting structure.

18. Approve Lloyds Banking Group Long Term Incentive Plan 2023
It is proposed to the shareholders to approve the Company's new Long-Term Incentive Plan. Eligible to participate are any employee or executive director of the Company, any of its subsidiaries or designated associated companies. Under the new Directors' Remuneration Policy being proposed to shareholders at the meeting, this would mean that Awards granted to executive directors will be subject to performance conditions assessed over a period of not less than three years. Awards shall vest in five equal annual instalments which will not start before the third anniversary of grant; each vesting will be subject to a further holding period as required by regulation. The level of individual grants may be determined by the Committee, including on the basis of a pre-grant assessment of performance. With this determination the Committee retains discretion to adjust grant levels if it considers it appropriate to do so. For executive directors, the maximum value of shares over which an Award may be granted in any financial year shall not exceed the limits set out in the Company's Directors' Remuneration Policy as approved by shareholders from time to time, which under the policy proposed to shareholders at the meeting provides an annual award limit for executive directors equivalent to 300% of base salary. Awards under the Plan may take the form of a conditional right to receive Shares, or a nil-cost or nominal-cost option over Shares, which may be exercised during a permitted exercise period (extending not later than the tenth anniversary of the date of grant). The Committee retains discretion to settle Awards in cash, for example, to settle part of an Award in cash where to do so facilitates the deduction of taxes. Awards under the LTIP shall be granted subject to forward looking performance conditions. For executive directors, save as may otherwise be approved by shareholders, Awards will be subject to performance conditions set in accordance with the Company's Directors Remuneration Policy as approved by shareholders from time to time. An Award will only Vest if and to the extent that any performance conditions are met. However, notwithstanding the extent to which the performance conditions are met, the Committee may apply a discretionary positive or negative adjustment to the vesting of an Award if it considers it appropriate to do so, including to lapse an Award in full.

Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. On the other hand, executives are also among the beneficiaries. LTIPs are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance. These schemes are not considered to be properly long term and are subject to manipulation due to their discretionary nature. On balance, opposition is recommended.

21. Authorise Issue of Equity in Relation to the Issue of Regulatory Capital Convertible Instruments
Authority to allot shares and grant rights to subscribe for or to convert any security into ordinary shares in the Company up to an aggregate nominal amount of GBP 1,250,000,000, such authority to be exercised in connection with the issue of Regulatory Capital Convertible Instruments. The amount of this authority is, in aggregate, equivalent to approximately 18.65% of the issued ordinary share capital of the Company. Regulatory Capital Convertible Instruments are debt securities which convert into ordinary shares in certain prescribed circumstances. They are additional tier 1 ('AT1') instruments which convert into ordinary shares of the Company should the Company's common equity tier 1 ratio fall below a contractually defined trigger point. They benefit from a specific regulatory capital treatment under European Union legislation.
The use of Regulatory Capital Convertible Instrument is not considered appropriate as they put investors at significant risk of dilution in the event that conversion occurs. They are relatively new instruments and there are concerns that they may create a situation which whilst converting some debt to equity actually disincentives equity investors from putting more new funds in the banks via rights issues, due to the dilutive effect of the conversion taking away much, or some, of the premium that would ordinarily accrue to shareholders. There are important concerns about the destabilizing effect of such instruments on both the instrument price and the share price. Based on these concerns, an oppose vote is recommended.

23. Issue Shares for Cash for the Purpose of Financing an Acquisition or Other Capital Investment
The Board is seeking approval to issue up to an additional 5% of the Company's issued share capital for cash for use only in connection with an acquisition or a specified capital investment. Such proposal is not supported as it is considered that the 5% limit sought under the general authority above is sufficient. Best practice would be to seek a specific authority from shareholders in relation to a specific transaction if such situation arises. As this is not the case, an oppose vote is therefore recommended.

24. Authorise Issue of Equity without Pre-Emptive Rights in Relation to the Issue of Regulatory Capital Convertible Instruments
This resolution will give the Directors authority to allot Regulatory Capital Convertible Instruments without the need to first offer them to existing shareholders. If passed, Resolution 24 will authorize the Directors to allot shares and grant rights to subscribe for or to convert any security into shares in the Company on a non-pre-emptive basis up to an aggregate nominal amount of GBP 1,250,000,000, representing approximately 18.65% of the Company's issued share capital. In line with the voting recommendation on resolution 21, an oppose vote is recommended.

25. Authorise Share Repurchase
The authority is limited to 10% of the Company's issued share capital and will expire at the next AGM. This resolution will not be supported unless the Board has set forth a clear, cogent and compelling case demonstrating how the authority would benefit long-term shareholders. As no clear justification was provided by the Board, an oppose vote is recommended.

QUILTER PLC AGM - 18-05-2023

1. Receive the Annual Report
The annual report was made available sufficiently before the meeting and has been audited and certified. However, there are concerns surrounding the sustainability policies and practice at the company and the lack of adequate board level accountability for sustainability issues. Therefore, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. These concerns should have been addressed in the annual report submitted to shareholders, however the annual report fails to address these concerns adequately and therefore this resolution cannot be supported.

Vote Cast: Abstain Results: For: 99.7, Abstain: 0.3, Oppose/Withhold: 0.0,

2. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. CEO salary is in the lower quartile of the comparator group. Total variable pay awards for the year under review were 150.8% of fixed salary (82.8% Annual Bonus + 67.9% LTIP). The ratio of the CEO pay compared to the average employee has been estimated at 19:1, which is considered to be within acceptable limits.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

9. Re-elect Ruth Markland - Chair (Non Executive)
Chair. Independent upon appointment. As there is no Board-level Sustainability Committee, the Chair of the Board is considered accountable for the Company's sustainability programme. As such, given that the Company's sustainability policies and practice are not considered to be adequate in order to minimize material risks linked to sustainability, an abstain vote is recommended.

Vote Cast: Abstain Results: For: 99.6, Abstain: 0.3, Oppose/Withhold: 0.1,

14. Re-appoint PwC as the Auditors
PwC proposed. Non-audit fees represented 5.88% of audit fees during the year under review and 6.25% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).
The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

20. Authorise Odd-lot Offer

It is proposed by the company to implement an Odd-lot Offer, under which shareholder who hold fewer than 200 Ordinary Shares will be offered an opportunity to sell their shares at a 5% premium to the market price. The Board will have the authority to determine when to carry out the Odd-lot Offer at any point in the next 18 months. The company says that it has approximately 200,000 shareholders, of which 140,000 each hold fewer than 200 Ordinary Shares. These principally South African shareholders were originally granted their shares in Old Mutual plc from their interest as policy holders when that business demutualised in 1999. The shareholders became Quilter shareholders as result of the company's managed separation from Old Mutual plc in 2018. The Board says that the proposed Odd-lot offer will reduce complexity and cost of managing the company's shareholder base and allow investors holding small number of shares to dispose of their holdings in a timely and cost effective manner. Shareholders are being asked to approve a change to the articles so that Odd-lot holders who do not respond to the offer are deemed to have agreed to accept it. The maximum number of ordinary shares that could be purchased pursuant to the Odd-lot Offer is 1.22% of Ordinary Shares on issue as of 20 March 2023.

This resolution will not be supported unless the Board has set forth a clear, cogent and compelling case demonstrating how the authority would benefit long-term shareholders. While justification was given, the authority exceeds 12 months, and as such an oppose vote is recommended.

UNION PACIFIC CORPORATION AGM - 18-05-2023

1b. Elect David B. Dillon - Non-Executive Director
Non-Executive Director, chair of the audit committee. Not considered independent owing to a tenure of over nine years. However, there is sufficient independent representation on the Board. At the company, there is no external whistle-blowing hotline. This suggests that such concerns that should be raised by a whistle-blower are dealt with internally, which may increase the risk of such issues not being followed up or escalating to a level where the higher was the level of the misconduct, the more likely is the issue to be concealed. On this basis, and on the potential unforeseeable consequences for the company, opposition is recommended to the re-election of the chair of the audit committee, who is considered to be accountable for the concerns with the whistle-blowing reporting structure.

3. Approve Remuneration Policy
In the new policy, the maximum annual bonus will be increased to 175% of base salary. Payment for threshold performance will also be be specifically capped at 25% of maximum payout. Overall disclosure is acceptable. Maximum variable compensation for the CEO is 375% of base salary, which is considered excessive. There is a deferral period on the annual bonus of 33% over three-years. PIRC considers that 50% over three-years, or 75% over two to be sufficient. The three-year performance period on the Vesuvius Share Plan is not considered sufficiently long-term but the two-year post vesting holding period is considered adequate. The Committee has the discretion to award participants the equivalent value of dividends accrued during the vesting and holding periods, which is not considered best practice.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

21. Amend Vesuvius Share Plan
It is proposed to make two amendments to the Vesuvius Share Plan. First, it is proposed to update the plan so that pro-ration of the plan in "good leaver" circumstances is based on the performance period instead of the vesting period. Second, it is proposed that if there is a change of control in the company, the Remuneration Committee has discretion to assess the performance more broadly. Remuneration committee discretion to potentially grant excessive payments in a change of control is not considered best practice.

LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

2. Approve the Remuneration Report

All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The change in the CEO's salary is in line with the rest of the Company. The CEO's salary is in the upper quartile of the Company's comparator group, which raises concerns for potential excessiveness. Total variable pay for the year under review is not acceptable at 225.8% of salary for the CEO. The ratio of CEO pay compared to average employee pay is not acceptable at 28:1. PIRC consider acceptable a ratio of 20:1.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

The possibility of having to commit additional time to the role in times of crisis is ever present. Given this, a Chair should focus his attention onto the only one FTSE 350 Company. Overall, opposition is recommended.

12. Re-appoint PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP as auditors of the Company

PwC proposed. Non-audit fees represented 54.66% of audit fees during the year under review and 29.41% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees raises major concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

2. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. CEO salary increased by 2.6% for the year under review and is in line with the increase of the workforce salary which increased by 5.3%. The CEO salary is on the median of the competitor group. Total variable pay for the year under review is 353.4% of the salary (Annual Bonus: 146.3% of the salary, LTIP: 207.1% of the salary) and is considered excessive. The ratio of CEO pay compared to the average employee is considered excessive at 45:1. PIRC consider appropriate a ratio of 20:1

3. Approve Remuneration Policy
Changes proposed: i) The alignment of the CEO's pension with that of the wider UK workforce (CFO alignment already in place), ii) The introduction of a policy on post-cessation shareholding for Executive Directors, iii) The increase of the maximum LTIP award from 250% to 300% of salary for the CEO (no change to CFO) and iv) A selection of changes to the choice and weighting of metrics in incentives, namely: a)The introduction of an organic revenue measure in both the bonus and the LTIP, b) The inclusion of quantifiable ESG metrics in the annual bonus and c) The revision of the relative TSR measure in the LTIP to include equally weighted measurement against two indices: the FTSE 50-150 excluding investment trusts and the S&P Global Healthcare Equipment & Services Index.
Total variable pay could reach 500% of the salary for the CEO and 450% of the salary for the CFO and is deemed excessive since is higher than 200%. On the Annual Bonus one third of the Bonus is defer to shares for three years, this is not considered adequate. It would be preferable 50% of the Bonus to be paid in cash and 50% to defer to shares for at least three years. On the LITP award, there are no non-financial performance measures attached to the LTIP and so the focus of remuneration policy is not the operational performance of the business as a whole or the individual roles of each of the executives in achieving that performance. Instead, the focus of the remuneration policy is financial KPIs, which mainly include factors beyond an individual director's control. Performance period is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term, however, a two year holding period applies which is welcomed. Malus and clawback provisions apply to all variable pay.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. Total variable pay could reach 425% of the salary and is deemed excessive since is higher than 200%. On the Annual Bonus 50% is defer to shares which is in line with best practice. On the Performance Share Plan (PSP) the absence of Non-financial parameters to assess Executives' long-term performance is considered contrary to best practice as such factors allow the remuneration policy to focus on the operational performance of the business as a whole and the individual roles of each of the senior executives in achieving that performance. Financial parameters are generally beyond an individual director's control. Performance period is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term, however, a two year holding period applies which is welcomed. The Board has proposed to amend the remuneration policy to increase the Executive Director minimum shareholding requirement to 200% and add a two-year post-vesting holding period for shares from vested share awards. Overall disclosure is acceptable. Total potential variable remuneration is capped at 200% of base salary. 50% of the annual bonus is deferred into shares and vests in equal tranches one, two and three years after deferral. This is not considered adequate as it is considered that 50% of the annual bonus should be deferred for at least two years. The long-term incentive has a three year performance period, which is not considered adequately long-term; however, there is an additional two year holding period, which is welcomed. Malus and clawback conditions apply across variable remuneration.

15. Issue Shares with Pre-emption Rights in Relation to the Issue of AT1 Securities
Shareholder approval is being sought to authorize the Board to allot shares in the Company or grant rights to subscribe for, or to convert any security into, shares in the Company up to an aggregate nominal amount of GBP 2,493,046 in connection with the issue of Additional Tier 1 Securities (‘AT1 Securities’), representing approximately 33% of the issued ordinary share capital of the Company, excluding treasury shares, as at 29 March 2021 with pre-emption rights. This authority expires at next AGM and is in addition to the authority in resolution 14.
The use of convertible Securities is not considered appropriate as they put investors at significant risk of dilution in the event that conversion occurs. These securities are relatively new instruments and there are concerns that they may create a situation which whilst converting some debt to equity actually disincentives equity investors from putting more new funds in the banks via rights issues, due to the dilutive effect of the conversion taking away much, or some, of the premium that would ordinarily accrue to shareholders. Past events at Deutsche Bank has led to others voicing their concerns about the destabilizing effect of convertible securities on both their own price and the share price. Based on these concerns, an oppose vote is recommended.

17. Issue Shares for Cash for the Purpose of Financing an Acquisition or Other Capital Investment
The Board is seeking approval to issue up to an additional 10% of the Company’s issued share capital for cash for use only in connection with an acquisition or a specified capital investment. Such proposal is not supported. Best practice would be to seek a specific authority from shareholders in relation to a specific transaction if such situation arises. As this is not the case, an oppose vote is therefore recommended.

18. Issue Shares for Cash in Relation to an Issue of AT1 Securities
It is proposed to authorise the Directors to allot shares and grant rights to subscribe for or to convert any security into shares in the Company on a non-pre-emptive basis in connection with an issue of AT1 Securities up to an aggregate nominal amount of GBP 2,493,046, or one third of issue share capital. The authority sought exceeds the recommended 5% maximum of the Company's issued share capital and expires at the next AGM.

As no clear justification was provided by the Board, an oppose vote is recommended.

1.02. Elect David P. Falck
Lead Independent Director and member of the Audit Committee. Not considered to be independent owing to a tenure of over nine years. It is considered that the Audit Committee should consist of a majority of independent directors. Due to the insufficient independent representation on the Audit Committee, and regardless of the independent representation on the Board as a whole, opposition is recommended. Furthermore, it is considered that a Lead Independent Director should be independent, in order to fulfil the responsibilities assigned to that role. Additionally, the director is Chair of the Nomination Committee. At this time, individual attendance record at board and committee meetings is not disclosed. This prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment on the fulfilment of fiduciary duties and the time that directors commit to the company. It is considered that the chair of nomination committee be responsible for inaction in terms of lack of disclosure. Opposition is recommended.

1.03. Elect Edward G. Jepsen
Non-Executive Director, Chair of the Audit Committee. Not considered independent as the director was previously employed by the Company as Executive Vice President and CFO of the Company from 1989 through 2004. In addition, not considered independent owing to a tenure of over nine years. It is considered that audit committees should be comprised exclusively of independent members, including the chair. At the company, it is not clear if the Audit Committee oversees the external whistle-blowing hotline. This suggests that such concerns that should be raised by a whistle-blower are dealt with internally, which may increase the risk of such issues not being followed up or escalating to a level where the higher was the level of the misconduct, the more likely is the issue to be concealed. On this basis, and on the potential unforeseeable consequences for the company, opposition is recommended to the re-election of the chair of the audit committee, who is considered to be accountable for the concerns with the whistle-blowing reporting structure.

1.06. Elect Martin H. Loeffler
Non-Executive Chair. Not considered independent owing to a tenure of over nine years. In addition, not considered independent as Mr. Loeffler held various executive positions at the Company from 1987 until his retirement in December 2010. There is insufficient independent representation on the Board. Furthermore, as the Company has not constituted a Sustainability Committee, the Chair of the Board is considered accountable for the Company's sustainability programme and the programme is not considered adequate to minimise the material risks linked to sustainability.

Deloitte proposed. Non-audit fees represented 8.36% of audit fees during the year under review and 9.14% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than ten years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

NEXT PLC AGM - 18-05-2023

1. Receive the Annual Report
The annual report was made available sufficiently before the meeting and has been audited and certified. However, there are concerns surrounding the sustainability policies and practice at the company and the lack of board level accountability for sustainability issues. Therefore, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. These concerns should have been addressed in the annual report submitted to shareholders, however the annual report fails to address these concerns adequately and therefore this resolution cannot be supported.

2. Approve Remuneration Policy

Total maximum potential awards are considered excessive at 375% of salary and 500% of salary exceptionally. The use of exceptional limits for variable incentive plans is not supported. Annual Bonus performance measure is pre-tax EPS growth, The Chief Executive's bonus above 100% of salary is deferred into shares for a period of two years. Best practice would be for at least half of the total bonus to be deferred into shares for at least two years. Long-Term Incentive Plan (LTIP) performance measure is TSR against a group of 19 other UK listed retail companies. The LTIP only utilizes TSR as the sole metric. According to best practice, the scheme should operate at least two quantifiable performance metrics in an interdependent fashion. In addition, there are no non-financial performance measures attached to the LTIP and so the focus of remuneration policy is not the operational performance of the business as a whole or the individual roles of each of the executives in achieving that performance. Instead, the focus of the remuneration policy is financial KPIs, which mainly include factors beyond an individual director's control. The performance period is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term. However, Executives are required to hold their vested shares for two- years, which is welcomed. Malus and claw backs provisions apply to all variable pay. Each of the executive directors has a rolling service contract. The contract is terminable by the Company on giving one year's notice and by the individual on giving six months' notice. In normal circumstances executive directors have no entitlement to compensation in respect of loss of performance bonuses and all share awards would lapse following resignation. However, under certain circumstances (e.g. "good leaver" or change in control), and solely at the Committee's discretion, annual bonus payments may be made and would ordinarily be calculated up to the date of termination only, based on performance. In addition, awards made under the LTIP would in those circumstances generally be time pro-rated and remain subject to the application of the performance conditions at the normal measurement date.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

3. Approve the Remuneration Report

All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The CEO's salary is in line with the workforce. The salary of the CEO is in the upper quartile of the competitor group, which raises concerns for potential excessiveness. The CEO's total realized rewards under all incentive schemes amounts to approximately 159.8% of his base salary (Annual Bonus: 81% & LTIP: 78.8%) and is not considered excessive. The ratio of CEO pay compared to average employee pay is unacceptable at 98:1, it is recommended that the ratio does not exceed 20:1.

The possibility of having to commit additional time to the role in times of crisis is ever present. Given this, a Chair should focus his attention onto the only one FTSE 350 Company. In addition, Mr. Roney re-election on the 2022 Annual General Meeting received significant opposition of 11.92% of the votes. 16. Re-appoint PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP as auditor
PwC proposed. Non-audit fees represented 8.02% of audit fees during the year under review and 7.91% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).
The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

22. Authorize the off-market purchases of own shares

As in previous years, the company seeks authority to enter into off-market contingent purchase contracts with any of Goldman Sachs International, UBS AG, BNP Paribas and Barclays Bank plc under which shares may be purchased off-market at a discount to the market price prevailing at the date each contract is entered into. The maximum which the Company would be permitted to purchase pursuant to this authority would be lower of 3 million shares or a total cost of up to GBP 200 million. The contracts would enable the company to make share purchases at all times, including close periods, such as prior to the announcement of interim and full year results, under contingent forward trades. The authority represents approximately 2.3% of the issued share capital. There is a concern regarding the potential repurchase of shares during a closed trading period, as this off market authority may potentially allow for transactions to still occur. Therefore an oppose vote is recommended.

It is proposed to authorise the board of directors to fix the Directors' remuneration for the next financial year. This will include fixed fees and variable remuneration, for executive directors. The Board proposes the approval of the Executive Share Option Scheme. Under the plan, the CEO and other executives will be awarded rights to shares, a portion (or all) of which will vest depending on the achievement of some performance criteria.
LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

It is proposed to approve a stock option plan for employees and corporate officers. The Board would receive the authority to set beneficiaries and other conditions. There seem to be no performance criteria besides employment and tenure.
Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. On the other hand, executives are also among the beneficiaries: it is considered that support should not be given to stock or share option plans that do not lay out clearly performance criteria and conditions. On balance, opposition is recommended.

12. Approve Agency Share Purchase Scheme
The Board proposes the approval of the Agency Share Purchase Scheme. Under the plan, the agents selected by the Board will be awarded options or rights to receive shares, which will start vesting after three years from the date of award. At this time, it seems that this plan will not be based on any performance criteria but only on the beneficiaries continued employment. As a result, they may receive bonuses unrelated to their performance or even the performance of the Company as a whole, which is considered a serious frustration of shareholder accountability.

Despite having some climate targets, the company does not have both a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 and an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change not having both adequate short term target and a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors. Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

9. Re-Appoint the Auditors
EY proposed. Non-audit fees represented 21.28% of audit fees during the year under review and 21.53% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

INCHCAPE PLC AGM - 18-05-2023

1. Receive the Annual Report
The annual report was made available sufficiently before the meeting and has been audited and certified. However, there are concerns surrounding the sustainability policies and practice at the company. Therefore, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. These concerns should have been addressed in the annual report submitted to shareholders, however the annual report fails to address these concerns adequately and therefore this resolution cannot be supported.

2. Approve the Remuneration Report

potential excessiveness. Variable pay for the year under review was estimated at 387.9% of the salary and is considered excessive. However, the ratio of the CEO pay compared to average employee pay is not considered acceptable at 63:1. It is considered that the ratio be no greater that 20:1
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. 3. Approve Remuneration Policy
Variable awards to Executive Directors include three different incentive scheme: Annual Bonus, Performance Share plan (PSP) and Co-Investment Plan (CIP). Maximum potential award under all the incentive plans is considered excessive at 550% of salary for the CEO. The deferral amount for the annual bonus is considered insufficient. At least half of the bonus should be deferred for a period of at least two years. The PSP does not include non-financial parameters and its performance conditions are not operating interdependently. The payment of dividend equivalents on vested shares is not deemed appropriate. In addition, the use of a matching plan such as the CIP is not acceptable and contrary to best practice. Such plan adds unnecessary complexity to the remuneration structure and leads to excessive remuneration. It rewards executive twice for the same performance as it combines performance condition of the Annual bonus and the PSP. Finally, the ultimate discretion given to the Committee to determine termination payments is not considered appropriate.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. 6. Shareholder Resolution: Civil Rights Equity Audit

Proponent's argument: The Sisters of St. Francis of Philadelphia request that the Board of Directors commission a third-party civil rights equity audit to review its corporate policies, practices, products and services, above legal and regulatory matters; to assess the impact of the Company's policies, practices, products and services on BIPOC (Black, Indigenous and people of color) and Latinx/a/o/e communities, including youth. Input from civil rights organizations, employees, customers, and communities in which Altria operates and other stakeholders should be considered. A report on the audit, prepared at reasonable cost and omitting confidential or proprietary information, should be publicly disclosed on Altria's website. "In December 2018, Altria invested $12.8 billion in JUUL, taking a 35% stake in the company, and providing advertising and sales support. JUUL currently commands three-quarters of the e-cigarette market. Data from the Centers for Disease Control shows that 86.3% of middle and high school students had been exposed to tobacco product advertisements or promotions, and 27.5% of high schoolers reported current e-cigarette use in 2019. Additionally, an estimated 53.3% of high school students and 24.3% of middle school students reported having ever tried a tobacco product.4 A multi-state coalition of Attorneys General is investigating JUUL's marketing and sales practices to underage users. Altria shares fell as much as 2.7% after Dow Jones reported the FTC is investigating the marketing practices of JUULLabs. Tobacco/nicotine companies have historically placed larger amounts of advertising in African American publications, disproportionally exposing African Americans to more cigarette ads than Whites. Additionally, tobacco companies use price promotions such as discounts and multi-pack coupons-which are most often used by African Americans and other minority groups, women, and young people-to increase sales."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. " The topics raised in the shareholder proposal are subject to significant active and pending litigation involving our companies' tobacco products and, consequently, we believe any Assessment of these topics should be led by Altria rather than a third party. However, we recognize the importance of third-party oversight of the Assessment and have designed the Assessment to include extensive third-party perspective and involvement including through an external advisory review board. We believe this approach mitigates the litigation risk that could result in unnecessary loss of shareholder value. The Assessment, which our Board authorized, is being led by Altria and overseen by an external advisory review board consisting of third-party, independent members who possess relevant expertise. The Assessment design was informed by robust stakeholder engagement involving shareholders and governance professionals. Based on the feedback from this engagement, we believe the Assessment will address the concerns raised by the shareholder proponents while mitigating litigation risk. We are committed to continuous learning and progress in the areas covered by the proposal and believe the results of the Assessment will identify opportunities to accelerate progress toward our 2025 Corporate Responsibility focus area goals, enhance stakeholder alignment and promote transparency, which, in turn, we expect will increase shareholder value by helping us accelerate progress toward our Vision."

PIRC analysis: Consulting with public health experts to assess the level of risk of maintaining violating human rights and civil liberties represented by its product being used by any customer, and the extent to which said product contributes negatively to public health, is in the best interest of shareholders. There has been a consistent amount of evidence linking poor health with poverty and racial segregation at least in the US, apparently suggesting that workers living in poor neighbourhoods, where mostly people of colour lives, are subject to worse health conditions. The resolution is not unduly prescriptive and it is considered beneficial for management and shareholders to look at data from a local-global perspective, allowing to act on local potential flaws within the company's global strategy.

Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal. 8. Shareholder Resolution: Rescission of 2022 "Racial Equity Audit" Proposal
Proponent's argument: The National Center for Public Policy Research commit to rescind the 2022 Racial Equity Audit proposal and reject any racially discriminatory practices at the company. "Racial equity audits do not benefit the companies that conduct them. They are non-neutral evaluations designed to embarrass the companies who elect to conduct them, and there is no evidence to suggest that such audits increase shareholder value. The 2022 proposal essentially admits as much as the evidence cited for the audit focused on Home Depot's philanthropic and political donations noting, "Home Depot has donated to police foundations in Detroit and Atlanta... The Atlanta Police Foundation has funded a network of 11,000 surveillance cameras... surveillance technology has been used to target communities of color and nonviolent protestors." And "[d]uring the 2019-2020 election cycle, Home Depot's political action committee ("PAC") gave $465,000 to 63 Republican Congress members who objected to the 2020 election results, an action some viewed as 'a direct attack on the voting rights of people of color.'" Racial equity audits also increase in-company racial division rather than ameliorating it. They distract leadership and staff from focusing on core business concerns. They promote claims about "white supremacy" in America that many Home Depot employees, shareholders, and customers don't accept. They sow division among employees and consumers. They're also expensive: some auditors reportedly charge more than $2,000 per hour. Racial equity audits generally do not help the audited companies: the publication of such reports often trigger more negative news, criticism, and boycotts of the company by certain consumers, while also alienating other consumers who disapprove of the company's decision to conduct such an audit in the first place. Such reports may also fuel unwarranted government investigations, employee grievances, and meritless discrimination claims."
Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "We engaged extensively with our shareholders to discuss the 2022 shareholder proposal to conduct a racial equity audit. While our holders were supportive of the Company's ongoing DEI efforts, our shareholders showed significant support for a third-party assessment of the Company's initiatives and their impacts. That support was reflected by nearly 63% of shareholder votes cast at the 2022 annual meeting being voted in favor of the 2022 racial equity audit proposal. We believe that failing to be responsive to such a significant majority shareholder vote in the absence of a material change in circumstances would not align with our history of responsiveness to shareholder feedback, our values, or our corporate governance practices.[...] We believe in the work our Company has done to drive our business forward and obtain competitive advantages through efforts to build a diverse, equitable and inclusive environment where hiring and promotion are based on merit. We welcome feedback from all perspectives and the opportunity to learn, and we look forward to the insights this assessment will provide to assist us in directing future efforts, advancing strategic priorities, and better communicating our efforts to our investors, associates, customers, and communities."
PIRC analysis: The potential benefits of staff diversity lie in widening the perspectives on human resources brought to bear on decision-making, avoiding too great a similarity of attitude and helping companies understand their workforces as a kaleidoscope of customers, marketplace, supply chain and society as a whole. Disclosure surrounding the company's staff composition allows shareholders to consider diversity in the context of the long-term interests of the company, including the ability to attract and retain key talent. Indeed a racial equity audit can help the company recognize areas where improvement is necessary and develop targeted strategies to promote a more inclusive and equitable workplace, translating ambitions into goals. Lastly, companies that demonstrate a commitment to diversity and inclusion may be more attractive to potential employees, customers, and investors, potentially leading to increased business opportunities and long-term growth. On the contrary, concealing or rescinding negative audit results on the basis of bad publicity may not be a sustainable strategy and could indeed result in more significant issues going public in the long term. Instead, addressing these issues proactively can help the company mitigate potential risks and demonstrate a commitment to transparency and continuous improvement.

9. Shareholder Resolution: Avoid Political Speech

Proponent's argument: The American Conservative Values ETF request that the Board of Directors encourage a Senior Management Commitment at Home Depot to avoid supporting or taking a public position on any controversial social or political issues (collectively "political speech"), without having previously, comprehensively and without bias justified by action on the basis of underlying business strategy, exigencies, and priorities. "As Shareholders we acknowledge that a potential cost pertains to reducing senior management's freedom of action. Although that cost is justified by the magnitude of the business risk we seek to mitigate, we feel that such a cost should be considered and minimized. As such we recommend that the board use its discretion in determining guidelines defining political speech, delineating the senior management positions affected, and detailing the mechanism and measurement of commitment. The fiduciary duty that all senior management owe to the company itself, and through it the shareholders, does not permit those managers to take political stances on behalf of the company that conform with the political policy preferences of those managers, or to take any controversial political or social stances on behalf of the company without having undertaken a full and unbiased analysis of all of the consequences that could follow from taking the stance, and ensuring that the stance is required by business necessity rather than driven by the personal policy preferences of senior managers."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "With respect to political speech, the Political Activity Policy specifically states that political communications, lobbying activities, grassroots lobbying communications, and other communications with government officials made on behalf of the Company may only be made or conducted by the Company's Government Relations department. Similarly, we have policies related to communications with investors and the media that specifically require any statements or inquiries to be handled through our investor relations or public relations departments, and that only an authorized Company spokesperson can speak on behalf of the Company. Our policies include governance of our utilization of social media as well. To complement these policies, we have a thoughtful process for determining if an authorized Company spokesperson should speak on a particular issue, which includes a risk analysis, careful deliberation, assessment of business impact, and consideration of alignment with our core values. We also have Board-level oversight of political speech on behalf of the Company. Our NCG Committee oversees our political activity, including an annual review of the Political Activity Policy, and receives regular reports on our political activity. Management has also discussed with the NCG Committee the considerations used by management in deciding whether the Company should make a statement on political or social issues. As a result, we believe that current policies, procedures and oversight provide sufficient processes and protections to effectively manage the risks presented by the proponent."

PIRC analysis: The requested disclosure on the alignment of public political speeches with corporate priorities appears to be a spoiler resolution to prevent other shareholders from filing resolutions regarding lobbying alignment with the clear intent to ensure that conservative views are represented within the company's political activities, as opposed to promoting transparency and accountability around the potential benefits of diversity and requesting transparency over the financial impact from non-traditionally financial issues, avoid any suspicion and any damage that may cause to the company's reputation, or that the company may adopt a conduct different from what it has committed to. Opposition is recommended.

3. Approve New Long Term Incentive Plan
The Board proposes the approval of a new long-term incentive plan. Under the plan, the CEO and other executives will be awarded rights to shares, a portion (or all) of which will vest depending on the achievement of some performance criteria. Vesting period is three years and as such is considered to be short-term, while performance targets have not been fully disclosed in a quantified manner at this time.
LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

Regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders. Opposition is recommended.

3. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The CEO salary is in the median of the comparator group. The current CEO's variable pay, when compared with his total cash and share salary, is considered acceptable as it represents less than 200% of his total salary. The CEO to average employee pay ratio has been estimated to be 25:1, which is considered to be excessive as it exceeds 20:1.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

EY proposed. Non-audit fees represented 0.72% of audit fees during the year under review and 0.50% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than ten years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).
The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

The Board is seeking approval to issue up to an additional 5% of the Company's issued share capital for cash for use only in connection with an acquisition or a specified capital investment. Such proposal is not supported as it is considered that the 5% limit sought under the general authority above is sufficient. Best practice would be to seek a specific authority from shareholders in relation to a specific transaction if such situation arises. As this is not the case, an oppose vote is therefore recommended.

HONEYWELL INTERNATIONAL INC. AGM - 19-05-2023

1a. Elect Darius Adamczyk - Chair (Executive)

Executive Chair. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that the Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Holding an executive position is incompatible with this and a vote to Oppose is recommended.

During the year under review, senior employees of the company have been found guilty of corruption. On 19 December 2022, it was reported that Honeywell had agreed to pay around USD 200 million to settle corruption investigations in Brazil and the US into bribes that the company paid to Petrobras, a state-owned oil company.While the full impact of this decision is yet to be ascertained, there are concerns about the sufficiency of the board-level oversight of ethical and fair conduct with cultural understanding. The Chair is considered to be responsible for oversight of the company's practises, and opposition is recommended on their election..

6. Approve Amendments to the 2020 Restricted Share Unit Scheme
It is proposed to approve amended stock option plan for employees and corporate officers. The Board would receive the authority to set beneficiaries and other conditions. There seem to be no performance criteria besides employment and tenure.
Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders.

8.a. Approve Financial Statements
The financial statements were made available sufficiently before the meeting and has been audited and certified. However, there are some concerns surrounding the board-level governance of sustainability issues, policies and practice. As such, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. These concerns should have been addressed in the financial statements submitted to shareholders, but the financial statements fail to address these concerns and it is recommended to abstain from voting on this resolution.

Vote Cast: Abstain

8.b13. Approve Discharge of Helena Hedblom from Supervisory Board (as President and CEO)
Standard proposal. The company's sustainability policies and practice are not considered to be adequate in order to minimize material risks linked to sustainability. As such, abstention is recommended on the discharge.

Vote Cast: Abstain

8.d. Approve the Remuneration Report
It is proposed to approve the implementation of the remuneration policy. The payout is in line with best practice, under 200% of the fixed salary. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. In addition, there are no claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration component which makes it unlikely that shareholders will be able to reclaim any variable remuneration unfairly paid out. On this basis, opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

10.a4. Elect Helena Hedblom - Chief Executive
Chief Executive. There is no Sustainability Committee and the Board Chair is not up for re-election, the Chief Executive is considered accountable for the Company's sustainability programme. As the Company's sustainability policies and practice are not considered adequate to minimise the material risks linked to sustainability an abstain vote is recommended.

10.a6. Elect Ronnie Leten - Chair (Non Executive)
Non-Executive Chair. Not considered independent as the director is considered to be connected with a significant shareholder: Ronnie Leten is Char and NED at Ericsson, one of the companies within the portfolio of Investor AB, a significant shareholder of Epiroc AB. He has also ben CEO of Atlas Copco AB (related company) in the past five years. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that the Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Holding an executive position is incompatible with this and a vote to Oppose is recommended.

12. Approve Stock Option Plan 2023 for Key Employees
The Board proposes the approval of a new executive incentive plan. Under the plan, participants will be allotted stock options, each of which will give right to one share. Performance targets have not been quantified at this time, which makes an informed assessment impossible and may lead to (partial) payment against (partial) failure. LTIP based schemes are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the Company (creating capital and - lawful - dividends). They act as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute Company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

Vote Cast: Oppose

13.a. Reissue of Treasury Shares with Pre-emption Rights Disapplied
The Board requests authority to repurchase and re-issue the shares to participants in the long term incentive plans, included that proposed at the present meeting.

Although companies have a legal duty to fund approved plans, this resolution is considered to be a proposal enabling the LTIP proposed. Based on the concerns on the resolution for the approval of the LTIP, opposition is recommended also on this resolution.

Vote Cast: Oppose

13.c. Approve Equity Plan Financing Through Transfer of Class A Shares to Participants
The Board further proposes that the Meeting decides to transfer shares in the Company in relation to the Company's personnel option plan 2023, including the matching options part. A maximum of 1,600,000 A shares may be transferred. Right to acquire shares is to be granted the persons participating in the Company's proposed performance stock option plan 2023, with a right for each participant to acquire the maximum number of shares stipulated in the terms and conditions of this plan. The participant's right to acquire shares is conditional upon all terms and conditions of the Company's performance stock option plan 2023 being fulfilled. Shares are to be transferred on the terms and conditions stipulated by the plan, meaning inter alia, that what is stated therein regarding price and time during which the participants are to be entitled to use their right to acquire shares is also applicable to the transfer. Participants are to pay for the shares within the time and on the terms stipulated in the performance stock option plan 2023.
Although companies have a legal duty to fund approved plans, this resolution is considered to be a proposal enabling the LTIP proposed. Based on the concerns on the resolution for the approval of the LTIP, opposition is recommended also on this resolution.

WICKES GROUP PLC AGM - 23-05-2023

2. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The CEO salary is in the median of the comparator group. The CEO's total realized variable pay during the year amounted to 58.92% (Annual bonus: 6.54% and LTIP: 52.38% of salary). The ratio of CEO to average employee pay has been estimated and is found to be 19:1, which is considered acceptable.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

Vote Cast: Oppose Results: For: 99.4, Abstain: 0.0, Oppose/Withhold: 0.6,

10. Re-appoint KPMG as the Auditors
KPMG proposed. Non-audit fees represented 10.46% of audit fees during the year under review and 9.80% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

10. Re-appoint PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP as auditor
PwC proposed. Non-audit fees represented 2.39% of audit fees during the year under review and 3.17% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than ten years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).
The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

CHINA EVERBRIGHT GREENTECH LTD AGM - 23-05-2023

2AI. Elect Huang Haqing
Non-Executive Chair and Chair of the Nomination Committee. Not considered independent as the director is considered to be connected with a significant shareholder: China Everbright Holdings. There is insufficient independent representation on the Board. Furthermore, gender balance on the Board is under 20%, which is considered as best practice in this market, although there are no specific local legal requirements or recommendations. 4. Approve Remuneration Policy
In the new policy, the company has proposed to allow more flexibility to increase non-executive fees, as well as allow it to apply upward discretion to the annual bonus. Overall disclosure is acceptable. Under the policy, variable remuneration is capped at 50% of salary which is considered acceptable. No LTIP is in use which is in line with best practice. The policy on recruitment and termination does not raise concerns. Annual Bonus performance measures are, Financial (Adjusted EBITDA for the year/Budgeted EBITDA) (20%), Production (20%), Increase of Total Resources (5%), Net increase in resources upgraded from inferred to measured and indicated (5%), Reserves replenishment(4%), Exploration Projects Progress (8%), Progress compared to project plan for four key development projects (12%), Human Resources (8%), Safety (10%), Communities(6%), Synergies and teamwork (2%). The Annual Bonus is paid in cash, it would be preferable 50% of the Bonus to deferred to shares for a three-year period. Since the company do not have long-term incentives and the operation of Mexican law makes it difficult to adopt clawback and malus arrangements. There is however scope within the bonus scheme for bonus awards to be adjusted downward at the discretion of the Remuneration Committee, which is welcomed.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

2. Approve Remuneration Policy
The company proposes a few changes, most of which are as follows; 1) salary change date moved from 1 January to 1 April: Salary levels (and subsequent increases) are set based on role, experience, performance and consideration of the general workforce pay review and competitor pay levels. Salaries are paid monthly. Normally reviewed annually with any changes taking effect from 1 April or when an individual changes position or responsibility., 2) Executive Director pensions capped at standard staff rate: Contribution to a personal pension plan (no defined benefit schemes operate) and/or a salary supplement (e.g. where HMRC limits would be exceeded). Going forwards, new recruits will receive no more than the rate from time to time applicable to the majority of staff, 3) On Annual Bonus, there will be more specific malus and clawback provisions, 4)On Restricted Share Plan (RSP). references to specifics applied to the 2020 grant will be removed. Total variable pay is set at 275% of the salary and is deemed excessive as is above the limit of 200%. 50% of the Bonus is paid in cash and 50% is deferred to shares for a three-year period and are in line with best practice. There are no non-financial performance measures attached to the LTIP and so the focus of remuneration policy is not the operational performance of the business as a whole or the individual roles of each of the executives in achieving that performance. Instead, the focus of the remuneration policy is financial KPIs, which mainly include factors beyond an individual director's control. The performance period is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term. However, Executives are required to hold their vested shares for two years, which is welcomed. FMalus and clawback provisions apply to all variable pay.The Schemes are available to enable all employees to benefit from business success without subscription.

The Board is seeking approval to issue up to an additional 5% of the Company's issued share capital for cash for use only in connection with an acquisition or a specified capital investment. Such proposal is not supported as it is considered that the 5% limit sought under the general authority above is sufficient. Best practice would be to seek a specific authority from shareholders in relation to a specific transaction if such situation arises. As this is not the case, an oppose vote is therefore recommended.

A dividend policy was put forward for shareholder's approval, which is welcomed. The company have disclosed a voting policy indicating how they vote on issues relating to investment and investee companies. In addition, it is noted ESG matters are taken into account in investment decisions which is welcomed. Administration and company secretarial duties are undertaken by the Investment Manager of the company. Independence from the management company is considered a key governance issue affecting investment trusts and to ensure that the management company is not used as a conduit for shareholder communication with the board. - addressing how much of the discount can be explained by capitalisation of the costs (the Total Expense Ratio),

- setting out why the board believes that the performance of the incumbent management is not a contributory factor to the discount, and
- setting out how the current fee structure might be contributing to the discount, for example some investment companies cap management fees, or reduce the manager fee the larger the fund gets,

LEROY SEAFOOD GROUP ASA AGM - 23-05-2023

6. Approve the Remuneration Report
It is proposed to approve the implementation of the remuneration policy. The payout is in line with best practice, under 200% of the fixed salary. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. In addition, there are no claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration component which makes it unlikely that shareholders will be able to reclaim any variable remuneration unfairly paid out. On this basis, opposition is recommended.

7. Appoint the Auditors
KPMG proposed. No non-audit fees were paid to the auditors in the past two years. This approach is commended.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).
The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state.
PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. SHELL PLC AGM - 23-05-2023

1. Receive the Annual Report

The annual report was made available sufficiently before the meeting and has been audited and certified. However, there are concerns surrounding the sustainability policies and practice at the company and the lack of board level accountability for sustainability issues. Therefore, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. These concerns should have been addressed in the annual report submitted to shareholders, however the annual report fails to address these concerns adequately and therefore this resolution cannot be supported.

Despite having some climate targets, the company does not have both a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 and an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change not having both adequate short term target and a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors. As such, an oppose vote is recommended.

2. Approve Remuneration Policy

Changes proposed: i) Severance policy: under Wael Sawan and Sinead Gorman's service contracts, both the employee and the employer can terminate employment by giving 12 months' written notice, replacing the previous policy which accounted for Dutch statutory provisions, ii) Pension: Shell's long-standing policy has been to provide Executive Directors with pension benefits aligned with those for the wider workforce in their home country. To enhance transparency and ensure retirement benefits are consistent with the UK headquarters of Shell, Executive Director pensions (including for Wael Sawan and Sinead Gorman) will be aligned with defined contribution pension arrangements offered to Shell's UK employees (currently 20% of salary) and iii) TSR underpin: the existing LTIP has the added complexity of an underpin, whereby the vesting outcome is capped at 100% should the TSR performance condition fail to rank in a vesting position. This was introduced as a mechanism to support alignment between pay outcomes and the shareholder experience at a time when the LTIP was wholly based on relative performance. However, this provision adds complexity to the plan and is not market-aligned, with the REMCO not being aware of any similar examples of a TSR-based underpin being used by any other FTSE30 company. Nor has experience proven it a necessary Policy feature as the underpin has not been invoked to date. Therefore, in the interests of simplifying the plan, the REMCO are proposing to remove the TSR underpin from the 2024 awards onwards.

Total variable pay could reach 860% of the salary for the CEO and 780% of the salary for the CFO and is considered excessive since is higher than 200%. In line with best practice, half of the annual bonus is deferred into shares and released after three years. The annual bonus is subject to malus and clawback provisions. For the portion of the bonus deferred into shares, additional shares may be released representing the value of dividends payable on the vested shares. The Company states that the extent to which the LTIP dividend shares vest is subject to performance conditions tied to the LTIP award. LTIP awards are subject to a three year performance period which is not considered sufficiently long-term however a three year holding period is used. Performance conditions do not operate interdependently. Dividend equivalent payments are permitted under the plan. Such payments misalign shareholder and executive interests as shareholders must subscribe for shares in order to receive dividends whereas participants in the scheme do not.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

3. Approve the Remuneration Report

All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The CEO salary is in the upper quartile of a peer comparator group which raises concerns over the excessiveness of their pay. The CEO's total realised variable pay is considered excessive at 528.4% of salary (Annual Bonus: 182.4, LTIP: 346%). The ratio of CEO to average employee pay has been estimated and is not considered acceptable at 37:1.

During the year under review, Ofgem said that Shell must refund and compensate 11,275 customers after it sent the wrong rates to the users' prepayment meters. This meant that customers were forced to pay above the price cap at various times during January 2019. Shell's consumer arm, Shell Energy Retail, was instructed to pay GBP 106,000 in refunds, GBP 400,000 into Ofgem's consumer redress fund, and GBP 30,970 in extra "goodwill payments" to affected customers. The prepayment meter customers, who include some of the UK's most vulnerable households, will receive refunds of GBP 9.40 on average. While the full impact of this decision is yet to be ascertained, there are concerns about the sufficiency of the board-level ethics and compliance oversight. The Audit Committee should take responsibility for overseeing the company's compliance policies, including through effective whistleblower policies. Owing to the apparent failure of board-level oversight to prevent fraud, opposition is recommended to the re-election of the Audit Committee Chair.

16. Re-appoint Ernst & Young LLP as the Auditors of the Company
EY proposed. Non-audit fees represented 4.76% of audit fees during the year under review and 4.62% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. 24. Approve the Shell Share Plan 2023
It is proposed to the shareholders to approve the Company's Share Plan 2023. Under the proposed plan the Company will grant awards over Shell shares to Executive Directors, members of the Executive Committee, Senior Executives and other eligible employees. Awards may be granted by the Directors over ordinary shares in the Company (or American Depositary Receipts representing those shares) ("Shares") in the form of conditional awards or options which may have an exercise price. The vesting of awards may be subject to the satisfaction of performance conditions. When an award is not subject to a performance condition, it will normally vest on the third anniversary of the date of grant. Awards subject to performance conditions will normally vest as soon as reasonably practicable after the end of the performance period (or on such later date as the Directors determine) to the extent that the performance conditions have been satisfied. Awards not subject to performance conditions will normally vest on the third anniversary of grant (or such other date as the Directors determine). Where an award is partly subject to performance conditions, the whole of the award will normally vest as soon as reasonably practicable after the end of the performance period. Options will normally be exercisable from the vesting date until the tenth anniversary of the grant date. At any time before a conditional award has vested or an option has been exercised, the Directors may decide to pay a participant a cash amount equal to the value of the Shares they would have otherwise received. When a forfeitable share award vests, it ceases to be subject to forfeiture restrictions and the Shares comprised in the award can then be sold by the participant.
LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

25. Approve Shell's Energy Transition
Governance
The climate policy appears to be adequately linked to the governance of the company overall. The chair is indicated as being responsible for oversight of the climate strategy and members of the senior management have accrued significant experience in climate-related issues within the sector of the company.
There is adequate experience and knowledge of climate change on the board of directors, including at least one non-executive director with significant experience of decarbonisation measures from within the core sector of operations of the company.
There is no evidence of adequate training and learning on the Board or senior management of climate-related issues, most relevantly decarbonization.
The company has committed to stop financing new plans based on fossil fuels, which is welcomed. In addition to cost pressures, demands on companies to act on climate change have grown and oil and gas companies must now prove that they are committed to energy transition in tangible credible ways.
The company has has not pledged to review or end membership of trade associations or industry environmental lobbying groups, where these pursue goals or advertise actions contrary to the company's climate strategy, which appears inconsistent with its goals and an obstacle to its effectiveness.
Disclosure
The company climate strategy for the overall required energy transition includes a defined timeline, by which progress in emission reductions can be measured.
The company's targets are in line with a plan to limit global warming to 1.5 degrees when compared to pre-industrial levels. This is considered to be best practice, and represents one of the more resilient scenarios.

The company has committed to net zero by 2050 but this commitment only extends to part of its Scope 1, Scope 2 and Scope 3 emissions. This is considered to be inconsistent with an adequate commitment to a full energy transition, as shareholders are unable to make an informed assessment on the material efforts to reduce emissions and increase the resilience of the company in the long term. In its Energy Transition Progress Report 2022 (page 2) the Board has considered setting a Scope 3 absolute emissions target but has found it would be against the financial interests of our shareholders and would not help to mitigate global warming.
PIRC Analysis
Beyond the fact that there is no evidence of board training on decarbonization measures and strategies and how to oversee them, concerns are raised from the company not considering setting targets for Scope 3 emissions (Scope 3 emissions, also referred to as value chain emissions, may represent the majority of an organization's total greenhouse gas emissions) or not pledging to end membership of those associations that are effectively conducting advocacy against the company's own climate policy. On balance, opposition is recommended.

Proponent's argument: National Legal and Policy Center request that, beginning in 2023, Merck & Co., Inc. report annually to shareholders about the nature and extent to which corporate operations depend on, and are vulnerable to, Communist China, which is a serial human rights violator, a geopolitical threat, and an adversary to the United States. "Communist China, and by extension the companies it controls, were also identified in the U.S. State Department's 2022 Trafficking in Persons Report as a state sponsor of human trafficking. They are now subject to the Uyghur Forced Labor Prevention Act, which imposes strict verification of parts and products imported from China, that they are not generated from slave labor. A July 2022 joint statement from the leaders of the British and American domestic intelligence agencies warned that the Communist Chinese Party is the greatest threat to the international order. "We consistently see that it's the Chinese government that poses the biggest long-term threat to our economic and national security, and by 'our,' I mean both of our nations, along with our allies in Europe and elsewhere," said FBI Director Christopher Wray. Given the controversial, if not dangerous, nature of doing business in and with China, shareholders have the right to know the degree to which its resources are at risk due to the extent of Merck's business operations in China, and its dependence on its relationship with the communist government."
Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "Overseeing risk is an important component of the Board's engagement on strategic planning. The Board's approach to overseeing risk management leverages the Board's leadership structure and ensures the Board oversees risk through both a Company-wide approach and specific areas of competency. Specifically, the Board oversees risk through a Company-wide Enterprise Risk Management ("ERM") process and functioning of Board Committees. The ERM process is reviewed by the Audit Committee of the Board to ensure it is robust and functioning effectively. The ERM process, among other things, seeks to identify emerging risks in business operations and address them appropriately to limit negative consequences to the Company and the data it maintains. Its goal is to provide an ongoing review, implemented across the Company and aligned to Company values and ethics, to identify and assess risk and to monitor risk and agreed-upon mitigating action. If the ERM process identifies a material risk in business operations, it will be elevated through the CEO and the Executive Team to the full Board for consideration. If a risk in business operations transforms into an incident in business operations, the ERM process ensures that effective response and business continuity plans are in place. Through the ERM process, each Board Committee oversees specific areas of risk relevant to the Committee through direct interactions with the CEO, members of the Company's Executive Team and the heads of relevant business divisions, compliance and corporate functions."
PIRC analysis: The requested disclosure on the involvement with businesses in China as a human rights violator appears to be a spoiler resolution to prevent other shareholders from filing resolutions regarding the company's involvement on human rights controversial activities globally and focuses on geopolitical threats with the clear intent to ensure that conservative views on international relations be represented within the company's global activities, as opposed to promoting transparency and accountability around the potential benefits of global operations conducted fairly, and requesting transparency over the financial impact from non-traditionally financial issues to avoid any suspicion and any damage that may cause to the company's reputation. A report on the human rights impact of the company's operations that may be potentially complicit in China's human rights abuses would be in shareholders' interests, but such a proposal does not seem to be in the interest of the proponent. Rather, this proposal appears to use human rights as an argument to ask the company to withdraw from doing business with China, in a view that considered it to be a geopolitical threat to the US and without actual interest in human rights in that country.

9. Shareholder Resolution: Congruency Report of Partnerships with Globalist Organizations

Proponent's argument: The National Center for Public Policy Research request that the company publish a report, at reasonable expense, analyzing the congruency of voluntary partnerships with organizations that facilitate collaboration between businesses, governments and NGOs for social and political ends against the Company's fiduciary duty to shareholders. "The Company's legal duty as a New Jersey For-Profit Corporation requires the Company to serve the interests of its shareholders. Because the Company is not a B-Corporation, all additional Company actions and expenditures with third parties (while permissible) must be shown by the Board to be congruent with the interests of shareholders and the Company's fundamental purpose of making and selling healthcare products. However, the agendas of WEF, CFR and BR are antithetical with the Company's fiduciary duty. This obliges the board to explain how partnerships with such organizations serve the interests of shareholders (rather than Directors). WEF describes itself as an "international organization for public-private cooperation," and that it was "founded on the stakeholder theory, which asserts that an organization is accountable to all parts of society." Similarly, CFR describes itself as a "membership organization" for both "government officials" and "business executives" on an international scale. And BR pretended to redefine "the purpose of a corporation" such that a corporation ought to cater to the special interests of selected "stakeholders" rather than the fundamental interests of its owners, the shareholders. Those agendas are incongruent with the interests of shareholders and the traditional-and legally binding-definition of a corporation. The more the Board pays favor to hand-picked "stakeholders," the less it's accountable to capital-providing shareholders. In partnering with WEF, CFR and BR, then, shareholders are funding the movement designed to debase their own influence within the Company."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. " Along with investment and endless invention, partnerships play a key role in helping us ensure our products are accessible and affordable to those in need and overcome barriers to providing a healthier future for all. In addition, the Company already provides significant disclosures regarding how the Board exercises its responsibility to oversee the Company, including with respect to the Company's strategy, which, in turn allows shareholders to review how the Board is exercising its legal obligations.[...]Barriers to access and quality care exist in many parts of the world. The Company has a role to play in helping to ensure our products are accessible and affordable to those in need and partnerships are important in this regard. For example, the Company is steadfast and dedicated to discovering, developing, supplying and delivering vaccines to help prevent diseases around the world. However, to achieve the broadest possible access and distribution to its vaccines, the Company cannot do it alone and works with governments, international health and development organizations, donor groups, nongovernmental organizations, and others to create new ways to improve vaccine access. In addition, because every community is different, the Company commits to working with organizations that are a part of those communities to help make certain diseases a thing of the past."

PIRC analysis: The requested disclosure on the congruency of political expenditure appears to be a spoiler resolution to prevent other shareholders from filing resolutions regarding the company's diversity and focuses on ideological diversity with the clear intent to ensure that conservative views are represented within the company's political activities, as opposed to promoting transparency and accountability around the potential benefits of diversity and requesting transparency over the financial impact from non-traditionally financial issues, avoid any suspicion and any damage that may cause to the company's reputation, or that the company may adopt a conduct different from what it has committed to. Opposition is recommended.

NORWEGIAN AIR SHUTTLE ASA AGM - 23-05-2023

4. Approve the Remuneration Report
It is proposed to approve the implementation of the remuneration policy. The payout is in line with best practice, under 200% of the fixed salary. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. In addition, there are no claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration component which makes it unlikely that shareholders will be able to reclaim any variable remuneration unfairly paid out. On this basis, opposition is recommended.

FORTERRA PLC AGM - 23-05-2023

2. Re-appoint Ernst & Young LLP as the Auditors of the Company
EY proposed. No non-audit fees were paid to the auditors in the past three years. This approach is commended. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).
The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

13. Approve Remuneration Policy
Changes proposed: i) The Remuneration Committee have added two sustainability metrics focused on decarbonisation and reduction in the use of plastic packaging and ii) The post-employment shareholding requirement is increased to 200% for two years with cliff vesting, to align with best practice.
The changes proposed are positives, however, there are still concerns over the remuneration policy of the Company. Total variable pay could reach 250% of the salary for the CEO and 225% of the salary for the CFO and is deemed excessive since is higher than 200%. On the The Performance Share Plan (PSP), performance period is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term, however a two year holding period applies which is welcomed. Dividend equivalent payments are permitted under the plan. Such payments misalign shareholder and executive interests as shareholders must subscribe for shares in order to receive dividends whereas participants in the scheme do not. Malus and clawback provisions apply to all variable pay.

pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

FULCRUM UTILITY SERVICES LTD EGM - 23-05-2023

1. Approve Authority to Increase Authorised Share Capital

Introduction & Background: On 5 December 2022 the Company announced that it had entered the Facility Agreement with Bayford & Co Ltd and funds managed by the Harwood Capital Management Limited Group (together the Lenders) in respect of the provision of funding of up to GBP 6 million by way of a convertible loan (the Loan). On 6 April 2023 the Company announced that it had amended the Facility Agreement pursuant to which the amount of the Loan being made available to the Company was increased to GBP 11 million. The Loan is convertible into Shares at the discretion of the Lenders from 1 April 2023 or earlier in the Event of Default which is continuing, at the Conversion Price.
Proposal: Authority is sought to increase the authorised share capital of the Company from GBP 500,000 (divided into 500,000,000 shares) to GBP 10,000,000 (divided into 10,000,000,000 shares).
Rationale: The Company says that the the increase is required to permit the issue of the Conversion Shares if the Lenders exercise their right to convert the Loan. The Company is seeking to increase the authorised share capital in the Articles to a much higher amount to permit further equity fundraisings to be undertaken without having to amend the Articles each time.
Recommendation: As the authority exceeds 50% of share capital, it is considered to be excessive. As such, an oppose vote is therefore recommended.

In addition to the share issuance authorities sought above, the Board requests shareholder authority for a capital increase of additional 15%, in case of exceptional demand.

A green shoe authorisation enables an authorization of additional shares in the event of exceptional public demand. In this case, the authorization would increase allow the placement of up to 15% additional new shares within a thirty day period at a price equal to that of the initial offer. There are concerns with such authorities as they may potentially represent a discount superior to the discount to which the initial authorisation is limited due to a potential rise in share price in the period between original issuance and secondary issuance. Given the potential for inequitable treatment of shareholders, opposition is recommended.

The Board proposes the approval of a new equity-based incentive plan. Under the plan, participants will be allotted shares that will vest over a three-year period. Performance targets have been quantified at this time, which is above market practice. However, the potential total reward raises excessiveness concerns (together with other incentives) and the vesting period of three years is considered to be short term.

LTIP based schemes are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the Company (creating capital and - lawful - dividends). They act as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute Company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that the Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Holding an executive position is incompatible with this and a vote to Oppose is recommended. Furthermore, the director is also Chair of the Nomination Committee. Gender balance on the Board is under 20%, which is considered as best practice in this market, although there are no specific local legal requirements or recommendations. Regardless of the level of independence, it is considered that it is the responsibility of the most senior Board members and members of the Nomination Committee, to ensure that there is adequate gender diversity on the Board. Additionally, there are no independent Directors on the Board. It is considered that the Nomination Committee has a responsibility to consider overall board independence when nominating new directors for appointment. As the Nomination Committee has apparently not acted on this requirement, opposition is recommended.

THERMO FISHER SCIENTIFIC INC. AGM - 24-05-2023

1a. Elect Marc N. Casper - Chair & Chief Executive
Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal. In addition, the company does not have a board-level sustainability committee. Therefore, the Chair of the Board is considered accountable for the Company's sustainability programme and the programme is not considered adequate to minimise the material risks linked to sustainability.

1h. Elect Lars R. Sørensen - Non-Executive Director
Non-Executive Director. Not considered independent owing to a tenure of over nine years. There is insufficient independent representation on the Board. Regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders. Opposition is recommended.

The Board proposes the approval of the Thermo Fisher Scientific Inc. Amended and Restated 2013 Stock Incentive Plan which was approved by the Board on February 22, 2023.
LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

Vote Cast: Oppose Results: For: 94.3, Abstain: 0.2, Oppose/Withhold: 5.6,

6. Approval of the Company's 2023 Global Employee Stock Purchase Plan
It is proposed to approve a restricted share plan for employees and corporate officers. The Board would receive the authority to set beneficiaries and other conditions. After allotment, shares will be restricted for three years, which is not considered to be sufficiently long term. The Company states that exercise of shares will be based on targets, which at this time remain undisclosed.
Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. On the other hand, executives are also among the beneficiaries: it is considered that support should not be given to stock or share option plans that do not lay out clear performance criteria, targets and conditions. On balance, opposition is recommended.

It is proposed to approve the implementation of the remuneration policy. There are concerns regarding excess as the total variable remuneration exceeded 200% of the salary. In addition, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. 11. Approve the Remuneration Report of Jacques Aschenbroich, Chairman of the Board Until 31 December 2022
It is proposed to approve the remuneration paid or due to Christophe Perillat with a binding vote. The payout is in line with best practice, under 200% of the fixed salary. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. In addition, there are no claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration component which makes it unlikely that shareholders will be able to reclaim any variable remuneration unfairly paid out. It is proposed to authorise the Board to purchase Company's shares for 10% and 26 months. This resolution will not be supported unless the Board has set forth a clear, cogent and compelling case demonstrating how the authority would benefit long-term shareholders. As no clear justification was provided by the Board, an oppose vote is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

20. Authorise the Board to Waive Pre-emptive Rights
It is proposed to exclude pre-emption rights on shares issued over a period of 18 months. The corresponding authority for issuing shares without pre-emptive rights, requested in a previous proposal, does not exceed guidelines (10%). However it is considered that shareholders should be allowed to vote on such resolutions annually. Opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

22. Approve Authority to Increase Authorised Share Capital and Issue Shares
Authority is sought to increase the authorised share capital of the Company up to 15 percent. At this time, the company has not disclosed whether successive increases would be carried out with or without pre-emptive rights. As such, the aggregate authority may exceed recommended limits for issues with or without pre-emptive rights. An oppose vote is therefore recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

25. Authorise the Board of Directors to increase the number of securities to be issued in the case of issuing securities with or without subscription rights
In addition to the share issuance authorities sought above, the Board requests shareholder authority for a capital increase of additional 15%, in case of exceptional demand.
A green shoe authorisation enables an authorization of additional shares in the event of exceptional public demand. In this case, the authorization would increase allow the placement of up to 15% additional new shares within a thirty day period at a price equal to that of the initial offer. There are concerns with such authorities as they may potentially represent a discount superior to the discount to which the initial authorisation is limited due to a potential rise in share price in the period between original issuance and secondary issuance. Given the potential for inequitable treatment of shareholders, opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

28. Amend Articles: 14.1
It is proposed to increase the age limit for the board. Although age per se is not considered a factor that should discriminate the re-election of directors on the board, it is considered that the company should activate its succession plan, instead of amending the articles ad hoc, in order to accommodate the increasing age of the chair. Opposition is recommended.

AMAZON.COM INC. AGM - 24-05-2023

1a. Elect Jeffrey P. Bezos - Chair (Executive)
Executive Chair. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that the Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Holding an executive position is incompatible with this and a vote to Oppose is recommended. As the Company has not constituted a Sustainability Committee, the Chair of the Board is considered accountable for the Company's sustainability programme and the programme is not considered adequate to minimise the material risks linked to sustainability.
During the year under review, the company has been found to have violated labour or employment standards and there are concerns over how this can affect both the company's workers and its reputation. On 16 December 2022, the US Department of Labour said that Amazon had failed to properly record work-related injuries and illnesses in five states, as part of an ongoing investigation into the company's safety policies. The US Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) said that it cited Amazon for 14 separate recordkeeping violations, and the company faces USD 29,000 in fines. Also in December 2022, fired amazon organiser Chris Smalls lost a bid to revive a lawsuit alleging race bias over his dismissal. Prior to this, in October 2022, a Covid-19 safety case filed by Staten Island workers against Amazon was partially revived by the US Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit. More recently, on 18 January 2023, the Department of Labor's Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) said inspections at three Amazon warehouses discovered workers faced a higher risk of lower back injuries and other musculoskeletal disorders. It said that the risk came from the high frequency with which workers had to lift heavy packages, assume awkward postures and work long hours. The agency also said workers at the company's Florida facility faced "struck-by" hazards, where unevenly stacked merchandise was vulnerable to collapsing. Amazon faces USD 60,269 in possible violations. Additionally, On 22 March 2023, Amazon workers at its Coventry warehouse announced further strikes pertaining to pay issues. Amazon UK announced a pay rise of GBP 0.50 an hour, increasing its minimum hourly pay for warehouse workers to GBP 11. Given this apparent failure to meet labour standards, opposition to the Chair of the Sustainability Committee would be recommended. As the company as not set up a Sustainability Committee, the Chair of the Board is considered accountable for the Company's sustainability programme. As such, given the concerns over the Company's sustainability policies and practice, an oppose vote is recommended.

During the year under review, the company has received at fine due to anti-competitive practices. While the full impact of this decision is yet to be ascertained. On 20 October 2022 Reuters reported that Amazon.com Inc. faced a GBP 900 million lawsuit in the UK, brought by consumer rights advocate Julie Hunter on behalf of British consumers who have made purchases since 2016. Additionally, on 5 April 2023, Ofcom announced that it was proposing to refer the cloud infrastructure services market to the Competition and Markets Authority, saying they were "particularly concerned" about Amazon (AWS) and Microsoft, who control a combined market share of 60-70%. On 15 February 2023, Financial Times reported that Amazon received a series of detailed questions about its purchase of Roomba-maker iRobot from regulators in Brussels and the EU is planning to launch a formal investigation into the e-commerce giant's iRobot acquisition. The EU is concerned about data privacy due to the device's ability to take pictures while moving around and it is argued that the deal could strengthen Amazon's market position in the home electronics sector. Opposition is recommended to the re-election of the CEO, who is considered to be accountable for these matters.

1h. Elect Indra K. Nooyi - Non-Executive Director
Independent Non-Executive Director and Chair of the Audit Committee.
During the year under review, litigation against the company has reached an unfavourable verdict and there are concerns over how this could financially or reputationally impact the company. As such, it is not clear that the Audit Committee has performed adequate risk oversight to prevent this issue from leading to damaging legal action. In December 2022, Amazon reached a settlement with the EU in two antitrust probes after addressing concerns over how it handles sellers' data, saving it from paying a fine of up to 10% of its global turnover. Therefore, opposition is recommended to the election of the Chair of the Audit Committee. Furthermore, the Company does not have an established whistle-blowing hotline. It is considered that without a whistle-blowing hotline, the company is potentially subject to reputational and financial damage by a lack of supervision of potential malpractice. It is considered the responsibility of the audit committee to review all reports from the whistle-blowing hotline. For this reason, opposition is recommended.

Vesting period is three years and as such is considered to be short-term, while performance targets have not been fully disclosed in a quantified manner at this time.

LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

9. Shareholder Resolution: Report on Government Take-Down Requests

Proponent's argument: National Legal and Policy Center request that Amazon.com, Inc. ("Company") provide a report, published on the company's website and updated semi-annually–and omitting proprietary information and at reasonable cost–that specifies the Company's policy in responding to requests to remove or take down content from its platforms by the Executive Office of the President, Members of Congress, or any other agency, entity or subcontractor on behalf of the United States Government. "The Company regularly discriminates, censoring products based on viewpoint. It famously removed social media platform Parler, without notice, from its cloud hosting service in January 2021. The Company also banned the sale of books by a Russian philosopher, almost certainly at the behest of the U.S. Treasury Department. Meanwhile, several versions of "Mein Kampf" by Adolf Hitler are available for sale on the site. The Company has also been pressured by at least one U.S. Senator to censor materials that "peddl[e] misinformation about COVID-19 vaccines and treatments." Even widely accepted views on issues can be removed from the Company's sales platform. One example is the removal of a book on transgenderism, written by a former Heritage Foundation scholar. Shareholders need to know whether the Company cooperates with government officials engaged in unconstitutional censorship, opening the Company to liability claims by victims. Shareholders also need to know whether the Company fails to disclose these potential liabilities as material risks in its public filings."
Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "Regardless of whether a product or content is flagged through our own proactive compliance efforts or by a government or law enforcement official, a customer, or a third party, we follow the same process: we review the product or content against our policies and the law, where applicable. If we determine a product or content violates the law or our policies, we remove it immediately and may take other appropriate action, such as suspending or banning a seller's account. [...] We have implemented proactive processes wherever possible so that our products and content are trustworthy, safe, and legal. This includes machine learning tools and other automation to remove products and content that violate our policies. In addition to automated reviews, Amazon employs thousands of content policy, engineering, legal, and other professionals to monitor and enforce our content guidelines and acceptable use policies and to manage secondary reviews post-automation. Some teams work on a Company-wide basis and others support specific Amazon services, including Twitch, Prime Video, Books, Customer Reviews, and others."
PIRC analysis: The proposal does not request the company to consult with technology and civil liberties experts and civil and human rights advocates to assess the level of risk of misrepresenting facts and allowing or even inciting misinformation by its platform being used by any customer. Rather, the proponent appears to consider that misinformation (such as denying the reality of anthropogenic global warming, or that of the COVID pandemic) should be treated with the same dignity of scientific and fact-based information, on the basis of a flawed assumption of freedom of expression. Research has shown that misinformation has deep impact across society as a whole and appear to be tied to lower-income section of society. This proposal seemingly aims to ensure that misinformative views are represented on Google, as opposed to promoting transparency and accountability around the potential benefits of diversity and requesting transparency over the financial impact from these issues, avoid any suspicion and any damage that may cause to the company's reputation, or that the company may adopt a conduct different from what it has committed to. Opposition is thus recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose Results: For: 1.6, Abstain: 1.1, Oppose/Withhold: 97.4,

14. Shareholder Resolution: Cost/Benefit Analysis of Racial Equity Programs

Proponent's argument: National Center for Public Policy Research request that Amazon conduct and report on a cost/benefit analysis of its Diversity, Equity & Inclusion programs. The report should omit proprietary or confidential information and should consider all relevant costs and benefits, including the reputational costs arising from discriminating on the basis of race, sex and orientation; the financial costs of selecting employees on bases other than merit; the costs associated with relying on incomplete or biased evidence, and related costs. "The publication of audits often triggers more negative news, criticism, and boycotts of the company by potentially wide swathes of consumers. Such reports may also fuel unwarranted government investigations, employee grievances, and meritless discrimination claims. The concept of "racial equity" that underlies Diversity, Equity & Inclusion programs is itself discriminatory. Equity means, according to its chief proponents, racial discrimination now to make up for other discrimination by other people against other people in the past. Per Ibram X. Kendi, "the only remedy to racist discrimination is antiracist discrimination. The only remedy to past discrimination is present discrimination. The only remedy to present discrimination is future discrimination." Under equity theory, this discrimination must continue until artificial parities of outcome are achieved: "When I see racial disparities, I see racism," notes Kendi. Where adopted, programs that seek to establish racial and social "equity" have raised significant objections, including the concern that the programs and practices themselves are deeply racist, sexist, otherwise discriminatory, and potentially in violation of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. In practice, what establishing "equity" means is distribution of pay and authority on the basis of superficial categories rather than by merit."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "We take seriously our commitment to diversity and respect for people from all backgrounds, including gender, gender identity, race, ethnicity, religion, creed, political ideology, sexual orientation, veteran status, disability, and other dimensions of diversity, which are enduring values for us as reflected in a number of our policies, including the Amazon Global Human Rights Principles. Diversity, equity, and inclusion are cornerstones of our continued success and critical components of our culture. We believe that diverse and inclusive teams have a positive impact on our products and services and they help us better serve customers, selling partners, content creators, employees, and community stakeholders from every background."
PIRC analysis: The potential benefits of staff diversity lie in widening the perspectives on human resources brought to bear on decision-making, avoiding too great a similarity of attitude and helping companies understand their workforces as a kaleidoscope of customers, marketplace, supply chain and society as a whole. Disclosure surrounding the company's staff composition allows shareholders to consider diversity in the context of the long-term interests of the company, including the ability to attract and retain key talent. Disclosure of a policy to improve diversity and goals that have been set to meet this policy also reassures shareholders that a diverse board is not just an aspiration but a goal. However, this resolution appears to be filed by a right-wing policy think tanks as a spoiler resolution to prevent other shareholders from filing resolutions regarding the company's diversity and focuses on financial analysis with the clear intent to ensure that conservative views are represented on the board as well as so-called liberal perspectives. In addition, its focus on costs and benefits appears to be flawed and artificially focusing on the short-term costs, while deliberately ignoring the long-term impacts from effective diversity and inclusion at the company. A vote against the resolution is recommended.

EMPIRIC STUDENT PROPERTY PLC AGM - 24-05-2023

2. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The CEO salary is in line with the workforce. The CEO salary is in the median of the competitor group. Total variable pay for the year under review was 67.75% of the salary, it is noted that no LTIP award vested which is commendable. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee is not considered acceptable at 22:1. PIRC consider acceptable a ratio up to 20:1

Vote Cast: Oppose Results: For: 88.7, Abstain: 0.0, Oppose/Withhold: 11.3,

3. Approve Remuneration Policy
Changes proposed: i) Pension provision for all executive Directors is capped in line with the prevailing pension contribution applicable to the majority of the workforce (currently 7.5% of salary), ii) the new Policy will contain scope for the Committee to amend the calculation of performance targets for events not foreseen at the time original targets were set (for example following material acquisitions, disposals or investments) to ensure they remain a fair reflection of performance. It will also contain flexibility for the Committee to use its discretion to amend the formulaic outturn, upwards or downwards, if it does not consider that the formulaic outcome is a fair and accurate reflection of performance or that the award was achieved within an acceptable risk profile. It will also be made more explicit in the new Policy that ESG related performance measures are able to be used within the annual bonus, iii) Consistent with market practice, the Committee's scope to exempt shares, acquired by an executive Director in a personal capacity, from the post-employment guidelines is clarified and iv) Consistent with market practice, the new Policy will contain flexibility for the reimbursement of specific costs which are approved by the Committee and incurred by an individual in relation to their appointment (for example legal costs) .
Total variable pay could reach 300% of the salary and is deemed excessive since is higher than 200%. The Annual Bonus is paid 60% in cash and 40% defer to shares for three years, this is not considered adequate. It would be preferable 50% of the Bonus to defer to shares for at least three years. Concerns are raised for the LTIP awards since there are no non-financial performance measures attached to the LTIP and so the focus of remuneration policy is not the operational performance of the business as a whole or the individual roles of each of the executives in achieving that performance. Instead, the focus of the remuneration policy is financial KPIs, which mainly include factors beyond an individual director's control. Performance period is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term, however a two year holding period apply which is welcomed. The performance metrics are not operating interdependently, such that vesting under the incentive plan is only possible where all threshold targets are met. Malus and clawback provisions apply to all variable pay.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. 5. Shareholder Resolution: Civil Rights, Non-Discrimination and Returns to Merit Audit
Proponent's argument: The National Center for Public Policy Research request that the Board of Directors commission an audit analyzing the impacts of the Company's Diversity, Equity & Inclusion policies on civil rights, non-discrimination and returns to merit, and the impacts of those issues on the Company's business. The audit may, in the Board's discretion, be conducted by an independent and unbiased third party with input from civil rights organizations, public-interest litigation groups, employees and shareholders of a wide spectrum of viewpoints and perspectives. "Many companies – including Bank of America, American Express, Verizon, Pfizer, CVS and BlackRock itself - have adopted "Diversity, Equity & Inclusion" (DEI) programs, trainings and officers that seek to establish racial and social "equity." But in practice, what "equity" really means is the distribution of pay and authority on the basis of race, sex, orientation and ethnicity rather than by merit. Where adopted, such programs have raised significant objections, including the concern that the programs and practices themselves are deeply racist, sexist, otherwise discriminatory and potentially in violation of the Civil Rights Act of 1964.3 And that by devaluing merit, corporations have sacrificed employee competence, moral and productivity to the altar of "diversity." [...] When including employees in the audit, the Company must allow employees to speak freely and confidentially without fear of reprisal or disfavor. Too many employers have established company stances that silence employees who disagree with the company's asserted positions, and then pretended that those who have been empowered by the companies' partisan positioning represents the true and only voice of all employees. This creates a deeply hostile workplace for some employees, and is both immoral and likely illegal."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "BlackRock believes a diverse workforce and an equitable and inclusive work environment are key factors in achieving better outcomes across all levels of our business. BlackRock has made a long-term commitment to cultivating DEI in our workforce and leadership team through our hiring, retention, promotion and development practices. As part of this long-term commitment, BlackRock has instituted a multi-year DEI strategy that we believe is actionable, measurable and designed to apply across the many countries in which the firm operates. The Company has aligned our DEI strategy with the firm's business priorities and long-term objectives, and the strategy focuses on the Company's talent and culture, responding to the needs of our clients, and supporting the communities in which we operate. An important aspect of BlackRock's DEI strategy is to foster an inclusive, equitable work environment in which employees feel connected to BlackRock's culture and supported in pursuit of their professional goals. PIRC analysis: Disclosure surrounding the company-approved charities allows shareholders to consider diversity in the context of the long-term interests of the company, including stakeholder relationship.However, this resolution appears to focus on ideological diversity with the clear intent to ensure that some views are specifically represented among the charities to which the company's customers can donate. The proponents' request appears to be based on a flawed methodology: the fact that the company provides customers with access to a variety of viewpoints, including books that some customers may find objectionable, does not mean that all viewpoints should be acceptable or that customers should be able to donate via company's programme to any organisation of their choice. Given the diversity that already exists among the organisations available for donations, a vote against the resolution is recommended.

3. Receive the Annual Report

The financial statements were made available sufficiently before the meeting and has been audited and certified. However, there are some concerns surrounding the board-level governance of sustainability issues, policies and practice. As such, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. These concerns should have been addressed in the annual report submitted to shareholders, but the annual report fails to address these concerns adequately and therefore abstention is recommended.

Mr Cordt was Chair of the Supervisory Board of RHI from 2010 until 2017 as well as Vice-Chair from 2007 to 2010. It is considered that the Chair of the Board should be independent regardless of of the overall independence on the Board.
Chair of the Nomination Committee and no target has been set to increase the level of female representation on the Board, which currently falls below the recommended 33% target.
In addition, at this time, the company has not discussed how the targets included in the Parker review, calling for at least one director representing an ethnic minority on the board of FTSE 250 companies by 2024, will be achieved. The company has not provided an adequate explanation and it is considered that the the chair of the nomination committee should be accountable for inaction on diversity.

PwC proposed. There were no non-audit fees during the year under review and non-audit fees represented 1.18% of audit fees on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

9. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The CEO salary is in the upper quartile of PIRC's comparator group which raises concerns over potential excessiveness. The CEO's variable pay for the year under review was 158% of base salary. The ratio of CEO pay compared to the average employee pay is not considered acceptable at 51:1.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

12. Approve RHI Magnesita Long Term Incentive Plan
It is proposed to approve the RHI Magnesita Long Term Incentive Plan. In line with the existing plan, the Plan rules are drafted to provide flexibility for different types of share awards to be granted including share options, forfeitable shares, and performance share awards. However, it is only intended at this time that performance share awards will be granted to the Executive Directors and senior management of the Company. It is stated that directors may make the vesting of awards conditional on the achievement of performance conditions, however these have not been disclosed at this time, which is contrary to best practice. Individual awards are limited to 200% of base salary or 250% in exceptional circumstances, which is considered excessive. Dividend equivalent payments are permitted under the plan. Such payments misalign shareholder and executive interests as shareholders must subscribe for shares in order to receive dividends whereas participants in the scheme do not. This could lead to excessive rewards particularly when combined with the annual bonus. The performance period is three years, which is not considered sufficiently long term however a two year holding period is introduced.
LTIP based schemes are inherently flawed. There is a risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They can act as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company under-performance and long term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure. An oppose vote is recommended.

15. Re-appoint PwC as the Auditors
PwC proposed. No non-audit fees were paid to the auditors in the past three years. This approach is commended. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn’t an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn’t merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).
The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC’s view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an ’expectations gap’ does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

The authority is limited to 33% of the Company’s issued share capital and expires at the next AGM. Within acceptable limits. However, at the previous AGM, the corresponding proposal was opposed by 11.61% of the vote. As this is considered by PIRC to be significant and the company does not appear to have disclosed steps to address shareholders’ concerns on the issue, abstention is recommended.

Vote Cast: Abstain Results: For: 87.8, Abstain: 0.1, Oppose/Withhold: 12.1,

20. Issue Shares for Cash for the Purpose of Financing an Acquisition or Other Capital Investment
The Board is seeking approval to issue up to an additional 5% of the Company’s issued share capital for cash for use only in connection with an acquisition or a specified capital investment. Such proposal is not supported as it is considered that the 5% limit sought under the general authority above is sufficient. Best practice would be to seek a specific authority from shareholders in relation to a specific transaction if such situation arises. As this is not the case, an oppose vote is therefore recommended.

M&G PLC AGM - 24-05-2023

2. Approve Remuneration Policy
Changes proposed: i) Shareholding requirement for the Chief Financial Officer increased from 200% to 250% of salary, ii) Removal of the legacy benefits provisions that applied to John Foley, the former Chief Executive, as these are no longer required, and the removal of the ability to provide a legacy defined benefit arrangement to executives, iii) Removal of the exceptional limit for LTIP awards of up to 400% of salary in the year of hire and iv) Amendments extending the current criteria for applying malus and clawback.
Total potential variable pay could reach 500% of salary and is deemed excessive since is higher than 200%. On the incentives awards, performance measures are applied independently and can vest regardless of the performance in respect to other elements. For the long-term incentive plan, performance period is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term, however a two year holding period applies which is welcomed. In addition, dividends may accrue on vesting awards from the date of grant. Such rewards misalign shareholders and executive interests as shareholders must subscribe for shares in order to receive dividends whereas participants in the scheme do not. Malus and clawback provisions apply to all variable pay.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The authority is limited to one third of the Company’s issued share capital. This cap can reduced to 23% of the issued share capital if shares are issued in connection with an offer by way of a rights issue. This resolution is in connection with the issue of Mandatory Convertible Securities.
The use of Contingent Convertible Securities or CoCos is not considered appropriate as they put investors at significant risk of dilution in the event that conversion occurs. CoCos are relatively new instruments and there are concerns that CoCos may create a situation which whilst converting some debt to equity actually disincentives equity investors from putting more new funds in to banks via rights issues, due to the dilutive effect of the conversion taking away much, or some, of the premium that would ordinarily accrue to shareholders. Recent events at Deutsche Bank has led to others voicing their concerns about the destabilising effect of CoCos on both the CoCo price and the share price. Authority is limited to 5% of the Company's issued share capital and will expire at the next AGM. Within acceptable limits. This is in connection with the issue of Mandatory Convertible Securities.
The use of Contingent Convertible Securities or CoCos is not considered appropriate as they put investors at significant risk of dilution in the event that conversion occurs. CoCos are relatively new instruments and there are concerns that CoCos may create a situation which whilst converting some debt to equity actually disincentives equity investors from putting more new funds in to banks via rights issues, due to the dilutive effect of the conversion taking away much, or some, of the premium that would ordinarily accrue to shareholders. Recent events at Deutsche Bank has led to others voicing their concerns about the destabilising effect of CoCos on both the CoCo price and the share price. Based on these concerns, an oppose vote is recommended

LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

4. Appoint the Auditors: PwC
PwC proposed. Non-audit fees represented 0.13% of audit fees during the year under review and 1.70% on a three-year aggregate basis. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

8. Shareholder Resolution: Report on Ensuring Respect for Civil Liberties
Proponent's argument: National Center for Public Policy Research request the Board of Directors conduct an evaluation and issue a report within the next year, at reasonable cost and excluding proprietary information and disclosure of anything that would constitute an admission of pending litigation, evaluating how it oversees risks related to discrimination against individuals based on their race, color, religion (including religious views), sex, national origin, or political views, and whether such discrimination may impact individuals' exercise of their constitutionally protected civil rights. "The Statement on Debanking and Free Speech identified many companies in the financial services industry that frequently include vague and subjective standards in their policies like "hate speech" or promoting "intolerance" that allow employees to deny or restrict service for arbitrary or discriminatory reasons. The 2022 edition of the Viewpoint Diversity Business Index3 also identified numerous examples of this in many companies' terms of service. The inclusion of vague and arbitrary terms risks impacting clients' exercise of their constitutionally protected civil rights, by creating the potential that such persons or groups will be denied access to essential services as a consequence of their speech or political activity. Moreover, they risk giving fringe activists and governments a foothold to demand that private financial institutions deny service under the sweeping, unfettered discretion that such policies provide. These actions and policies are an affront to public trust, destabilize the market, and threaten the ability of American citizens to live freely and do business according to their deeply held convictions. "

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "PayPal is committed to the integrity of our platform, and to ensuring the safety, security and privacy of our customers and others, while complying with legal requirements. PayPal suspends or closes accounts in accordance with our obligations as a regulated financial institution and to ensure the safety of our platform and our customers. Specifically, PayPal's risk and compliance framework includes policies and monitoring mechanisms to identify potential fraud and financial crimes, including money laundering, sanctions risks and other illegal activities. The card network, merchant acquirers and banking partners that PayPal relies upon contractually to execute transactions for consumers and merchants also impose restrictions on the types of transactions that we can process on our platform. These partner obligations, and others, including those required by law, are set forth in our Acceptable Use Policy (AUP), in connection with our User Agreement (UA). Collectively, these policies and accompanying processes are intended to protect PayPal's customers, our platform and the payments ecosystem against illicit and harmful activity such as counterfeiting or fraud. "
PIRC analysis: The potential benefits of staff diversity lie in widening the perspectives on human resources brought to bear on decision-making, avoiding too great a similarity of attitude and helping companies understand their workforces as a kaleidoscope of customers, marketplace, supply chain and society as a whole. Disclosure surrounding the company's staff composition allows shareholders to consider diversity in the context of the long-term interests of the company, including the ability to attract and retain key talent. Disclosure of a policy to improve diversity and goals that have been set to meet this policy also reassures shareholders that a diverse board is not just an aspiration but a goal. However, this resolution appears to be filed by a right-wing policy think tanks as a spoiler resolution to prevent other shareholders from filing resolutions regarding the company's diversity and focuses on ideological diversity with the clear intent to ensure that conservative views are represented on the board as well as so-called liberal perspectives. Given the diversity that already exists on company's staff, a vote against the resolution is recommended.

Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal. 1.2. Approve the Remuneration Report
It is proposed to approve the implementation of the remuneration policy. The payout is in line with best practice, being under 200% of the fixed salary. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. 4.4. Amend Articles: Introduction of a capital range and corresponding amendments to the Articles of Incorporation
It is proposed to amend the articles in order to introduce a capital range of authorised conditional share capital, and disapply pre-emptive rights for a portion of this range. Under the revised Swiss corporate law, shareholders may authorise the Board of Directors to increase or reduce the authorised share capital within a certain range, for a period of up to five years. The board has proposed a capital range of CHF 7,185,714.55 and CHF 8,782,538.55, to last for five years following the date of the upcoming meeting. The restriction of pre-emption rights does not exceed 10% of share capital. However, the duration of the authority exceeds 12 months. It is considered that shareholders should have the opportunity to vote on any exclusion of pre-emption rights annually. As the time limit for the exclusion of pre-emptive rights exceeds guidelines, opposition is recommended.

5.1. Elect David J. Jacob - Chair (Executive)

In addition, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets for the performance criteria of its variable remuneration component, which as a consequence may lead to overpayment against underperformance. In addition, there are no claw-back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration component which makes it unlikely that shareholders will be able to reclaim any variable remuneration unfairly paid out. The board seeks authority to issue convertible bonds and to exclude subscription rights for a nominal amount corresponding to more than 10% of the share capital and for 2 years. As the authority would also include bonds convertible and without pre-emptive rights, the amount under this authority exceeds guidelines for issues of shares without pre-emptive rights.

In addition to the share issuance authorities sought above, the Board requests shareholder authority for a capital increase of additional 15%, in case of exceptional demand.
A green shoe authorisation enables an authorization of additional shares in the event of exceptional public demand. In this case, the authorization would increase allow the placement of up to 15% additional new shares within a thirty day period at a price equal to that of the initial offer. There are concerns with such authorities as they may potentially represent a discount superior to the discount to which the initial authorisation is limited due to a potential rise in share price in the period between original issuance and secondary issuance. Given the potential for inequitable treatment of shareholders, opposition is recommended.

VANQUIS BANKING GROUP PLC AGM - 25-05-2023

2. Approve Remuneration Policy

Changes in the proposed new policy include: i) the deferred bonus will vest pro-rata in equal amounts over the three year deferral period, as opposed to the former 'cliff vesting' at the end of the period; ii) the policy will provide flexibility to adjust the share price to allow for a lack of dividends in line with regulatory guidance; and iii) there will be an additional ESG underpin for the RSP.

Total potential variable pay could reach a maximum of 250% of the salary which is considered excessive. Annual Bonus performance measures are 60% financials and 40% non-financials in 2023. 40% of the Bonus deferred to shares which will vest pro-rata over a three-year period and 60% is paid in cash. It would be preferable for 50% of the Bonus to be deferred for the entire period. On the Restricted Share Plan (RSP) the awards are vested after a three year performance period which is not considered sufficiently long-term, however, a two year holding period applies which is welcomed. Service contracts normally continue until the director's agreed retirement date or such other date as the parties agree. All service contracts contain provisions for early termination. The contracts of the executive directors are dated 1 February 2018 for the Chief Executive Officer and 1 April 2020 for the Chief Finance Officer. All contracts operate on a rolling basis with 12 months' notice required to be served by either the executive director or the Company

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

3. Approve the Remuneration Report

All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. However, the CEO salary is at the upper quartile of the comparator group, which raises concerns for potential excessiveness. Variable pay for the year under review was approximately at 187.6% of the salary. The pay ratio of CEO pay compared to average employee pay stands at 30:1 and is not considered excessive as it exceeds 20:1.

It is proposed to authorise the Board to allot equity securities in the company up to an aggregate nominal amount of GBP 17,410,909 in connection with the issue of Additional Tier 1 Securities, representing 33% of the Company's issued share capital. The authority will expire at the next AGM.
The use of convertible Securities is not considered appropriate as they put investors at significant risk of dilution in the event that conversion occurs. These securities are relatively new instruments and there are concerns that they may create a situation which whilst converting some debt to equity actually disincentives equity investors from putting more new funds in the banks via rights issues; due to the dilutive effect of the conversion taking away much; or some; of the premium that would ordinarily accrue to shareholders. It would be preferable 50% of the Bonus to be paid in cash and 50% to defer to shares for at least three years. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

3. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The CEO's salary is considered to be in the upper quartile of the competitor group, which raises concerns for potential excessiveness. Total realised rewards during the review period are not considered excessive at 49% of the salary. The ratio of CEO pay compared to average employee pay is considered acceptable at 17:1.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. 11. Re-appoint PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP as the Auditor of the Company

PwC proposed. No non-audit fees were paid to the auditors in the past three years. This approach is commended. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

14. Approval of Headlam Management Incentive Plan

It is proposed to the shareholders to approve the Headlam Management Incentive Plan. he Plan will enable the grant of market value options to senior managers below the Executive Team. The options are intended to focus and incentivise senior managers for multi-year strategy delivery. The Plan is divided into two separate and independent parts, both of which are identical in all material respects unless otherwise indicated in this summary. Part A is intended to be a tax-advantaged 'Company Share Option Plan' ("CSOP") which complies with the requirements of applicable legislation and permits the grant of tax-advantaged CSOP options in the UK. Any employee (including an executive director) of the Company and its subsidiaries will be eligible to participate in the Plan at the discretion of the Board. Options may be satisfied using new issue Shares, treasury Shares or Shares purchased in the market. Normally, an employee may not receive options in any financial year over Shares with a market value exceeding 50 per cent. of their annual base salary in that financial year. In exceptional circumstances, such as recruitment or retention, this limit is increased to 100 per cent. of an employee's annual base salary. Under Part A of the Plan, the aggregate market value of Shares at the date of grant subject to unexercised tax advantaged options granted by the Company shall not exceed £30,000 per employee. Options granted under Part A will normally become capable of exercise three years after grant. Options granted under Part B may become capable of exercise at such time set by the Board. Options will become exercisable to the extent that any performance conditions (or any other objective conditions) have been satisfied and provided the participant remains employed in the Company's group. The Board does not intend to apply performance conditions to initial options.

LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

15. Amendment to Headlam 2017 Performance Share Plan

It is proposed to the shareholders to approve the amendment of the Company's 2017 Performance Share Plan. The current terms of the PSP provide that in ordinary circumstances participants may not receive awards under the PSP in any financial year over shares having a market value in excess of 100 per cent. of their annual base salary in that financial year or 200 per cent. of their annual base salary in exceptional circumstances. To align the PSP to the limit for such purposes under the new Directors' Remuneration Policy proposed under Resolution 2, shareholder approval is sought under Resolution 15, to amend the rules of the PSP to provide that participants may not receive awards under the PSP in any financial year over shares having a market value in excess of 150 per cent. of their annual base salary in that financial year. The exceptional individual limit (currently 200 per cent. of their annual base salary) will also be removed. As per the current rules of the PSP, market value for the purposes of the above limit shall be determined by the Board on the day of the grant of an award. The proposed amendment will increase the aggregate maximum opportunity for the variable pay to 275% of the salary which is considered excessive. In line with the recommendation on the approval of the remuneration policy (resolution 2), an oppose vote is recommended.

2. Approve Remuneration Policy
Total potential variable pay could reach 275% of the salary for the CFO and is deemed excessive since is higher than the recommended limit of 200%. Annual Bonus Performance measures and targets are reviewed and set annually by the Remuneration Committee. At least 50% of bonus will be based on financial measures. 50% of any bonus is deferred into shares for two years. Long-term incentive Plan (LTIP) measures are relative TSR and UEPS growth. There are no non-financial performance measures attached to the LTIP and so the focus of remuneration policy is not the operational performance of the business as a whole or the individual roles of each of the executives in achieving that performance. Instead, the focus of the remuneration policy is financial KPIs, which mainly include factors beyond an individual director's control. Performance period is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term. However, Executives are required to hold their vested shares for two years, which is welcomed.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

The ratio of CFO to average employee pay has been estimated and it is considered acceptable at 19:1.

EY proposed. Non-audit fees represented 0.19% of audit fees during the year under review and 0.22% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor.

18. Approve the Hill & Smith 2023 Long Term Incentive Plan
It is proposed to the shareholders to approve the Company's 2023 Long-Term Incentive Plan. Participation in the plan is for any employee of the Company including an executive director. Awards under the LTIP may be in the form of: (a) a conditional right to acquire ordinary shares in the Company ("Shares") at no cost to the participant (a "Conditional Award"); (b) an option to acquire Shares at no cost to the participant (a "Nil-Cost Option"); (c) a right to receive a cash amount which relates to the value of a certain number of notional Shares (a "Cash Award"). It is not anticipated that an executive director will receive a cash award. Awards will be subject to the satisfaction of one or more performance conditions which will determine the proportion (if any) of the Award which will vest following the end of a performance period. Unless the Remuneration Committee determines otherwise, a performance period shall be at least three years long. Awards will not be granted to a participant under the LTIP in respect of any financial year over Shares with a market value in excess of 200% of salary in respect of any financial year. Awards that are subject to one or more performance conditions will normally vest as soon as practicable following the end of the performance period (or on such later date as the Remuneration Committee determines) to the extent that the performance condition(s) has/have been satisfied. Where Awards are granted without performance conditions, they will usually vest on the third anniversary of the grant date (or on such other date as the Remuneration Committee determines). Nil-Cost Options will then normally be exercisable until the tenth anniversary of the grant date. In each case, Awards will not vest and options may not be exercised where a holding period applies (see below) or while disciplinary proceedings are underway against the participant or their conduct is being investigated. Awards may be granted on terms that the participant will not become entitled to receive the Shares, and Nil-Cost Options will not become capable of exercise, until the end of a period of up to two years beginning on the vesting date.
Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. On the other hand, executives are also among the beneficiaries: it is considered that support should not be given to stock or share option plans that do not lay out clear performance criteria, targets and conditions. On balance, opposition is recommended.

19. Approve the Hill & Smith 2023 Executive Share Option Scheme
It is proposed to approve the Company's share option scheme. Under the scheme the Company may grant a Qualifying Option, the grant of an award under the LTIP on terms that the LTIP award is scaled back to take account of any gain made on the exercise of the Qualifying Option. Awards under the Option Scheme will be granted in the form of options to acquire ordinary shares in the Company ("Shares"), with a per Share exercise price equal to the market value of a Share at the date of grant. Unless the Remuneration Committee determines otherwise, options will be subject to the satisfaction of one or more performance conditions (which in the case of Qualifying Options will be objective) which will determine the proportion (if any) of the option which will vest following the end of a performance period. Unless the Remuneration Committee determines otherwise, a performance period shall be at least three years long. Options will not be granted to a participant under the Option Scheme over Shares with a market value in excess of 100% of salary in respect of any financial year.
LTIP based schemes are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the Company (creating capital and - lawful - dividends). They act as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute Company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

11. Re-appoint EY as the Auditors
EY proposed. No non-audit fees were paid to the auditors in the past three years. This approach is commended.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).
The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state.

PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

It is proposed to approve the implementation of the remuneration policy. The payout is in line with best practice, under 200% of the fixed salary. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. In addition, there are no claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration component which makes it unlikely that shareholders will be able to reclaim any variable remuneration unfairly paid out. On this basis, opposition is recommended.

PRUDENTIAL PLC AGM - 25-05-2023

2. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. CEO salary is in line with the workforce. The CEO salary is the in the upper quartile of the competitor group which raises concerns for potential excessiveness. The Group CEO's total realized variable pay is considered excessive at 267.5% of salary (Annual Bonus: 191.6%, LTIP: 75.88%). Ratio of CEO to average employee pay has been estimated and is found unacceptable at 59:1.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

3. Approve Remuneration Policy
Changes proposed: i) Short-term variable pay: For bonus awards made in respect of 2023 performance year onwards, 40% of awards will continue to be deferred for three years. Deferral will either be in cash where share ownership guidelines have been met, or shares where not and ii) Long-term variable pay: Weightings of 2023 PLTIP measures will change as follows: the weighting of the TSR performance measure will be reduced from 50% to 35%, the weighting of the Return on Embedded Value (RoEV) measure will be increased to 40% (from 30%) and the scorecard (to be renamed the 'business integrity scorecard') will be increased to 25% (from 20%). Total variable pay could reach 750% of the salary and is deemed excessive since is higher than 200%. It is noted that regular LTIP awards are below the 550% of the salary, Mr. Anil Wadhwani the CEO will be eligible to receive a PLTIP award of 400% in 2023 which will male his potential overall variable pay at 600% of the salary. On the Annual Bonus 40% of the award is defer to three years and if the shareholding guidelines are met is in cash. This is not considered adequate it would be suggested that 50% of the Bonus to be paid in cash and 50% to defer to shares for at least three years. On the LTIP award performance period is three-years which is not considered sufficiently long-term, however a two-year holding period apply which is welcomed. The performance conditions of the LTIP are not operating interdependently and the payment of dividend equivalent on vested share is also not supported. Directors may be entitled to a dividend income on share awards which are paid out at the point of vesting. Such rewards misalign shareholders and executive interests as shareholders must subscribe for shares in order to receive dividends whereas participants in the scheme do not. Malus and claw back provisions apply for the variable pay.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. 19. Approve the Prudential Long Term Incentive Plan 2023

The PLTIP 2023 is a discretionary share plan, under which the Company may grant awards over Shares to incentivise and retain eligible employees. The PLTIP 2023 will be administered by the Remuneration Committee. Eligible to participate are any employee of the Group, including the Company's executive directors. Awards will not normally be granted to a participant under the PLTIP 2023 over Shares with a market value (as determined by the Committee at the time an award is granted) in excess of 550%of salary in respect of any financial year of the Company. The vesting of awards may (and must, in the case of an award to an Executive Director other than a Recruitment Award, to the extent required by the Company's directors' remuneration policy in force from time to time) be subject to the satisfaction of performance conditions relating to the commercial or financial performance, shareholder return, business plan and/or strategic objectives of the Company. Awards which are subject to performance conditions will normally have those conditions assessed as soon as reasonably practicable after the end of the relevant performance period. The Remuneration Committee may grant awards as conditional awards of Shares, forfeitable Shares or nil or nominal-cost options over Shares. No payment is required for the grant or vesting of an award, which is in line with UK market practice to allow participants to receive the full value of the Shares subject to an award. Unless the Committee determines otherwise, participants will receive an amount (in cash, unless the Committee decides it will be paid in Shares) equal to the value of any dividends which would have been paid on Shares subject to an award in respect of which the award vests by reference to record dates during the period beginning on the grant date and ending on the date on which the award vests. Awards may be satisfied using new issue Shares, treasury Shares or Shares purchased in the market. The number of Shares to satisfy awards granted in any ten-year period which may be issued under the PLTIP 2023 and any other share plan adopted by the Company may not exceed 10% of the issued ordinary share capital of the Company from time to time. It is proposed to approve a restricted share plan for employees and corporate officers. The Board would receive the authority to set beneficiaries and other conditions. The Company states that exercise of shares will be based on targets, which at this time remain undisclosed.
Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. On the other hand, executives are also among the beneficiaries. LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure. On balance, opposition is recommended.

The Board is seeking approval to issue up to an additional 5% of the Company's issued share capital for cash for use only in connection with an acquisition or a specified capital investment. Such proposal is not supported as it is considered that the 5% limit sought under the general authority above is sufficient. Best practice would be to seek a specific authority from shareholders in relation to a specific transaction if such situation arises. As this is not the case, an oppose vote is therefore recommended.

Total variable pay for the year under review was approximately at 75.23% of base salary, consisting of the discretionary deferred share bonus only. The ratio of CEO pay compared to average employee pay is considered highly excessive at 141:1. It is recommended that the CEO pay ratio does not exceed 20:1.

PwC proposed. Non-audit fees represented 47.02% of audit fees during the year under review and 29.38% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees raises some concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. These concerns should have been addressed in the annual report submitted to shareholders, however the annual report fails to address these concerns adequately and therefore this resolution cannot be supported. In addition, the Company faces serious concerns regarding its sustainability policies since On 5 January 2023, it was reported that shareholders had filed a resolution for its 2023 AGM calling for detail on Glencore’s coal production plans. While the company has adopted climate targets, including 15% emissions reduction by 2026 and net zero emissions by 2050, the company does not have specific annual targets beyond 2025. "We believe there is not sufficient evidence that Glencore’s thermal coal production plans are aligned with the goals of the Paris agreement.

Despite having some climate targets, the company does not have both a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 and an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change not having both adequate short term target and a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors. 13. Approve the Company's 2022 Climate Report.
The climate policy appears to be adequately linked to the governance of the company overall. The chair is indicated as being responsible for oversight of the climate strategy and members of the senior management have accrued significant experience in climate-related issues within the sector of the company. There does not appear to be adequate experience and knowledge of climate change on the board of directors, and particularly there is no evidence that any of the directors on the non-executive directors on the board has significant experience of decarbonisation measures from within the core sector of operations of the company. There is evidence of adequate training and learning on the Board and senior management of climate-related issues. The company climate strategy for the overall required energy transition includes a defined timeline, by which progress in emission reductions can be measured. The company has committed to being carbon neutral by 2050 and includes scopes 1, 2 and 3 emission reductions in this commitment.
The company has committed to scope 3 emission reduction targets that would reduce emissions by at least 50% by 2050, which is considered the minimum target in order to stay on track with a global 2C scenario, according to data from the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC). It would be nevertheless be preferred and welcomed for the company to publish more ambitious targets (such as reduction of 85% of scope 3 emissions).

There are concerns raised that the company's emission reduction targets may not be met owing to the company's apparently poor recent record for environmental policy governance and implementation. In addition, despite having some climate targets, the company does not have both a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 and an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Total variable pay for the year under review was 233.9% of the salary and is considered excessive since is higher than 200%. The ratio of CEO pay compared to average employee pay is not considered acceptable, at 78:1.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

CARREFOUR SA AGM - 26-05-2023

1. Approve Financial Statements
The financial statements were made available sufficiently before the meeting and has been audited and certified. However, there are some concerns surrounding the board-level governance of sustainability issues, policies and practice. As such, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. These concerns should have been addressed in the financial statements submitted to shareholders, but the financial statements fail to address these concerns and it is recommended to abstain from voting on this resolution.

5. Elect Alexandre Bompard - Chair & Chief Executive
Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal.

7. Appoint the Auditors
Mazars proposed. Non-audit fees represented 9.56% of audit fees during the year under review and 15.04% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The tenure of the auditor is six years, and re-election will further extend the auditors term to 12 years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor. Opposition is recommended.

8. Approve the Remuneration Paid to Corporate Officers
It is proposed to approve the remuneration paid or due to Corporate Officers with a binding vote. The payout is in line with best practice, under 200% of the fixed salary. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. In addition, there are no claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration component which makes it unlikely that shareholders will be able to reclaim any variable remuneration unfairly paid out. On this basis, opposition is recommended.

However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets for the performance criteria of its variable remuneration component, which as a consequence may lead to overpayment against underperformance. In addition, there are no claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration component which makes it unlikely that shareholders will be able to reclaim any variable remuneration unfairly paid out. On these grounds, opposition is recommended.

17. Authorise the Board to Increase the Number of Shares Issued in case of Exceptional Demand
In addition to the share issuance authorities sought above, the Board requests shareholder authority for a capital increase of additional 15%, in case of exceptional demand.
A green shoe authorisation enables an authorisation of additional shares in the event of exceptional public demand. In this case, the authorisation would increase allow the placement of up to 15% additional new shares within a thirty day period at a price equal to that of the initial offer. There are concerns with such authorities as they may potentially represent a discount superior to the discount to which the initial authorisation is limited due to a potential rise in share price in the period between original issuance and secondary issuance. Given the potential for inequitable treatment of shareholders, opposition is recommended.

18. Approve Issue of Shares for Contribution in Kind

Proposal to authorize for 26 months the Board to allot shares free of charge to employees and executives. Share issued under this authorization will not enjoy pre-emptive rights and will be attributed free of charge to management or employees. 24. Opinion on the Quantification of the Companies Different Scope 3 Action Levers
The Board of Directors proposes for the Company to quantify the initiatives, or activities that are being undertaken to reduce the Company's Scope 3 emissions. The Company has set a target of reducing Scope 3 emissions by 29% by 2030. The initiatives that it is proposed to quantify include: Supplier alignment with targets (100 biggest suppliers will need to prove that they are aligned with a 1.5C trajectory by 2026); Local and national products (which includes doubling fruit and vegetable supply from suppliers located within 50km from stores); Plant proteins (increasing plant-based protein sales in Europe to 500 million euros by 2026); Responsible production (commitment to agro-ecological approach by 2025, actions to tackle deforestation); Packaging reduction and the circular economy (20,000 tonnes of packaging saved, including 15,000 tonnes of plastic packaging by 2025); Waste and food waste management (reducing food waste by 50% by 2025) and the fight against deforestation (reducing the amount of beef from critical areas by 50% by 2026 and 100% by 2030).
Scope 3 emissions (all indirect emissions that occur in the value chain of the reporting company) can be indicators of exposure to climate risks, such as carbon and energy 'hot spots' in the supply chain or use of products. Although their reporting is not compulsory under the GHG Protocol, they can help companies identify opportunities to create greater efficiencies in their value chains. Quantifying and reporting these emissions is only the first step into building a strategy with targets to reduce Scope 3 emissions. This will allow the company manage risks and opportunities related to the value chain emissions more proactively, including engagement with its value chain on other sustainability issues deriving from this climate-related approach. Despite the fact that the quantification of several initiatives taken to address reduction of Scope 3 emissions will come at a benefit with shareholders, there are several concerns with the proposal. As of 2022 and contrarily to what it had done in 2021, the Company has not disclosed emissions for Scope 3. As such, at this time it is impossible to make an informed assessment on the the ambition of those targets and the ambition of the company's emission reduction initiatives overall. On balance, abstention is recommended.

The financial statements were made available sufficiently before the meeting and has been audited and certified. However, there are some concerns surrounding the board-level governance of sustainability issues, policies and practice. As such, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. These concerns should have been addressed in the financial statements submitted to shareholders, but the financial statements fail to address these concerns.
Despite having some climate targets, the company does not have both a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 and an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change not having both adequate short term target and a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors. As such, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. ARGOS RESOURCES LTD EGM - 26-05-2023

1. Approve the Disposal by the Company of its interest in the Licence
Introduction & Rationale: On 15 December 2022 the Company announced that it had reached preliminary agreement with JHI for JHI to acquire the Group's sole principal asset, offshore production licence PL001 in the North Falkland Basin and related data. On 3 May 2023 the Company announced that, entered into the Licence Acquisition Agreement (LAA) for the Buyer to acquire the Licence (and related assets) from AEL for a consideration of 8,467,820 JHI Common Shares to be issued to the Company credited as fully paid and GBP 303,500 in cash (of which a non-refundable payment of GBP 151,750 has already been made). Completion of the LAA is scheduled to take place on or around 31 May 2023, with a long stop date of 28 June 2023, subject to: Falkland Islands Government consent to the transfer of the Licence by AEL to the Buyer and Shareholder consent. The JHI Common Shares to be issued to the Company would represent some 9.68% of the enlarged issued capital of JHI as at the date of this Document and are expected to represent between approximately 7.21% and 6.01% of JHI's enlarged share capital on a fully diluted basis depending on the outcome of the Plan of Arrangement JHI is currently undertaking. JHI is a private limited company incorporated in Ontario, Canada. JHI's principal asset is a 17.5% interest in the Canje Block, which is operated by Esso Exploration & Production Guyana Ltd (35%), a subsidiary of ExxonMobil Corp. JHI's partners in the Canje Block are TotalEnergies E&P Guyana BV (35%) and Mid-Atlantic Oil & Gas Inc (12.5%). The Company has had an interest in the Licence since 1997. In 2015 the Company assigned its interest in the Licence to Noble Energy Falklands Limited and Edison International Spa (Noble/Edison), for a participating interest in future income streams from the Licence. Following a change in strategy by Noble/Edison, Noble/Edison decided they wanted to exit their investments in the Falkland Islands and assigned the Licence back to AEL and the parties agreed to terminate the participation agreement. The Company secured a 2-year extension to the Licence in December 2022 (the Licence now continues until 31 December 2024). However, during this extended period the Company is required to carry out a work program for which it is not funded and there is no certainty, in the Board's view, that capital to fund the work program will be available to the Company. JHI has the cash reserves to fund this work program and is enthusiastic as to the identified prospects in the Licence area. It is the Board's view that Shareholders 'interests are best served by transferring the Company's interest in the Licence to JHI in return for an equity interest in JHI (and some cash) which would provide Shareholders with an ongoing interest in the outcome of future work carried out on the Licence, with upside potential through exposure to JHI's interest in the Canje Block.

Recommendation:

Such proposals are considered on the basis of whether they are deemed fair, whether they have been adequately explained, and whether there is sufficient independent oversight of the recommended proposal. The circular contains sufficient details of the proposal, but there is insufficient independence on the Board. This is considered to be a potential risk for the decision not to be taken with appropriate independence and objectivity. Abstention is recommended.

Introduction & Rationale: On 15 December 2022 the Company announced that it had reached preliminary agreement with JHI for JHI to acquire the Group's sole principal asset, offshore production licence PL001 in the North Falkland Basin and related data. On 3 May 2023 the Company announced that, entered into the Licence Acquisition Agreement (LAA) for the Buyer to acquire the Licence (and related assets) from AEL for a consideration of 8,467,820 JHI Common Shares to be issued to the Company credited as fully paid and GBP 303,500 in cash (of which a non-refundable payment of GBP 151,750 has already been made). Completion of the LAA is scheduled to take place on or around 31 May 2023, with a long stop date of 28 June 2023, subject to: Falkland Islands Government consent to the transfer of the Licence by AEL to the Buyer and Shareholder consent. The Directors have conducted a review of the benefits and drawbacks to the Company and its Shareholders of continuing to maintain the Company's admission to trading on AIM following completion of the Disposal. The Directors have concluded that in the event that the Disposal proceeds, Cancellation is in the best interests of the Company and its Shareholders as a whole. In reaching that conclusion, the Directors have considered the following key factors, amongst others: i) the significant time and cost of identifying a suitable acquisition or acquisitions which constitute(s) a reverse takeover under AIM Rule 14 and the appetite of the existing management to do so, ii) the recurring costs per annum of around £350,000 associated with maintaining the Company's admission to trading on AIM which, in the Directors' opinion, are disproportionate to the benefits to the Company of remaining admitted to trading on AIM, iii) admission of the Ordinary Shares to trading on AIM does not necessarily offer investors the opportunity to trade in meaningful volumes per se or with frequency within an active market. With low trading volumes and liquidity, the Company's share price can move up or down significantly following trades of small volumes of Ordinary Shares and iv) the limited ability of the Company to access capital on AIM.

Recommendation: Such proposals are considered on the basis of whether they are deemed fair, whether they have been adequately explained, and whether there is sufficient independent oversight of the recommended proposal. The circular contains sufficient details of the proposal, but there is insufficient independence on the Board. This is considered to be a potential risk for the decision not to be taken with appropriate independence and objectivity. In line with the recommendation for resolution 1 abstention is recommended.

4. Approve Fees Payable to the Board of Directors
No proposal is available at the present time. As per market practice, the proposed remuneration is likely to be made available only at the meeting.

Abstention from voting this resolution is recommended.

FAURECIA SA AGM - 30-05-2023

8. Approve Compensation Report of Corporate Officers
It is proposed to approve the implementation of the remuneration policy. The payout is in line with best practice, under 200% of the fixed salary. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. In addition, there are no claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration component which makes it unlikely that shareholders will be able to reclaim any variable remuneration unfairly paid out. On this basis, opposition is recommended.

10. Approve the Remuneration of Patrick Koller, CEO

Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. 19. Authorise the Board to Increase the Number of Shares Issued in case of Exceptional Demand
In addition to the share issuance authorities sought above, the Board requests shareholder authority for a capital increase of additional 15%, in case of exceptional demand.
A green shoe authorisation enables an authorization of additional shares in the event of exceptional public demand. In this case, the authorization would increase allow the placement of up to 15% additional new shares within a thirty day period at a price equal to that of the initial offer. There are concerns with such authorities as they may potentially represent a discount superior to the discount to which the initial authorisation is limited due to a potential rise in share price in the period between original issuance and secondary issuance. Given the potential for inequitable treatment of shareholders, opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

GCL NEW ENERGY HOLDINGS LTD AGM - 30-05-2023

2a. Elect Zhu Gongshan - Chair (Executive)
Executive Chair of the Board and Chair of the Nomination Committee. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that the Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Holding an executive position is incompatible with this.
Regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders. Opposition is recommended.

BIOPHARMA CREDIT PLC AGM - 30-05-2023

9. Re-appoint EY as the Auditors
EY proposed. There were no non-audit fees during the year under review and non-audit fees represented 10.72% of audit fees on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).
The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

Vote Cast: Oppose

11. Approve the Dividend Policy
Disclosure is acceptable and the dividend policy was made available sufficiently before the meeting. A.22. Approve the Remuneration Report
It is proposed to approve the annual report on remuneration of Executive and Non-Executive directors with an advisory vote. There are excessiveness concerns as the total variable remuneration exceeded 200% of the salary for the highest paid director. The Company has fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. However, opposition is recommended based on excessive remuneration.

Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. On the other hand, executives are also among the beneficiaries: it is considered that support should not be given to stock or share option plans that do not fully quantify the performance conditions under the plan. On balance, opposition is recommended.

Before considering approval of buybacks (and this should come from the board, not the manager, nor a company secretary in the employ of the fund manager), we would like to see a public statement: - addressing whether any part of the discount can be explained by capitalisation of the costs (the total costs as in the Key Investor information Document - 'KID'), - setting out why the board believes that the performance of the incumbent management is not a contributory factor to the discount, and - setting out how the current fee structure might be contributing to the discount, for example some investment companies cap management fees, or reduce the manager fee the larger the fund gets, - setting out the effect of prior year buybacks to help determine the effectiveness of prior buybacks.

1. Receive the Annual Report

The annual report was made available sufficiently before the meeting and has been audited and certified. However, there are concerns surrounding the sustainability policies and practice at the company. Therefore, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. These concerns should have been addressed in the annual report submitted to shareholders, however the annual report fails to address these concerns adequately and therefore this resolution cannot be supported.

Vote Cast: Abstain Results: For: 99.9, Abstain: 0.1, Oppose/Withhold: 0.0,

2. Approve the Remuneration Report

All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The CEO's salary is in the upper quartile of PIRC's comparator group which raises concerns over potential excessiveness. The CEO receives a Bonus of 20.03% of the salary and did not receive LTIP award during the year, which is welcomed. The ratio of CEO pay compared to average employee pay is not acceptable at 29:1; it is recommended that the ratio does not exceed 20:1.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

Although this is a common practice for a standard item in this market; support will not be suggested for resolutions concerning remuneration when sufficient information has not been made available for shareholders in sufficient time prior to the meeting; as such practice prevents shareholders from reaching an informed decision. As abstention is not a valid voting outcomes on this resolution, opposition is recommended.

5. Appoint the Auditors: PwC
PwC proposed. Non-audit fees represented 8.70% of audit fees during the year under review and 8.57% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The date of appointment of the current audit firm is undisclosed, meaning the length of tenure is not known. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

7. Authorise Share Repurchase
It is proposed to authorise the Board to purchase Company's shares for 10% until next AGM. This resolution will not be supported unless the Board has set forth a clear, cogent and compelling case demonstrating how the authority would benefit long-term shareholders. As no clear justification was provided by the Board, an oppose vote is recommended.

8. Extend the General Share Issue Mandate to Repurchased Shares
The directors seek authority to re-issue shares repurchased under the authority proposed at this meeting. The effect of the proposal, if approved, the limit for issuance of shares would exceed 10% of issued share capital. Given the concerns over dilution of the shareholder rights, opposition is recommended.

CHEVRON CORPORATION AGM - 31-05-2023

1a. Elect Wanda M. Austin
Lead Independent Director and chair of the nomination committee. At this time, individual attendance record at board and committee meetings is not disclosed. This prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment on the fulfilment of fiduciary duties and the time that directors commit to the company. It is considered that the chair of nomination committee be responsible for inaction in terms of lack of disclosure. Opposition is recommended.
Despite having some climate targets, the company has neither a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 or an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change neither having an adequate short term target nor a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors. As such, an oppose vote is recommended.

The director is also Chair of the Sustainability Committee. As the Chair of the Sustainability Committee is considered to be accountable for the Company's sustainability programme, and given the concerns over the Company's sustainability policies and practice, an oppose vote is recommended.

Non-Executive Director, chair of the audit committee. At the company, it is not clear if the Audit Committee is alerted to cases from the external whistle-blowing hotline. This suggests that such concerns that should be raised by a whistle-blower are dealt with internally, which may increase the risk of such issues not being followed up or escalating to a level where the higher was the level of the misconduct, the more likely is the issue to be concealed. On this basis, and on the potential unforeseeable consequences for the company, opposition is recommended to the re-election of the chair of the audit committee, who is considered to be accountable for the concerns with the whistle-blowing reporting structure.

Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal.

During the year under review, the company has been fined for failing to meet expectations in its tax practices. On 24 March 2022, the Dutch National Contact Point (NCP) in the Final Statement concerning an alleged violation of the OECD Guidelines for Multinational Enterprises by Chevron Netherlands BV et al. recommended to Chevron to align their conduct with the Guidelines and international developments concerning responsible tax behaviour and public tax transparency, namely: to increase their transparency on material company information and policies, including economic activities and related tax payments. While the full impact of this decision is yet to be ascertained, there are concerns about the potential reputational or financial impacts on the company. On this basis, opposition is recommended.

5. Shareholder Resolution: rescind the 2021 "reduce scope 3 emissions" proposal

Proponent's argument: Steven Milloy proposes to rescind the 2021 proposal and thereby reject the policy embedded in it that insists the Company substantially reduce consumer use of its products. "[The] 2021 shareholder resolution seeks to force Chevron to sell less of the products it produces and from which it profits. The 2021 shareholder proposal was submitted by an activist group, Follow This. That proposal wasn't motivated by interest in Chevron's legally established business purposes, but solely by anti-fossil fuel activism that uncritically accepts the illegal Paris Climate Agreement, and works to force it on corporations without consideration of legal, financial, technological, geopolitical and other relevant factors. Follow This's motivation is unambiguous. On its website, the group states "we have the power to change oil companies from within – as shareholders. Follow This unites responsible shareholders to push Big Oil to go green. Business as usual is over." Chevron's legal purpose, in contrast, is to sell petroleum products and to make operating decisions that maximize an objectively determined and financially measurable return on shareholders' investment. The question of whether emission reduction by corporations can have any effect on the world's climate is highly controversial. Certainly no one company can do anything that will make the slightest difference to global climate, regardless of your view of climate science."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "The understanding of the best ways to address GHG emissions continues to evolve. Asking stockholders to "rescind" a nonbinding proposal from two years ago does not represent good governance. Your Board believes that it is important, and our duty as a Board, to always look forward and that asking stockholders to "rescind" a proposal that has been superseded by Chevron's adoption of a PCI target, votes on subsequent proposals, and an ever-evolving energy, technology, policy, and geopolitical landscape is not aligned with stockholders' interests in good corporate governance."

PIRC analysis: Scope 3 emissions (all indirect emissions that occur in the value chain of the reporting company, including both upstream and downstream emissions) can be indicators of exposure to climate risks, such as carbon and energy 'hot spots' in the supply chain or use of products. Although their reporting is not compulsory under the GHG Protocol, they can help companies identify opportunities to create greater efficiencies in their value chains. Renouncing to take action quantifying and reporting these emissions will not allow the company manage risks and opportunities related to the value chain emissions, including engagement with its value chain on other sustainability issues deriving from this climate-related approach, exposing the company to additional risk and as well as missed opportunities from decarbonization. Oppose is recommended.

8. Shareholder Resolution: establish board committee on decarbonization risk

Proponent's argument: The Bahnsen Family Trust request the Board of Directors charter a new Board Committee on Decarbonization Risk to evaluate Chevron Corporation's (the Company) strategic vision and responses to calls for Chevron decarbonization on activist-established deadlines. The charter should require the committee to engage in formal review and oversight of corporate strategy, above and beyond matters of legal compliance, to assess the company's responses to demands for such decarbonization schedules, including the potential impacts on the Company from flaws in activists' climate models, the possibility that the U.S. will not force decarbonization according to such schedules, thus obviating "stranded asset" calculations, the possibility that other countries will not adopt similar targets, thus making Company efforts meaningless, concerns about technological or economic infeasibility, and other relevant considerations. "Chevron has repeatedly stated its commitment to achieving net-zero carbon emissions by 2050. It does not appear from publicly available information, however, that Chevron has fully considered the risk that decarbonization on activist schedules might entail. Claims about the need for decarbonization at all, but especially by some activist-generated date certain, are based on a long series of assumptions that are either counterfactual or insufficiently examined. For decades, for instance, claims have been made that action must be taken before some date, or it will be too late. If those claims were right, it's too late for decarbonization to matter now, so we should be building up economic resources to deal with climate change. If they were wrong, then the odds are high that current claims are also wrong. Chevron's decarbonization will be meaningless if other countries do not follow the same decarbonization schedules, and there is abundant evidence that they will not."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "On an annual basis, the full Board reviews long-term energy outlooks and leading indicators that could signify change. The Board has access to Chevron's internal subject-matter experts and regularly receives briefings on climate change–related issues, including policies and regulations, technology, and adaptation. In addition, outside experts with differing viewpoints have met with the Board to share their perspectives on climate change and the energy transition. The proposal calls for a new Board committee to achieve what is already being done by the full Board. Your Board believes Chevron already has an effective governance structure to oversee strategy, which includes consideration of climate change issues, risks, and opportunities."

PIRC analysis: Increased board accountability for efforts related to decarbonization would normally be considered to be in shareholders' interests. However, the proposal is considered to be based on flawed methodology. The proponent focused on short-term costs and benefits for the company, excluding the long-term benefits (also economic) of a lower carbon emission strategy. It is considered that shareholders should instead be focused on long-term value creation. Ignoring the potential long-term costs of ignoring climate change is not considered to be in shareholders' best interests. The proponents seemingly seek to make sure that views against the opportunities deriving from decarbonization be represented on the board, as opposed to promoting accountability around the potential benefits of decarbonization and requesting transparency over the financial impact from non-traditionally financial issues, particularly the climate emergency, or avoid any suspicion and any damage that may cause to the company's reputation, or that the company may adopt a conduct different from what it has committed to. Overall, opposition is recommended.

During the year under review,the company has been accused of environmental mismanagement, and while no wrongdoing has been identified at this time, there are nevertheless concerns over the potential impact of these allegations.On 24 May 2022, the Massachusetts high court ruled that ExxonMobil must face a trial over allegations that it lied about the climate crisis and covered up the fossil fuel industry's role in worsening environmental devastation. On 18 January 2022, it was reported that ExxonMobil was attempting to use Rule 202 in Texas, to target and intimidate its critics, claiming that lawsuits against the company over its long history of downplaying and denying the climate crisis violate the US constitution's guarantees of free speech. This is preceded by a similar case on 22 June 2021; a

Massachusetts state judge rejected Exxon's bid to dismiss a lawsuit accusing the oil company of misleading consumers and investors about its role in climate change. The state Attorney General Maura Healey accused Exxon of downplaying the impact its fossil fuel products had on climate change and the risks climate change.

Proponent's argument: Bahnsen Family Trust request the Board of Directors charter a new Board Committee on Decarbonization Risk to evaluate ExxonMobil's strategic vision and responses to calls for ExxonMobil decarbonization on activist-established timelines. The charter should require the committee to engage in formal review and oversight of corporate strategy, above and beyond matters of legal compliance, to assess the company's responses to demands for such decarbonization Claims about the need for decarbonization at all, but especially by some activist-generated date certain, are based on a long series of assumptions that are either counterfactual or insufficiently examined. [...] The United States government has never mandated net-zero by statute or authorized regulatory action3, and is unlikely ever to do so; this contravenes the assumptions of 'stranded asset' analysis. If decarbonization is neither required nor technologically feasible, ExxonMobil will lose significant markets and revenues to private equity firms and (less clean-producing) state actors, thus harming shareholders while also harming the environment. These and all relevant considerations should be fully and objectively examined."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "The full Board and its various committees, in line with their oversight responsibilities, also review and approve ExxonMobil's strategy and our annual and medium-term operating plan. Importantly, our strategy leverages the same competitive advantages and core competencies to address both our heritage businesses and our new Low Carbon Solutions business. This approach allows us to allocate our resources in line with market demands and policy developments, and pace our investments in lower-emissions initiatives with value-accretive opportunities as those develop. The full Board carefully considered the concerns raised by the proponent with their endorsement of our strategy that is robust to a range of scenarios, from "business as usual" to "full decarbonization" and at any point in between. [...]In speaking with the proponent, we understand the primary concern is disclosure of risks we could face if we over-invest in energy-transition opportunities, either without policy or ahead of it. The Board recognizes that there is risk in pursuing or foregoing investment opportunities – whether in the base business or in new areas; thus, investment decisions are informed by a whole host of considerations to test for resiliency. The "decarbonization risk" outlined by the proponent is one of many risks already incorporated into the rigorous risk oversight framework and processes overseen by the Board and the relevant Committees, and also well disclosed in Company materials."

PIRC analysis: Increased board accountability for efforts related to decarbonization would normally be considered to be in shareholders' interests. However, the proposal is considered to be based on flawed methodology. The proponent focused on short-term costs and benefits for the company, excluding the long-term benefits (also economic) of a lower carbon emission strategy. 7. Shareholder Resolution: Additional Carbon Capture and Storage and Emissions Report

Proponent's argument: Steve Milloy requests that, beginning in 2023, ExxonMobil report annually to shareholders, omitting any confidential business information, the net amount of carbon dioxide (CO2) stored underground as a result of the company's enhanced oil recovery (EOR) activities, including: 1. The total amount (in tons) of captured CO2 stored underground during EOR for the year; 2. The total amount of oil (in barrels) produced through CO2-based EOR for the year; and 3. The difference (in tons) between the CO2 stored underground during EOR and the expected CO2 emissions produced by the burning of the oil produced by EOR, as calculated using EPA greenhouse gas equivalencies (i.e., 0.43 tons of CO2 per barrel of oil [...]) or other reasonable means. "it's not at all clear that CO2 capture for EOR results in a net storage of CO2. After all, the produced oil will be burned by consumers and the amount of CO2 emitted thereby may in fact be greater than the amount of CO2 stored. See, e.g., https://junkscience.com/2016/03/no-co2-used-to-produce-oil-does-not-store-co2/ In the event that more CO2 is emitted as a result of EOR than is stored, it would be false and misleading to imply that EOR reduces CO2 in the atmosphere. Such false and misleading information could make the company subject to government enforcement actions, other lawsuits and reputational harm that would adversely affect shareholder value."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "To reduce global emissions, existing oil and gas demand needs to be addressed with production techniques that enable the lowest greenhouse gas (GHG) emission intensity. The proponent is implying that there is no emissions benefit associated with the use of CO2 injection for enhanced oil recovery (EOR) production, citing an article from 2016 that does not account for full life cycle analysis. Contrary to that view, CO2-EOR is broadly recognized for its economic and GHG benefits through the use of a closed loop CO2 injection system. On a life cycle basis, which includes global oil market impacts, 63 percent of all CO2 stored through EOR is a net reduction in CO2 emissions. Compared to conventional oil, every barrel of CO2-EOR oil emits 37 percent less CO2.2 The United States government also recognizes the importance of carbon capture and storage for EOR application and recently implemented the Inflation Reduction Act that provides an expansion of the Internal Revenue Code Section 45Q CCS-EOR tax incentives. It is anticipated that these incentives will be critical to the United States achieving its near-term GHG emission reduction plans, in support of its net-zero ambition." " PIRC analysis

Enhanced oil recovery (EOR) may have some benefits, such as extending the field life beyond its primary recovery period, which lessens the need for new field developments, or increasing the ultimate recovery of oil from mature conventional oil reserves. EOR can also reduce greenhouse gas (GHG) emissions through the sequestration of carbon dioxide and injection of hydrocarbon gases that would otherwise be flared. However, there are also concerns about its overall effectiveness in reducing emissions and its potential environmental impacts, for example groundwater contamination from water-soluble chemicals used in the process that may be toxic to organisms and carcinogenic to humans if transported in sufficient quantities to ground or surface waters. On balance, while it is considered that carbon capture cannot be a sustainable tactic to reduce carbon emission per se, it may be used as part of a strategy to curb emissions and a transition to a low-carbon economy and society. In addition, the proposal comes from a flawed perspective, namely that the company should not undertake any decarbonization route, which would endanger the future of an integrated oil and gas company. Overall, opposition is recommended.

This included the Cambridge Analytica scandal class action being settled for USD 725 million in December 2022. There are concerns about how inaction in protecting privacy of interested parties (or practice of violating them) would potentially impact the company or its stakeholders' data. In addition, there have been concerns over human rights and community abuses within the company, and while the full impact of this decision is yet to be ascertained, these practices are considered to be examples of a corporate culture not aligned with the interests of all stakeholders. Specifically, the Chair has also been accused of insider trading in March 2022. The Chair and CEO is considered to have supervisory and operational responsibility over the company's business practices, and as a result, a vote to oppose is recommended.

2. Appoint the Auditors
EY proposed. Non-audit fees represented 0.02% of audit fees during the year under review and 14.76% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than ten years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

3. Shareholder Resolution: Government Takedown Requests
Proponent's argument: National Legal and Policy Center. request that Meta Platforms, Inc. provide a report, published on the company's website and updated semi-annually – and omitting proprietary information and at reasonable cost – that specifies the Company's policy in responding to requests to remove or take down content from its platforms by the Executive Office of the President, Members of Congress, or any other agency, entity or subcontractor on behalf of the United States Government. "Evidence – and testimony by Company Chairman and CEO Mark Zuckerberg – shows the Company has been subject to overtures from the U.S. government to censor. For example, in a podcast interview in August 2022, Mr. Zuckerberg said Facebook restricted reach among users to a New York Post article about Hunter Biden's laptop, after the FBI told the Company to be on "high alert" for so-called "Russian propaganda." Also, Facebook maintained a "content requests system" for use by government and law enforcement to request censorship of so-called "disinformation." The Internet domain for the company's portal even has the word "takedowns" in it. Shareholders need to know whether the Company cooperates with government officials engaged in unconstitutional censorship, opening the Company to liability claims by victims. Shareholders also need to know whether the Company fails to disclose these potential liabilities as material risks in its public filings."
Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "The documents and data within our Transparency Center already provide detail on how we handle government takedown requests. While we do not publish specific requests from those agencies, our existing reporting includes statistics for content we restricted based on local law in the country in which it was restricted, including in response to government requests. In addition, we notify users when a post is restricted based on a report that the content violates local law. We have also updated our Facebook notifications when users view content that has been restricted based on local law as a result of a government takedown request. The updated notification provides users with information on which government authority sent the take-down request resulting in the restriction, except in certain limited cases. We provide this notice except in limited instances where we are explicitly prohibited by applicable law from doing so." "
PIRC analysis: The proposal does not request the company to consult with technology and civil liberties experts and civil and human rights advocates to assess the level of risk of misrepresenting facts and allowing or even inciting misinformation by its platform being used by any customer. Rather, the proponent appears to consider that misinformation (such as denying the reality of anthropogenic global warming, or that of the COVID pandemic) should be treated with the same dignity of scientific and fact-based information, on the basis of a flawed assumption of freedom of expression. Research has shown that misinformation has deep impact across society as a whole and appear to be tied to lower-income section of society. This proposal seemingly aims to ensure that misinformative views are represented on Google, as opposed to promoting transparency and accountability around the potential benefits of diversity and requesting transparency over the financial impact from these issues, avoid any suspicion and any damage that may cause to the company's reputation, or that the company may adopt a conduct different from what it has committed to. Opposition is thus recommended.

BODYCOTE PLC AGM - 31-05-2023

PwC proposed. No non-audit fees were paid for the year under review and non-audit fees represents 1.64% of audit fees on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).
The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

13. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The CEO salary is in the median of the competitor group. Variable pay for the year under review was 123.4% of the salary and is not considered excessive since is lower than 200%. The level of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee is considered excessive at 30:1.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

It is proposed to the shareholders to approve the amendment of the Company's Incentive Plan 2018. The propose amendments in the plan are: i) align the maximum award from 175% to 200% of salary, 200% having been approved in the Remuneration Policy at the 2022 Annual General Meeting and ii) change the wording of paragraph 6.5 of the rules so that when the Company is in a protracted closed period due to a potential acquisition it can make the award from year A in year B. The proposed increase of the maximum award is not supported since the total variable pay is higher than 200% of the salary and is considered excessive. In addition, LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure. An oppose vote is recommended.

Regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders. 9. Approve Remuneration Policy
The principal changes proposed in the new policy include: i) the maximum annual bonus for executive directors other than the CEO is increased from 100% to 110% of base salary; and ii) post-employment shareholding requirements are updated to executives must retain such of their relevant shares as have a value equal to 200% of salary, reducing to 100% of salary in the second year.
Total variable pay for the CEO could reach 275% of the salary and is deemed excessive since is higher than 200%. On the Annual Bonus 30% of the Bonus is defer to shares for three years, this is not considered sufficient, it would be preferable 50% of the Bonus to be paid in cash and 50% to defer to shares for at least three years. Concerns are raised and for the LTIP award since, there are no non-financial performance measures attached to the LTIP and so the focus of remuneration policy is not the operational performance of the business as a whole or the individual roles of each of the executives in achieving that performance. Instead, the focus of the remuneration policy is financial KPIs, which mainly include factors beyond an individual director's control. he performance metrics are not operating interdependently, such that vesting under the incentive plan is only possible where all threshold targets are met. Performance period is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term, however, a two year holding period applies which is welcomed. Malus and clawback provisions apply.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

13. Issue Shares for Cash for the Purpose of Financing an Acquisition or Other Capital Investment

CELLNEX TELECOM S.A. AGM - 31-05-2023

4. Discharge the Board
Standard resolution. At the company, there is no external whistle-blowing hotline. This suggests that such concerns that should be raised by a whistle-blower are dealt with internally, which may increase the risk of such issues not being followed up or escalating to a level where the higher was the level of the misconduct, the more likely is the issue to be concealed. On this basis, and on the potential unforeseeable consequences for the company, opposition is recommended.

It is proposed to distribute a maximum of EUR 85,000,000 from reserves, including share premium. Although legal in this market, it is considered that the share premium account should be moved into distributable reserves through a reduction of capital, and it should not be used as distributable reserve per se. As the Company proposes a direct distribution from the share premium account, opposition is recommended.

It is proposed to authorise the Board to purchase Company's shares for 10% and five years. This resolution will not be supported unless the Board has set forth a clear, cogent and compelling case demonstrating how the authority would benefit long-term shareholders. The Company has stated that this resolution may authorise the Board of Directors to allocate all or part of its repurchased shares to remuneration schemes. However, this is not considered to be sufficient, as it includes only part of the requested authority. 3. Approve New Executive Share Option Scheme/Plan
The Board proposes the approval of a new incentive plan. Under the plan, the CEO and other executives will be awarded options or rights to receive shares, which will start vesting after three years from the date of award. At this time, it seems that this plan will not be based on any performance criteria but only on the beneficiaries continued employment. As a result, they may receive bonuses unrelated to their performance or even the performance of the Company as a whole, which is considered a serious frustration of shareholder accountability.
LTIP based schemes are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the Company (creating capital and - lawful - dividends). They act as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute Company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

While the opportunity for shareholders to approve intra group loans is welcomed, there are reservations about the potential use of this authority for loans to companies that are not controlled by the Group (i.e. less than 50% owned by the Company) as, in the event of a default on the loan, the Company's shareholders underwrite the risks of the loan despite some benefits of the loan accruing to a third party. Standard proposal. The company's sustainability policies and practice are not considered to be adequate in order to minimize material risks linked to sustainability.
Despite having some climate targets, the company does not have both a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 and an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change not having both adequate short term target and a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors. 2. Approve Remuneration Policy

Proposed changes the remuneration policy include: i) aligning the executive pension contribution with the workforce rate and ii) increasing the CFO maximum incentive opportunity to 375% of base salary, to be aligned with the CEO's opportunity.

Overall disclosure is adequate. The Executive Single Incentive Plan (ESIP) includes both an annual element, and a longer-term element, and is the Company's only incentive plan. Despite some positive aspects of the plan, such as 60% of awards will be subject to share deferral and the application of malus and clawback provisions, there remain some concerns. Total potential pay under the ESIP is excessive at 375% of salary for both the CEO and CFO. It also not considered that a single plan combining annual and longer-term performance metrics with different performance periods is a simplification of the policy. The ESIP consists of annual awards with performance measured over both one year and trailing long-term performance periods. At least 40% of any award will depend on trailing longer-term metrics. The long-term element of the ESIP vests in equal tranches over a minimum three-year period, which is not considered sufficiently long-term as five years is preferable. There is a post vesting holding period of two years for those who have not reached the shareholding requirement. In addition, dividend equivalents may accrue from the date of grant. Such rewards are not supported as they mis-align shareholders and executive interests as shareholders must subscribe for shares in order to receive dividends whereas participants in the scheme do not.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

3. Approve the Remuneration Report

All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The CEO's salary is in the median of the Company's comparator group. 13. Re-appoint EY as the Auditors
EY proposed. Non-audit fees represented 0.42% of audit fees during the year under review and 1.13% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than ten years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).
The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

7. Shareholder Resolution: Congruency Report
Proponent's argument: The National Center for Public Policy Research request that Alphabet Inc. publish a report, at reasonable expense, analyzing the congruency of voluntary partnerships with organizations that facilitate collaboration between businesses, governments and NGOs for social and political ends against the Company's fiduciary duty to shareholders. "Alphabet does not list the World Economic Forum (WEF), Council on Foreign Relations (CFR), Business Roundtable (BR) or other similar globalist organizations among its partners or as recipients of contributions; however, WEF and CFR do list the Company as a partner, BR lists CEO Sundar Pichai among its members, and Google founders Larry Page and Sergey Brin both graduated from WEF's "Young Global Leaders" program. Why the inconsistency? Why is the Board concealing these partnerships, amongst other similar ones, from shareholders? Alphabet's legal duty as a Delaware business corporation requires it to first serve the interests of its shareholders. Because Alphabet is not a public benefit corporation,6 all additional Company actions and expenditures with third parties must be shown by the Board to be congruent with the interests of shareholders and the Company's fundamental purpose. However, the agendas of WEF, CFR, BR and other such organizations are antithetical with the Company's fiduciary duty. This obliges the Board to explain how these partnerships serve the interests of shareholders (rather than Directors).[...] Most Alphabet shareholders are unaware (since the Board hides it from them) that their capital is in part being used to pursue this anti-human, anti-freedom agenda. Moreover, none of this is congruent with the Company's basic purpose of providing value to shareholders by serving customers."
Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "Our engagement with policymakers and regulators is guided by a commitment to ensuring our participation is open, transparent, and clear to our stockholders, users, and the public. We respect the independence and agency of trade associations and third parties to shape their own policy agendas, events, and advocacy positions. Our sponsorship or collaboration with an organization does not mean that we endorse its entire agenda, its events or advocacy positions, or the views of its leaders or members. We prohibit trade associations and other tax-exempt organizations such as 501(c)(4)s from using dues or payments made by us for political expenditures. We inform trade associations and other organizations of this policy by sending an electronic transmittal letter outlining the parameters of our prohibition with every payment we make. To ensure that organizations are abiding by our policy, Google reserves the right to terminate all payments immediately if we find that any portion of our contributions have been used for political expenditures. We believe it is important to be an active participant in organizations to support issues that are important to our business and ultimately to our stockholders, and we remain committed to being transparent regarding that participation. As a result, our Board does not believe that implementing this proposal would be useful for our stockholders."

PIRC analysis: The requested disclosure on the alignment of lobbying expenditure appears to be a spoiler resolution to prevent other shareholders from filing resolutions regarding the company's diversity and focuses on ideological diversity with the clear intent to ensure that conservative views are represented within the company's political activities, as opposed to promoting transparency and accountability around the potential benefits of diversity and requesting transparency over the financial impact from non-traditionally financial issues, avoid any suspicion and any damage that may cause to the company's reputation, or that the company may adopt a conduct different from what it has committed to. Opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose Results: For: 0.4, Abstain: 0.4, Oppose/Withhold: 99.2,

14. Shareholder Resolution: Risk Audit on Content Censorship
Proponent's argument: The National Legal and Policy Center request that Alphabet Inc. issue a report at reasonable cost – omitting proprietary or legally privileged information – reviewing the vulnerabilities of its enforcement of Google's and YouTube's Terms of Service related to content policies, and assessing the risks posed by content management controversies related to issues such as election interference, freedom of expression, and inequitable application of policies, and how they affect the Company's finances, operations, and reputation. " In leaked Company emails, employees discussed using "ephemeral experiences" to change users' views. Back in 2016, the Company's chief financial officer said, "we will use the great strength and resources and reach we have" to advance Google's values. Consequentially, senior research psychologist Dr. Robert Epstein found that – based on 1.5 million search experiences his team aggregated in 2020 – that the Company's manipulations could have shifted up to six million votes to Joe Biden. A study of voter outreach by 2020 political candidates, conducted by North Carolina State University's Department of Computer Science, found that Google's Gmail "marked 59.3% more emails from [conservative] candidates as spam compared to the [progressive] candidates." The Republican National Committee claimed that Gmail sent more than 22 million of its emails to spam during a critical fundraising period in the 2022 election cycle. The Company has incurred a lawsuit and a complaint to the Federal Elections Commission due to the alleged suppression. A Media Research Center analysis of the most tightly contested 2022 U.S. Senate races found that ten of 12 Republican candidates' campaign websites (83%) appeared far lower (or did not appear at all) on page one of Google's organic search results, compared to their Senate Democratic Party opponents' campaign websites. In addition to the above examples, the Company is the target of a credible, major lawsuit by the states of Missouri and Louisiana, based on extensive evidence that the Company violated users' First Amendment rights."
Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "We strike a careful balance among the free flow of information, safety, efficiency, accuracy, and other competing values and priorities. Our product, policy, and enforcement decisions in this complex environment are guided by a set of principles across the spectrum of our products and services: Value openness and accessibility: We aim to provide access to an open and diverse information ecosystem and believe that a healthy and responsible approach to supporting information quality should aim at keeping content accessible. Removal of content is among the important levers we use to address information quality, but we use it judiciously, particularly in the context of Search. Respect user choice: We believe that users looking for content that is not illegal or prohibited by our policies should be able to find it, while we seek to avoid presenting low quality content to users who are not looking for it. Build for everyone: Our services are used around the world by users from different cultures, languages, and backgrounds, and at different stages in their lives. Our product and policy development and policy enforcement decisions consider the diversity of our users and seek to address their needs appropriately. These priorities have guided our evolving approach, taking into account shifting user expectations and norms, increasing sophistication of malicious actors, our growing technological ability to identify and remove violative content, and the evolving nature of the web."
PIRC analysis: The proposal does not request the company to consult with technology and civil liberties experts and civil and human rights advocates to assess the level of risk of misrepresenting facts and allowing or even inciting misinformation by its platform being used by any customer. Rather, the proponent appears to consider that misinformation should be treated with the same dignity of scientific and fact-based information, on the basis of a flawed assumption of freedom of expression. Research has shown that misinformation has deep impact across society as a whole and appear to be tied to lower-income section of society. This proposal seemingly aims to ensure that misinformative views are represented on the platform, as opposed to promoting transparency and accountability around the potential benefits of diversity and requesting transparency over the financial impact from these issues, avoid any suspicion and any damage that may cause to the company's reputation, or that the company may adopt a conduct different from what it has committed to. Opposition is thus recommended.

UNI-PRESIDENT CHINA HLDG LTD EGM - 02-06-2023

1. Approve Maximum Aggregate Annual Transaction Value in Respect to the Framework Purchase Agreement Dated March 25 2020
It is proposed to increase the Existing Annual Cap from RMB 5,350,000 to 7,200,000. The rationale for this increase is cited as the increase in the price of raw materials. As such, the current Annual Cap is believed to be insufficient to meet business needs.
The circular contains sufficient details of the transaction. Although the dilution from the share issuance is within guidelines, it would be preferred that the parent company should buy Company shares in the market, instead of relying in an ad hoc issue, for cash, which additionally dilutes the holdings of existing shareholders. On this basis, opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

2. Approve Related Party Transaction
It has been proposed to approve the Framework Purchase Agreement and the continuing connected transactions between the Company and Uni-President Enterprises Corporation, which is the ultimate controlling shareholder of the Company, for a fixed term of three years. Pursuant to the agreement, the Company agrees to purchase or procure purchase of, on a non-exclusive basis, from UPE Group, certain raw materials, packaging materials, finished goods, low-cost consumables. In determining the fairness of the payment terms offered by the UPE Group, the Company will, where comparable transactions are available, provide quotations from at least 2 independent suppliers to obtain a reference on the prices of the relevant products. Such proposals are considered on the basis of whether they are deemed fair, whether they have been adequately explained, and whether there is sufficient independent oversight of the recommended proposal. The circular contains sufficient details of the transaction, but there is insufficient independence on the Board. However, this is considered to be an ordinary intra-group transaction, where a joint venture/subsidiary of the Company is contracted to provide services to the parent company. Annual caps have been disclosed in detail and the Independent Financial Advisor is of the opinion that the transactions under the Framework Agreement are in the ordinary and usual course of the Company's business and the terms of the Framework Agreement including the Annual Caps are on normal commercial terms and are fair and reasonable. However, there is insufficient representation on the Board. This is considered to be a potential risk for the decision not to be taken with appropriate independence and objectivity. Abstention is recommended. As abstention is not a valid voting outcome, opposition is recommended.

The annual report was made available sufficiently before the meeting and has been audited and certified. However, there are concerns surrounding the sustainability policies and practice at the company. 10. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The CEO salary is in the median of the comparator group. Total variable remuneration for the year under review is considered excessive at 273.68% of base salary. The ratio of CEO pay compared to that of the average employee is considered acceptable at 11:1.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

20. Elect Christopher H. Young
Chair of the Nomination Committee.
Regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders. Opposition is recommended.

7. Appoint the Auditors for the Financial Years 2024, 2025 and 2026
EY proposed. Non-audit fees represented 7.77% of audit fees during the year under review and 27.85% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees raises some concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. In addition, the current auditor will have been in place for more than five years by the time the proposed tenure has ended. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

Vote Cast: Abstain

10. Approve the Remuneration Report
It is proposed to approve the annual report on remuneration of Executive and Non-Executive Directors with an advisory vote. The Company discloses all elements of remuneration for Executives and Non-Executives. The payout is in line with best practice, being under 200% of the fixed salary. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. On balance, abstention is recommended.

COMCAST CORPORATION AGM - 07-06-2023

11. Shareholder Resolution: Report on Business in China
Proponent's argument: National Legal and Policy Center request that, beginning in 2023, Comcast Corporation report annually to shareholders on the nature and extent to which corporate operations depend on, and are vulnerable to, Communist China, which is a serial human rights violator, a geopolitical threat, and an adversary to the United States. The report should exclude confidential business information but provide shareholders with a sense of the Company's reliance on activities conducted within, and under control of, the Communist Chinese government. "As one example of Comcast's exposure in China, subsidiary NBCUniversal opened Phase 1 of the Universal Beijing Resort in September 2021, after winning approval from the communist government more than a decade earlier. CEO Brian Roberts expected the project to generate more than $1 billion per year in revenue for the Company. A Chinese state-controlled entity owns 70 percent of the venture. The Company also relies on the market to release its films and media content. [...] China - and by extension the companies it controls - is also identified in the U.S. State Department's 2022 Trafficking in Persons Report as a state sponsor of human trafficking. A July 2022 joint statement from the leaders of the British and American domestic intelligence agencies warned that the Communist Chinese Party is the greatest threat to the international order. "We consistently see that it's the Chinese government that poses the biggest long-term threat to our economic and national security, and by 'our,' I mean both of our nations, along with our allies in Europe and elsewhere," said FBI Director Christopher Wray. Given the controversial, if not dangerous, nature of doing business in and with China, shareholders have the right to know the extent to which Comcast Corporation's business operations depend on Communist China."
Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "We are committed to promoting values that foster human rights, acting with integrity and doing the right thing. Specifically, we have robust human rights policies and due diligence processes that are embedded within our operating and decision-making practices and reported on publicly. For example, our Human Rights Statement emphasizes our commitment to supporting the broad principles that promote human rights in the United Nations' Universal Declaration of Human Rights. Our Code of Conduct for Suppliers and Business Partners sets forth our expectation that third-party partners prevent forced labor and human trafficking in their supply chains, and our annual Statement on Modern Slavery and Supply Chain Values reports on our third-party risk management framework for human rights, including, as appropriate, due diligence, training and auditing activities. We continuously review our human rights policies and practices to ensure that they remain appropriately designed and responsive to a dynamic landscape. We also encourage employees, suppliers and business partners around the world to report suspected illegal or unethical conduct, provide several channels for doing so, investigate allegations and develop an appropriate course of action based on our findings." "

PIRC analysis: The requested disclosure on the involvement with businesses in China as a human rights violator appears to be a spoiler resolution to prevent other shareholders from filing resolutions regarding the company's involvement on human rights controversial activities globally and focuses on geopolitical threats with the clear intent to ensure that conservative views on international relations be represented within the company's global activities, as opposed to promoting transparency and accountability around the potential benefits of global operations conducted fairly, and requesting transparency over the financial impact from non-traditionally financial issues to avoid any suspicion and any damage that may cause to the company's reputation. A report on the human rights impact of the company's operations that may be potentially complicit in China's human rights abuses would be in shareholders' interests, but such a proposal does not seem to be in the interest of the proponent. Rather, this proposal appears to use human rights as an argument to ask the company to withdraw from doing business with China, in a view that considered it to be a geopolitical threat to the US and without actual interest in human rights in that country.

3. Approve Comcast Corporation 2003 Omnibus Equity Incentive Plan
The Plan is presented as an omnibus plan, which means that bundled within the same official plan there are various incentive plan elements aimed at rewarding different groups of employees, officers and executives. However, it is noted that the Compensation Committee retains the power to select employees to receive awards and determine the terms and conditions of awards (and also note that 'management employees' appear most likely to be the principal beneficiaries of the Plan). On this basis, opposition is recommended.

5. Advisory Vote on Executive Compensation
The Company has submitted a proposal for shareholder ratification of its executive compensation policy and practices. The voting outcome for this resolution reflects the balance of opinion on the adequacy of disclosure, the balance of performance and reward and the terms of executive employment. The compensation rating is: ADB. Based on this rating, opposition is recommended.

1.01. Elect Kenneth J. Bacon - Non-Executive Director
Non-Executive Director and Chair of the Nominating Committee. Not considered independent owing to a tenure of over nine years. There is insufficient independent representation on the Board. As the Chair of the Nominating Committee is considered to be accountable for the Company's sustainability programme, and given the concerns over the Company's sustainability policies and practice, an oppose vote is recommended.

1.10. Elect Brian L. Roberts - Chair & Chief Executive
Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal.

Vote Cast: Oppose Results: For: 95.4, Abstain: 0.0, Oppose/Withhold: 4.6,

1.06. Elect Jeffrey A. Honickman - Non-Executive Director
Non-Executive Director. Chair of the Audit Committee. Not considered independent owing to a tenure of over nine years. There is insufficient independent representation on the Board. The Company does not have an established whistle-blowing hotline. It is considered that without a whistle-blowing hotline, the company is potentially subject to reputational and financial damage by a lack of supervision of potential malpractice. It is considered the responsibility of the audit committee to review all reports from the whistle-blowing hotline. For this reason, opposition is recommended.

4. Approve Amended and Restated Comcast Corporation 2002 Employee Stock Purchase Plan
It is proposed to approve a restricted share plan for employees and corporate officers. The Board would receive the authority to set beneficiaries and other conditions. After allotment, shares will be restricted for three years, which is not considered to be sufficiently long term. The Company states that exercise of shares will be based on targets, which at this time remain undisclosed.
Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. On the other hand, executives are also among the beneficiaries: it is considered that support should not be given to stock or share option plans that do not lay out clear performance criteria, targets and conditions. On balance, opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose Results: For: 98.1, Abstain: 0.1, Oppose/Withhold: 1.8,

Independent Non-Executive Chair. Although there are concerns over potential aggregate time commitments, this director has attended all Board and committee meetings during the year under review. Mr. Lee Ka Shing is the son of the ultimate controlling shareholder and Chairman of the company Lee Shau Kee and brother of non-executive director Mr. Lee Ka Kit. GEM DIAMONDS LTD AGM - 07-06-2023

2. Approve the Remuneration Report
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of ‘alignment’ with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of ‘alignment’ which can actually create a competing set of director ‘duties’.

It is proposed to approve the remuneration policy. Variable remuneration appears to be consistently capped, and the payout is in line with best practice. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets for the performance criteria of its variable remuneration component, which as a consequence may lead to overpayment against underperformance. In addition, there are no claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration component which makes it unlikely that shareholders will be able to reclaim any variable remuneration unfairly paid out. On these grounds, opposition is recommended.

TUNGSTEN WEST PLC EGM - 08-06-2023

1. Issue Shares with Pre-emption Rights in connection with the Open Offer and the the Convertible Loan Notes
Introduction & Background: On 6 April 2023, the Company announced that it had reached agreement with investors to raise GBP 6.95 million (before expenses) via an oversubscribed placing of Convertible Loan Notes conditional upon, amongst other matters, completion of definitive documentation in respect of such notes. As announced on 19 May 2023, the Company has entered into the Note Purchase Agreement with Lansdowne and other note purchasers to secure principal amount of GBP 6.95 million in Convertible Loan Notes. The Note Purchase Agreement also provides for up to an additional GBP 2.0 million principal amount of the Convertible Loan Notes to be made available to be purchased by other third party purchasers and/or existing Note Purchasers. In addition, the Board would like to progress with the Open Offer as announced on 3 April 2023. The Board recognises the support that it has received from Shareholders and is also offering all Qualifying Shareholders the opportunity to participate in an Open Offer at a price of GBP 3 pence per Ordinary Share. The Open Offer will raise up to approximately GBP 2.0 million assuming the Open Offer is fully subscribed.
Proposal: It is proposed that the shareholders authorise the Directors generally and unconditionally to exercise all powers of the Company to allot shares in the Company and to grant rights to subscribe for, or to convert any security into, shares in the Company provided that this authority shall be limited to: i) the allotment of the Open Offer Shares, ii) up to 1,060,363,836 new Ordinary Shares in connection with the Convertible Loan Notes and iii) up to an aggregate nominal amount of GBP 350,000.
Rationale: As previously announced by the Company on 21 April 2022, the Company made the decision to pause the Project and re-optimise to reduce both initial CAPEX and ongoing OPEX, whilst maintaining forecast production rates. With an updated development plan, discussions have been ongoing with a number of mining specialist lenders which have provided the Company with updated debt term sheets, subject to due diligence and final documentation. Due to the increased risk surrounding the recent volatile energy prices, increased interest rates and a more conservative lending approach, both the Board and lenders have concluded that having less debt than previously envisaged is appropriate. This has led to a requirement for further equity capital to fund both the initial Project and the Phase 2 upgrade, scheduled after 24 months of production. As such, the Company now envisages funding the Project in the future through a debt facility of approximately £25.0 million and an equity fundraising of approximately £35-40 million to bring it into production. This is expected to fund both Phase 1 and 2 CAPEX, working capital and contingencies. Since April 2022, the Company has been working on the basis that the funding, permitting and construction could run in parallel, and it has now become apparent following lender feedback that this is not the case due to design changes potentially required to achieve permitting for the mineral processing facility. As such, it is necessary to prioritise the process of obtaining all necessary permits required for funding. As part of the Review, the Company will also actively engage with financial and strategic partners which are expected to be able to bring in additional funding and expertise to assist the Company fund and build the Project. These discussions are already underway and the proceeds from the Fundraising will allow this process to continue and include other interested parties. At the beginning of April 2023, the Company had available cash reserves of £3.5 million. The Board believes the net proceeds from the Fundraising should fund the business for at least six months from the date of this Document. The Board is confident this will allow sufficient time to conclude the permitting process and complete the full Project funding. The funds raised from the Fundraising will not be sufficient to finance the Company through to cash generation. The intention of the Fundraising is to fund the business through the planning and permitting process and completion of the required Project funding.

Recommendation: The proposed resolution for the issuance of shares in connection with the open offer and the the Convertible Loan Notes has a percentage of the existing share capital of the Company of 36.9% and 624.22% which is not consider acceptable. In addition although the Company provide a specific reason for the proposed issuance there is insufficient independence representation in the Board, this is considered to be a potential risk for the decision not to be taken with appropriate independence and objectivity. Therefore opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

2. Issue Shares for Cash in connection with the Open Offer and the the Convertible Loan Notes

MELROSE INDUSTRIES PLC AGM - 08-06-2023

1. Receive the Annual Report
The annual report was made available sufficiently before the meeting and has been audited and certified. However, there are concerns surrounding the sustainability policies and practice at the company and the lack of adequate board level accountability for sustainability issues. Therefore, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. These concerns should have been addressed in the annual report submitted to shareholders, however the annual report fails to address these concerns adequately and therefore this resolution cannot be supported.

Vote Cast: Abstain Results: For: 100.0, Abstain: 0.0, Oppose/Withhold: 0.0,

2. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The CEO's salary is in the lower quartile of the Company's comparator group. Total variable pay for the year under review consisted only of the annual bonus at 100% of salary. The ratio of CEO pay compared to average employee pay has been estimated at 26:1, which is not considered acceptable. It is considered that the CEO pay ratio should not exceed 20:1.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

Vote Cast: Oppose Results: For: 97.3, Abstain: 0.0, Oppose/Withhold: 2.7,

3. Approve Remuneration Policy
Changes in the new policy include: i) increasing the maximum opportunity for the annual bonus to 200%, for any directors appointed in the future; and ii) a standalone ESG measure has been introduced to the award structure, of at least 10% of the award; iii) Overall disclosure is adequate.
Annual Bonus is capped at 200% of base salary, and at 100% of base salary for the incumbent directors. The company does not appear to have set a cap on the LTIP as a percentage of base salary, raising concerns over potential excessiveness. If an executive Director does not satisfy the minimum shareholding requirement up to 50% of any bonus award may be deferred into shares for up to two years. It would be preferable 50% of the all annual bonus payments to deferred to shares for a three-year period. On the LTIP, concerns are raised by the plan as dividend equivalents payments are permitted under the plan and could be settled in cash. Such payments misalign shareholder and executive interests as shareholders must subscribe for shares in order to receive dividends whereas participants in the scheme do not. Vesting period is three-years which is not considered sufficiently long-term, however a two-year holding period apply which is welcomed. In addition, on termination or a change in control, upside discretion can be exercised by the Committee when determining severance payments under the incentive plan which is not supported.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

8. Re-elect Justin Dowley - Chair (Non Executive)
Chair. The Chair is not considered to be independent owing to a tenure of over nine years on the Board. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that a Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Being a non-independent Chair is considered to be incompatible with this. Oppose vote is therefore recommended.
In addition, as there is no Board-level Sustainability Committee, the Board Chair is considered to be accountable for the Company's sustainability programme and the Company's sustainability policies and practice are not considered to be adequate in order to minimize material risks linked to sustainability. Overall, opposition is recommended.

ATHEX GROUP AGM - 08-06-2023

5. Discharge the Board and the Auditors
Standard proposal. No serious governance concerns have been identified that would lead to a recommendation to oppose the discharge of the board. However, in this market, auditors discharge may prevent lawsuits or claims for activities carried out during the year relating to facts that have not been disclosed to shareholders. As a consequence, releasing auditors from liability will weaken the governance framework and introduce great risks for investors. On this basis, opposition is recommended.

14. Authorize Board to Participate in Companies with Similar Business Interests
With this resolution, the Board is seeking authority that Members of the Board of Directors and to other Executives of the Bank may participate in the Boards of Directors and/or in the Management of companies of the Group, having similar purposes to those of the Company. This authority is not sought for defined appointments. As a consequence, if approved, this authority may lead to potential time commitment concerns. In addition, an excessive number positions within the same company may develop excessive familiarity and trust, which would eventually hinder an effective independent oversight by directors (while there is already insufficient independent representation on the Board). On these grounds, opposition is recommended.

SALMAR ASA AGM - 08-06-2023

9. Approve the Remuneration Report
It is proposed to approve the implementation of the remuneration policy. The payout is in line with best practice, being under 200% of the fixed salary. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. On balance, abstention is recommended.

A dividend was put forward for shareholder's approval, which is welcomed. The company have disclosed a voting policy indicating how they vote on issues relating to investment and investee companies. In addition, it is noted ESG matters are taken into account in investment decisions which is welcomed. Administration and company secretarial duties are undertaken by the Investment Manager of the company. Independence from the management company is considered a key governance issue affecting investment trusts and to ensure that the management company is not used as a conduit for shareholder communication with the board. 8. Re-appoint the auditor, Ernst & Young LLP

EY proposed. No non-audit fees were paid to the auditors in the past three years. This approach is commended.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).
The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state.
PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

KPMG proposed. No non-audit fees were paid to the auditors in the past three years. This approach is commended. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

ASHTEAD TECHNOLOGY AGM - 08-06-2023

2. Approve the Remuneration Report
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

The Board is seeking approval to issue up to an additional 10% of the Company's issued share capital for cash for use only in connection with an acquisition or a specified capital investment. Such proposal is not supported. Best practice would be to seek a specific authority from shareholders in relation to a specific transaction if such situation arises. all) of which will vest depending on the achievement of some performance criteria. Vesting period is three years and as such is considered to be short-term, while performance targets have not been fully disclosed in a quantified manner at this time.
LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

3. Issue Shares with Pre-emption Rights in connection with the Convertible Loan Notes
Introduction & Background: The Company announced on 18 May 2023 that it proposes to raise, subject to certain conditions: (i) approximately GBP 6 million (before expenses) in aggregate by way of a conditional Placing of new Ordinary Shares at the Issue Price to certain institutional and other investors and by way of a Retail Offer made to eligible retail Shareholders through the issue of Retail Offer Shares at the Issue Price through the Bookbuild Platform; and (ii) up to approximately GBP 2 million (before expenses) by way of an Open Offer made to Eligible Shareholders of up to 77,648,390 Open Offer Shares at the Issue Price. The Company announced on 19 May 2023 that 240,000,000 New Ordinary Shares would be issued pursuant to the Placing and Retail Offer at the Issue Price. In addition, the Company intends to raise a minimum of USD 15 million (approximately GBP 12 million) through the proposed issue of Convertible Loan Notes to Carbon Direct Capital and further amounts to satisfy the Minimum Amount Condition through potential further issuances of Convertible Loan Notes and/or new Ordinary Shares to investors other than Carbon Direct Capital.
Proposal: It is proposed to the shareholders to authorise the Board Directors to grant rights to subscribe for or to convert any security into ordinary shares in the Company or to allot ordinary shares in the Company up to a maximum aggregate nominal amount of GBP 24,200,000.
Rationale: The Convertible Loan Notes are structured to incentivise a US dual listing of Velocys. The Convertible Loan Notes are unsecured and automatically convert into fully-paid Ordinary Shares at the Conversion Price upon US Listing. The Convertible Loan Notes will not bear interest, provided that Velocys achieves a US Listing prior to the 21-month anniversary of the issue of the Convertible Loan Notes. Discussions are ongoing with additional potential Convertible Loan Note investors. The Directors have been considering the merits of a US Listing for some time, given Velocys' Bayou Fuels Project and technical centre in the US, favourable pro-sustainable fuels legislation, and the large number of US specialist institutional investors. The Directors believe that a dual listing in the US will further enhance the Company's reputation and increase global awareness of the Company's proprietary technology. This funding provides the impetus and support for progressing these plans.
Recommendation: The use of Convertible Loan Notes are not considered appropriate as they put investors at significant risk of dilution in the event that conversion occurs. In addition, the proposal ask for an authority which is more than 100% of the share capital of the company. Therefore, opposition is recommended.

Regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. By seemingly not including diversity in the composition of the board, and not having an adequate target to do so, it is considered that the company is not taking into account the materiality of non-financial factors, which could be detrimental for shareholders. Opposition is recommended.

VPC SPECIALTY LENDING INVESTMENTS PLC EGM - 12-06-2023

1. Approve Investment Policy

Introduction & Background: As set out in the Company's announcement on 22 December 2022, the Board had for some time been reviewing options for reducing the continuing deep discount of the Company's Share price to NAV per Share and had taken professional advice and consulted certain major Shareholders of the Company. Given the average discount of the Company's Share price to NAV per Share over the 3 month period ended 31 March 2023 was 17.5%, being greater than 5% this would have required the Company to propose the 25% Exit Opportunity following the 2023 AGM, in keeping with the commitment it made to Shareholders in 2020. However, the Board also explained in the Company's announcement on 22 December 2022 that it does not believe that the 25% Exit Opportunity alone would have a lasting impact on the discount of the Company's Share price to NAV per Share and that the 25% Exit Opportunity might in fact have a potentially detrimental impact for Shareholders. This is because the Company would shrink in size, resulting in the Shares potentially becoming less liquid and the ratio of fees and other costs increasing as a proportion of NAV. Rather than shrink the size of the Company and potentially decrease liquidity through the 25% Exit Opportunity, the Board has determined that a preferable course of action would be to provide an exit opportunity to Shareholders which improves on the 25% Exit Opportunity and should generate greater value for Shareholders. The Board believes that it would be in the best interests of the Company and Shareholders as a whole to put forward a proposal for a managed wind-down of the Company, which would provide a full managed exit for all Shareholders (as opposed to just a partial one, which would have been the case under the 25% Exit Opportunity).

Proposal: The investment objective will be restated as follows: "To conduct an orderly realisation of the assets of the Company, to be effected in a manner that seeks to achieve a balance between returning cash to Shareholders promptly and maximising value." The investment policy will be amended to state that, from the date of the Circular until 30 June 2023, the Company may make new investments directly (in aggregate) up to 5 per cent. of its Gross Assets (at the time of the investment) in consumer loans, SME loans, advances against corporate trade receivables and/or purchases of corporate trade receivables originated by portfolio companies. Following this period, the Company may not make any new investments save that: (a) investments may be made to honour existing documented contractual commitments to existing portfolio companies as a majority of the Company's investments are delayed draw term loans; (b) further investment may be made into the Company's existing investments without redemption rights in order to preserve the value of such investments; and (c) realised cash may be invested in cash or cash equivalents, government or public securities (as defined in the rules of the UK Financial Conduct Authority), money market instruments, bonds, commercial paper or other debt obligations with banks or other counterparties having a "single A" (or equivalent) or higher credit rating as determined by any internationally recognized rating agency selected by the directors of the Company (which may or may not be registered in the European Union pending its return to Shareholders in accordance with the Company's investment objective.

Rationale: The Board believes that it would be in the best interests of the Company and Shareholders as a whole to put forward a proposal for a managed wind-down of the Company, which would provide a full managed exit for all Shareholders (as opposed to just a partial one, which would have been the case under the 25% Exit Opportunity).

Recommendation: Disclosure of rationale for the proposed change in policy is adequate. It is believed that any change in investment mandate can only be recommended where a fully independent management committee is in place, given that investment managers may be incentivised to alter a mandate to reweight or newly include a geography, sector or style by factors beyond the interests of this investment trust. As the management committee is not considered to be fully independent, an abstain vote is recommended.

2. Amend Investment Management Agreement

It is proposed to restructure the Investment Manager's agreement and performance fees arrangements in light of the proposed change in strategy throughout the orderly realisation process. The revised performance fee arrangements will entail that the Manager will not be entitled to receive any performance fee unless both the High Water Mark Condition and the Investment Hurdle Condition are met, and that any performance fees will only then be paid to the Investment Manager concurrent, and on a pro rata basis, with amounts being distributed to Shareholders, with performance fees in effect being paid out of realised returns only. Provided that the cumulative aggregate cash returned to Shareholders pursuant to one or more Distribution Event(s) totals an amount which is at least the High Water Mark NAV Amount of GBP 317,614,783, upon each Distribution Event, the Investment Manager shall, subject to the Investment Hurdle Condition as set out below, be entitled to receive 20 per cent. Of the Excess being returned to Shareholders at that Distribution Event, provided that the Adjusted Net Asset Value as at the date of such Distribution Event exceeds the Adjusted Hurdle Value. The new agreement will also designate a new minimum management fee for when the NAV is reduced to below GBP 50 million, after which the management fee will be GBP 500,000, GBP 350,000 and GBP 200,000 for the first, second and third years respectively.

Such proposals are considered on the basis of whether they are deemed fair; whether they have been adequately explained; and whether there is sufficient independent oversight of the recommended proposal. The Company has disclosed sufficient details of the new Investment Management Agreement. While the overall Board has a majority of independent directors, there are concerns that the investment management committee is not fully independent. In addition, there are concerns over the usage of performance fees, which are not considered best practice. Overall, opposition is recommended.

YARA INTERNATIONAL ASA AGM - 12-06-2023

3. Appoint the Auditors
Deloitte proposed. Non-audit fees represented 14.90% of audit fees during the year under review and 12.86% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than ten years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

Executive Chair. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that the Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Furthermore, gender balance on the Board is under 20%, which is considered as best practice in this market, although there are no specific local legal requirements or recommendations. 7. Elect Ramon S. Ang - Chair & Chief Executive
Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal.

CENTRICA PLC AGM - 13-06-2023

1. Receive the Annual Report
Strategic report meets guidelines. Adequate employment policies are in place. The Company also disclosed the proportion of women on the Board, in Executive Management positions and within the whole organisation.
Despite having some climate targets, the company does not have both a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 and an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change not having both adequate short term target and a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors. As such, an oppose vote is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose Results: For: 99.3, Abstain: 0.1, Oppose/Withhold: 0.6,

2. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The CEO's salary is in the median quartile of PIRC's comparator group. Total variable pay for the year under review was at 466.3% of the salary and is considered excessive since is higher than 200%. The pay ratio between the CEO and average employee is not considered acceptable at 38:1. PIRC consider acceptable a ratio up to 20:1.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit

pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

10. Re-elect Chris O Shea - Chief Executive
Chief Executive. Acceptable service contract provisions.
On 2 February 2023, British energy regulator Ofgem has ordered all suppliers to suspend the practice of forcibly installing prepayment meters after an investigation alleged agents acting on behalf of British Gas had broken into vulnerable customers' properties (including homes with elderly or young children) to fit such devices. The investigation by Ofgem had been launched after The Times had published an article where it states that they had witnessed the third-party contractor break into the house of a single parent with three young children. Chris O'Shea, Chief Executive of British Gas owner Centrica, apologised on 2 February 2023 for the "deeply disturbing" allegations about its third-party contractor, Arvato Financial Solutions, and said it had suspended the practice of forced instalments until "at least" the end of the winter. Organisations including Citizens Advice, the consumer charity, had long called for a ban until new customer protections could be introduced. On 4 May 2023, the company issued the results of an independent investigation into prepayment meters (PPM) fitted under court warrant, which was overseen by independent consultants Promontory Financial Services, and revealed there were no systemic issues with prepayment meters fitted under warrant.The Chief Executive declared changes to prepayment meter processes don't address the underlying problem of affordability and says a well-designed energy social tariff could help millions of consumers and supported the urgent introduction of Social Tariffs in the energy market.
However, the investigation report proposed a number of recommendations, including further investigation needed on 13 customer. The report also recommended, in relation to future governance and oversight arrangements (recommendation 5.26, page 20), changes should be implemented to enable a more integrated approach to the review of performance and customer experience in relation to the installation of PPMs by senior management. In particular, existing governance fora and frameworks both at the operational and senior management level should seek to bring together and scrutinise on a regular basis QA data, complaints (including complaints root cause analysis) and operational performance.
The Chief Executive declared changes to prepayment meter processes don't address the underlying problem of affordability and says a well-designed energy social tariff could help millions of consumers and supported the urgent introduction of Social Tariffs in the energy market. On this basis, abstention is recommended on the re-election of the Chief Executive until a roadmap for the implementation of the recommended governance changes be available and accessible.

The Board is seeking approval to issue up to an additional 5% of the Company's issued share capital for cash for use only in connection with an acquisition or a specified capital investment. Such proposal is not supported as it is considered that the 5% limit sought under the general authority above is sufficient. There are concerns over the risks and potential negative impact on shareholders interest connected to directors or other officers of the Company serving for competing companies. In addition, there is insufficient description on how the Company will take measure to monitor the conflicts of interest and prevent any negative effect for the Company and ultimately its shareholders. INTERNATIONAL CONSOLIDATED AIRLINES GROUP SA AGM - 14-06-2023

6. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The CEO's salary is in the lower quartile of the comparator group. Variable pay for the CEO was 166.95% of base salary for the year under review. The ratio of CEO to average employee pay has been estimated and is found not acceptable at 46:1
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

KPMG proposed. No non-audit fees were paid to the auditors in the past three years. This approach is commended. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

Before considering approval of buybacks (and this should come from the board, not the manager, nor a company secretary in the employ of the fund manager), we would like to see a public statement: - addressing whether any part of the discount can be explained by capitalisation of the costs (the total costs as in the Key Investor information Document - 'KID'), - setting out why the board believes that the performance of the incumbent management is not a contributory factor to the discount, and - setting out how the current fee structure might be contributing to the discount, for example some investment companies cap management fees, or reduce the manager fee the larger the fund gets, - setting out the effect of prior year buybacks to help determine the effectiveness of prior buybacks.

13. Approve the Remuneration Report
It is proposed to approve the implementation of the remuneration policy. The payout is in line with best practice, under 200% of the fixed salary. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. In addition, there are no claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration component which makes it unlikely that shareholders will be able to reclaim any variable remuneration unfairly paid out. On this basis, opposition is recommended.

The Board proposes the approval of a new long-term incentive plan. Vesting period is three years and as such is considered to be short-term, while performance targets have not been fully disclosed in a quantified manner at this time.

LTIP schemes are not considered an effective means of incentivising performance and are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the company. They are acting as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

CATERPILLAR INC. AGM - 14-06-2023

1.01. Elect Kelly A. Ayotte
Chair of the Sustainability Committee. As the Chair of the Sustainability Committee is considered to be accountable for the Company's sustainability programme, and given the concerns over the Company's sustainability policies and practice, an oppose vote is recommended.
Despite having some climate targets, the company has neither a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 or an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change neither having an adequate short term target nor a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors. As such, an oppose vote is recommended.

1.03. Elect Daniel M. Dickinson
Non-Executive Director, Chair of the Audit Committee. Not considered independent owing to a tenure of over nine years. It is considered that audit committees should be comprised exclusively of independent members, including the chair. Furthermore, at the company, there is no external whistle-blowing hotline. This suggests that such concerns that should be raised by a whistle-blower are dealt with internally, which may increase the risk of such issues not being followed up or escalating to a level where the higher was the level of the misconduct, the more likely is the issue to be concealed. On this basis, and on the potential unforeseeable consequences for the company, opposition is recommended to the re-election of the chair of the audit committee, who is considered to be accountable for the concerns with the whistle-blowing reporting structure.

Chair and CEO. Combined roles at the head of the Company. There should be a clear division of responsibilities at the head of the Company between the running of the board and the executive responsibility for the running of the Company's business. No one individual should have unfettered powers of decision. Combining the two roles in one person represents a concentration of power that is potentially detrimental to board balance, effective debate, and board appraisal.

9. Shareholder Resolution: Civil Rights, Non-Discrimination and Returns to Merit Audit
Proponent's argument: The National Center for Public Policy Research request that the Board of Directors commission an audit analyzing the impacts of the Company's Diversity, Equity & Inclusion policies on civil rights, non-discrimination and returns to merit, and the impacts of those issues on the Company's business. "Under the guise of ESG, corporations have allocated significant resources and attention towards implementing social justice into workplace practices and hiring. Across the political spectrum, all agree that employee success should be fostered and that no employees should face discrimination, but there is much disagreement about what non-discrimination means. Many companies - including Bank of America, American Express, Verizon, Pfizer, CVS and Caterpillar itself - have adopted "Diversity, Equity & Inclusion" (DEI) programs, trainings and officers that seek to establish racial and social "equity." But in practice, what "equity" really means is the distribution of pay and authority on the basis of race, sex, orientation and ethnicity rather than by merit. Where adopted, such programs have raised significant objections, including the concern that the programs and practices themselves are deeply racist, sexist, otherwise discriminatory and potentially in violation of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. And that by devaluing merit, corporations have sacrificed employee competence, moral and productivity to the altar of "diversity." "
Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "The proposal suggests that "too many employers have established stances that silence employees who disagree with the company's asserted positions." A key component of Caterpillar's D&I strategy is to foster an inclusive environment where people feel valued, respected and have a sense of belonging. Caterpillar employees are encouraged to share their unique perspectives, to speak up and our policies support this principle. In addition, any individual may confidentially report suspected or actual violations of Our Values in Action, company policies and applicable law, including workplace discrimination. Company policy prohibits any reprisal by any individual against an employee for raising a concern or making a report in good faith. "
PIRC analysis: The potential benefits of diversity lie in widening the perspectives on business issues brought to bear on innovation, avoiding too great a similarity of attitude and helping companies understand their customers, marketplace, supply chain and workforces. Disclosure surrounding the workforce's composition allows shareholders to consider workforce diversity in the context of the long-term interests of the company. Disclosure of a policy to improve diversity and goals that have been set to meet this policy also reassures shareholders that a diverse workforce is not just an aspiration but a goal. However, this resolution has been filed as a spoiler resolution to prevent other shareholders from filing resolutions regarding the company's workforce diversity and focuses on ideological diversity with the clear intent to ensure that conservative views are represented in the workforce as well as so-called liberal perspectives. While there is nothing inherently wrong about the proponents request for political and idealogical tolerance, the requested report is too one-sided to provide any real benefit to shareholders. For these reasons, a vote against the resolution is recommended.

1.1. Re-Elect Toyoda Akio
Incumbent Chairman. It is considered the responsibility of the most senior Board member to ensure that there is appropriate outside oversight of Board decisions. As there are three or more outside directors, it is considered that there is adequate outside presence on the Board. However, during the year under review, the company has been fined for environmental mismanagement, and while the full impact of this decision is yet to be ascertained, there are concerns over the company's environmental risk management processes. Unmanaged environmental risks could lead to serious physical, reputational or legal consequences for the company as well as harm to the broader community. Owing to the apparent failure of Board-level environmental oversight, opposition is recommended to oppose the Chair of the Sustainability Committee.

Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change not having both adequate short term target and a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors. As such, an oppose vote is recommended.

Newly appointed President. It is considered that the election of new executive directors, should not be supported, as their appointment to the Board would lead to a Board where independent directors comprise less than one-third of the whole board. Additionally, during the year under review, the company has been fined for environmental mismanagement, and while the full impact of this decision is yet to be ascertained, there are concerns over the company's environmental risk management processes. Unmanaged environmental risks could lead to serious physical, reputational or legal consequences for the company as well as harm to the broader community. Owing to the apparent failure of Board-level environmental oversight, opposition is recommended to oppose the Chair of the Sustainability Committee.
Despite having some climate targets, the company does not have both a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 and an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. It is proposed to approve the annual report on remuneration of Executive and Non-Executive Directors with an advisory vote. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. 4. Issuance of New Restricted Employee Shares of 2023
It is proposed to approve a restricted share plan for employees and corporate officers. The Board would receive the authority to set beneficiaries and other conditions. After allotment, shares will be restricted for three years, which is not considered to be sufficiently long term. The Company states that exercise of shares will be based on targets, which at this time remain undisclosed.
Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. On the other hand, executives are also among the beneficiaries: it is considered that support should not be given to stock or share option plans that do not lay out clear performance criteria, targets and conditions. 11. Re-appoint KPMG LLP as auditor of the Company
KPMG proposed. No Non-audit fees were paid for the year under review and non-audit fees represents 1.39% of audit fees on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than ten years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).
The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

It is proposed to amend the Articles to in order to include the delivery of shares, or shares options or amounts referenced to the value of the shares, as remuneration to directors for the performance of executive duties. Under the plan, participants will be allotted shares or rights to shares. Performance targets have not been fully quantified at this time, which makes an informed assessment impossible and may lead to (partial) payment against (partial) failure.
LTIP based schemes are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the Company (creating capital and - lawful - dividends). They act as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute Company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

It is proposed to introduce a new charge: the Honorary Chair for anindefinite term, with advisory functions relating to the definition of strategies and the determination of actions intended for the growth ofthe Company and the Group, the execution of extraordinary transactions, the preparation of guidelines for the development of new products and/or the identification of new markets.
The company has already proposed to elect a new chair. Currently, there is seemingly no significant case for a chair to step down while remaining on the board as honorary chair (and even less while the chair is still a major shareholder and can fulfill specific assignments as required without remaining as former chair). It would also be preferred, as a matter of principle, that articles not be amended to include changes ad hoc that have no serious impact on the governance of the company but add complexity to the structure without no significant visible benefit. 4. Say on Climate
Governance
The climate policy appears to be adequately linked to the governance of the company overall. The chair is indicated as being responsible for oversight of the climate strategy and members of the senior management have accrued significant experience in climate-related issues within the sector of the company.
There does not appear to be adequate experience and knowledge of climate change on the board of directors, and particularly there is no evidence that any of the directors on the non-executive directors on the board has significant experience of decarbonisation measures from within the core sector of operations of the company. There is no evidence of adequate training and learning on the Board or senior management of climate-related issues, most relevantly decarbonization.

The company has not pledged to review or end membership of trade associations or industry environmental lobbying groups, where these pursue goals or advertise actions contrary to the company's climate strategy.
Disclosure
The company climate strategy for the overall required energy transition includes a defined timeline, by which progress in emission reductions can be measured.
The company has committed to net zero by 2050 but this commitment only extends to part of its Scope 1, Scope 2 and Scope 3 emissions. Namely, Scope 3 emissions have not been adequately disclosed and the company reported to . This is considered to be inconsistent with an adequate commitment to a full energy transition, as shareholders are unable to make an informed assessment on the material efforts to reduce emissions and increase the resilience of the company in the long term.
PIRC Analysis
The company has reported to be working with supply chain to support the reduction of our Scope 3 emissions. Scope 3 emissions (all indirect emissions that occur in the value chain of the reporting company) can be indicators of exposure to climate risks, such as carbon and energy 'hot spots' in the supply chain or use of products. Although their reporting is not compulsory under the GHG Protocol, they can help companies identify opportunities to create greater efficiencies in their value chains. Quantifying and reporting these emissions is only the first step into building a strategy with targets to reduce Scope 3 emissions. This will allow the company manage risks and opportunities related to the value chain emissions more proactively, including engagement with its value chain on other sustainability issues deriving from this climate-related approach. Despite targets to reduce Scope 3 emissions, the Company has not disclosed their amount at this time. As such, at this time it is impossible to make an informed assessment on the the ambition of those targets and the ambition of the company's emission reduction initiatives overall. The concerns above are reinforced by a seeming inadequate experience or knowledge on decarbonisation measures from within the core sector of operations of the company, accompanied by lack of relevant training at board level. On balance, it is recommended to oppose.

Total potential variable pay could reach a maximum of 450% of the salary which is deemed excessive. 40% of the Bonus will defer to shares for three years, whilst the deferral period is adequate, it would be preferable for 50% of the Bonus to defer into shares. The Performance Share Plan based on the achievement of relative Total Return and relative Total Shareholder Return targets. The absence of Non-financial parameters to assess Executives' long-term performance is considered contrary to the best practice as such factors are generally beyond an individual director's control. Non-financial parameters allow the remuneration policy to focus on the operational performance of the business as a whole and the individual roles of each of the senior executives in achieving that performance. Vesting period is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term, however a two-year holding period apply which is welcomed. Malus and claw back provisions apply to all variable pay.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

14. Re-appoint PwC as the Auditors
PwC proposed. Non-audit fees represented 12.86% of audit fees during the year under review and 15.50% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than ten years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).
The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

The Board is seeking approval to issue up to an additional 10% of the Company's issued share capital for cash for use only in connection with an acquisition or a specified capital investment. No proposal is available at the present time. As per market practice, the proposed remuneration is likely to be made available only at the meeting. Although this is a common practice for a standard item in this market, support will not be suggested for resolutions concerning remuneration when sufficient information has not been made available for shareholders in sufficient time prior to the meeting, as such practice prevents shareholders from reaching an informed decision. 9C. Extend the General Share Issue Mandate to Repurchased Shares
The directors seek authority to re-issue shares repurchased under the authority proposed at this meeting. Given the concerns over dilution of the shareholder rights, opposition is recommended.

9D. To Consider and Approve the Adoption of the Share Option Scheme
The Board proposes the approval of a new executive incentive plan. Under the plan, participants will be allotted shares or rights to shares. Performance targets have not been fully quantified at this time, which makes an informed assessment impossible and may lead to (partial) payment against (partial) failure.
LTIP based schemes are inherently flawed. There is the risk that they are rewarding volatility rather than the performance of the Company (creating capital and - lawful - dividends). They act as a complex and opaque hedge against absolute Company underperformance and long-term share price falls. They are also a significant factor in reward for failure.

13. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The CEO salary for the year under review increased by 4% and is in line with the workforce which the salary increase by 8.2%. The CEO salary is in the median of the competitor group. The CEO's total realized variable pay is not considered acceptable at approximately 307.2% of salary (STIP: 89.7, LTIP: 217.5% of salary). The ratio of CEO to average employee pay has been estimated at 27:1, which is not considered adequate. It is recommended the CEO pay ratio to be at 20:1.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

The salary increase in the year under review for the CEO was 1.7% while the average increase for UK employees of the Company was 8.6%. The salary of the CEO is in line with the workforce. However, the CEO salary is in the upper quartile of the competitor group which raises concerns for potential excessiveness. The CEO's total realized reward under variable incentive schemes for the year under review is considered excessive at 198.8% (Annual Bonus:198.8% of salary - PSP: 0% of salary). During the FY2022/23 there were two labour issues: i) On 22 December 2022, it was reported that shop workers union Usdaw had been granted the right to proceed with its case over Tesco's fire and rehire practices. Previously, a February 2022 ruling by the High Court had banned Tesco from dismissing its warehouse staff and seeking to rehire them at lower pay. In July 2022, the Court of Appeal did side with Tesco, but permission has now been granted for Usdaw to take its case to the Supreme Court, which may overrule the Court of Appeal and ii) On 19 February 2023, a BBC investigation found that more than 70 women, working on Kenyan tea farms, owned at the time by Unilever and James Finlay & Co., had accused their supervisors of sexual abuse. Several women told a BBC reporter that due to the scarcity of work, they were forced to give into their managers' sexual demands. James Finlay & Co. supplies Kenyan tea to Tesco and Sainsbury's supermarkets, as well as Starbucks. A BBC undercover reporter was invited for an interview to work for James Findlay, which took turned out to be in a hotel room, where the recruiter pinned her against the window and asked her to undress. Tesco said it took the allegations "extremely seriously," and was in "constant dialogue" with Finlay's to ensure "robust measures" are taken.

In addition, Ms. Platt is the Chair of the remuneration committee. There are serious concerns regarding the implementation of remuneration at the company and it is considered that chair of the remuneration committee should be held accountable for it when considering re-election. 10. Re-appoint PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP as auditors to the Company
PwC proposed. No Non-audit fees were paid for the year under review and non-audit fees represents 5.56% of audit fees on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).
The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

15. Authorise Share Repurchase
Authority is sought to repurchase up to 14.99% of the issued share capital. The authority would expire at the next AGM. Before considering approval of buybacks (and this should come from the board, not the manager, nor a company secretary in the employ of the fund manager), we would like to see a public statement: - addressing whether any part of the discount can be explained by capitalisation of the costs (the total costs as in the Key Investor information Document - 'KID'), - setting out why the board believes that the performance of the incumbent management is not a contributory factor to the discount, and - setting out how the current fee structure might be contributing to the discount, for example some investment companies cap management fees, or reduce the manager fee the larger the fund gets, - setting out the effect of prior year buybacks to help determine the effectiveness of prior buybacks.

HONDA MOTOR CO LTD AGM - 21-06-2023

1.1. Re-Elect Kuraishi Seiji
Incumbent Chairman. It is considered the responsibility of the most senior Board member to ensure that there is appropriate outside oversight of Board decisions. As there are three or more outside directors, it is considered that there is adequate outside presence on the Board.
Despite having some climate targets, the company does not have both a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 and an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change not having both adequate short term target and a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors. As such, an oppose vote is recommended.

During the year under review, the company has been fined for a product safety issue, and while the full impact of this decision is yet to be ascertained, there are concerns about the legal and reputational implications of this upon the company.
As the Chair of the Sustainability Committee is considered to be accountable for the Company's sustainability programme, and given the concerns over the Company's sustainability policies and practice, an oppose vote is recommended.

1d. Elect Anne Gates - Non-Executive Director
Non-Executive Director, chair of the audit committee. At the company, there is no external whistle-blowing hotline. This suggests that such concerns that should be raised by a whistle-blower are dealt with internally, which may increase the risk of such issues not being followed up or escalating to a level where the higher was the level of the misconduct, the more likely is the issue to be concealed. On this basis, and on the potential unforeseeable consequences for the company, opposition is recommended to the re-election of the chair of the audit committee, who is considered to be accountable for the concerns with the whistle-blowing reporting structure.

9. Shareholder Resolution: Report on EEO Policy Risks
Proponent's argument: National Center for Public Policy Research request the Kroger Company ("Kroger") issue a public report detailing the potential risks associated with omitting "viewpoint" and "ideology" from its written equal employment opportunity (EEO) policy. "Kroger recently kowtowed to leftwing social media criticism by removing patriotic and Second Amendment related paraphernalia from store shelves. For instance, after someone complained on Twitter about a drink sleeve that stated, "Arms Change, Rights Don't", the Company reportedly recalled the items. Kroger's subsidiary grocery store, Harris Teeter, likewise complied with liberal demands to pull "Freedom Series" items from its shelves, removing items that read, "Give me liberty or give me death" and "America, love it or leave it." While removing patriotic items from its stores, Kroger has simultaneously pushed a leftwing social agenda. Published in2021, the Company released an "allyship guide" that told employees to use "inclusive language" and celebrate transgender holidays. Defining terms such as "non-binary," "transgender," and "pansexual," the guide asserts that, "Some people's morality can be a barrier to accepting LGBTQ+ people." Removing pro-America items from store shelves while publishing "allyship" training guides for staff certainly raise concerns over how Kroger treats employees with diverse points of view, particularly those who disagree with the Company's blatant leftwing actions. This places the Company in reputational, legal, and financial risk, as evidenced by a recent settlement with fired employees who refused to wear a Company issued apron adorning a rainbow on account of it violating their religious beliefs."
Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "Our formal DE&I Framework for Action, launched in 2020, is focused on creating a more inclusive culture and advancing equitable communities, among other goals, underscoring Kroger's commitment to standing together and mobilizing our people, passion, scale and resources to transform our culture and our communities. The framework is built around pillars focused on creating a more inclusive culture, developing diverse talent, advancing diverse partnerships, advancing equitable communities and deeply listening and reporting progress. In particular, we understand that our associates have a wide range of viewpoints. We are committed to a culture of fairness, respect and inclusion that drives us to value and embrace differences. As part of our Framework for Action, we are engaging with external and internal stakeholders to seek perspectives and provide associates with platforms to continue sharing their stories and feedback. To that end, Kroger launched an internal DEI Advisory Council made up of cross-functional leaders who are committed to advancing this progress, working closely with senior officers and business leaders to identify opportunities and specific actions for improvement, as well as the Board's Compensation & Talent Development Committee overseeing progress on our human capital efforts, including DEI."

PIRC analysis: The potential benefits of staff diversity lie in widening the perspectives on human resources brought to bear on decision-making, avoiding too great a similarity of attitude and helping companies understand their workforces as a kaleidoscope of customers, marketplace, supply chain and society as a whole. Disclosure surrounding the company's staff composition allows shareholders to consider diversity in the context of the long-term interests of the company, including the ability to attract and retain key talent. Disclosure of a policy to improve diversity and goals that have been set to meet this policy also reassures shareholders that a diverse board is not just an aspiration but a goal. However, this resolution appears to be filed by a right-wing policy think tanks as a spoiler resolution to prevent other shareholders from filing resolutions regarding the company's diversity and focuses on ideological diversity with the clear intent to ensure that conservative views are represented on the board as well as so-called liberal perspectives. Given the diversity that already exists on company's staff, a vote against the resolution is recommended.

MELIA HOTELS INTL SA AGM - 22-06-2023

2.1. Elect Gabriel Escarrer Julia - Chair (Non Executive)
Non-Executive Chair. Not considered independent as the director is the founder and significant shareholder of the company. Additionally, he is father of Gabriel Escarrer, current CEO and Vice Chair. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that the Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. An Oppose vote is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

2.2. Elect Alfredo Pastor Bodmer - Non-Executive Director
Non-Executive Director. Not considered independent as the director is considered to be connected with a significant shareholder: Hoteles Mallorquines S.L. There is insufficient independent representation on the Board.

Vote Cast: Oppose

3.1. Appoint the Auditors
Delloite proposed. Non-audit fees represented 26.20% of audit fees during the year under review and 20.01% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees raises some concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

Vote Cast: Abstain

4.1. Approve General Share Issue Mandate
It is proposed to authorize the Board to issue shares with or without without pre-emptive rights, for up to 50% and 20% of the current share capital, respectively. The authority is valid for the next five years. While the duration is in accordance with Article 297.1.b and 506 of the Capital Companies Act, it is deemed excessive as it is believed that shareholders should decide upon such resolutions annually.

Vote Cast: Oppose

4.2. Authorisation to the Board to issue debentures or bonds
The Board requests shareholder authorization to issue debt, including convertible debt without pre-emptive rights, up to 50% of the share capital, over a period of five years. This is in accordance with Article 507 of the Capital Companies Act, but it exceeds guidelines for issuance without pre-emptive rights.

4.3. Authorise Share Repurchase
It is proposed to authorise the Board to purchase Company's shares for 15% and five years. This resolution will not be supported unless the Board has set forth a clear, cogent and compelling case demonstrating how the authority would benefit long-term shareholders. The Company has stated that this resolution may authorise the Board of Directors to allocate all or part of its repurchased shares to remuneration schemes. However, this is not considered to be sufficient, as it includes only part of the requested authority. As no clear justification was provided by the Board regarding the full use of the authority, an oppose vote is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

5.1. Approve the Remuneration Report
It is proposed to approve the annual report on remuneration of Executive and Non-Executive Directors with an advisory vote. The Company discloses all elements of remuneration for Executives and Non-Executives. The payout is in line with best practice, being under 200% of the fixed salary. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed. However, the Company has not fully disclosed quantified targets against which the achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. Although a common practice in this market as this is deemed to be sensitive information, it prevents an accurate assessment and may lead to overpayment against underperformance. On balance, abstention is recommended.

OI S.A. AGM - 22-06-2023

A2.. Approve Financial Statements
Disclosure is acceptable and the report was made available sufficiently before the meeting. However, The Company has not disclosed the fees paid to the auditors for the year under review, and what non-audit services have been provided, if any. Under Brazilian legislation, companies are not required in their financial statements to disclose the amount paid for the External Audit except where additional services have been engaged and the value of such services exceeds 5% of the total amount paid to the external auditor. Nevertheless, it is considered that companies should go beyond minimum regulatory requirements. Not disclosing the fees paid to the auditors is considered to be a serious breach of shareholder accountability, as it is impossible to assess the existence of potential conflicts of interest that would hinder the independence of the auditor. On this ground, opposition is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose

A4.. Approve Maximum Remuneration
It is proposed to approve the maximum compensation for Directors, Management and Fiscal Council for next year. It is regrettable that the Company bundled these items, however it is common practice in this market. The amount proposed under this resolution is not the actual remuneration but the global remuneration cap, and includes fixed salaries and short term incentives.
Directors and Fiscal Council receive only fixed fees. For Management, it is proposed to cap remuneration at BRL 24,1 million. Variable remuneration for executives would correspond to up to 269% of the fixed pay, which is deemed excessive. In addition, there is lack of disclosure with respect of targets and measurable criteria for variable remuneration, which prevents shareholders from making an informed assessment. Opposition is recommended.

WHITBREAD PLC AGM - 22-06-2023

2. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The CEO salary is in line with the workforce. The CEO's salary is in the median of the Company's comparator group. Total variable remuneration for the year under review was 217.1% of the base salary and is considered excessive since is higher than 200%. The ratio of CEO pay compared to average employee pay is not acceptable at 134:1, it is recommended that the ratio does not exceed 20:1.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are

employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

In addition, at the 2022 Annual General Meeting the re-election of Mr. Fiskers received significant opposition of 11.36% of the votes. 1. Receive the Annual Report
The annual report was made available sufficiently before the meeting and has been audited and certified. However, there are concerns surrounding the sustainability policies and practice at the company and the lack of adequate board level accountability for sustainability issues. Therefore, it is considered that the annual report and the financial statements may not accurately reflect the material and financial impact of non-traditional financial risks. These concerns should have been addressed in the annual report submitted to shareholders, however the annual report fails to address these concerns adequately and therefore this resolution cannot be supported.

Vote Cast: Abstain Results: For: 0.0, Abstain: 99.0, Oppose/Withhold: 1.0,

2. Approve Remuneration Policy
Total potential variable pay is cap at 200% of the salary, however this could rise to 250% of the salary in exceptional circumstances, which is not considered appropriate. For the Annual Bonus 67% is paid in cash and 33% defer to shares for three years. Although the duration of the deferral period is welcomed, it would be preferable 50% of the Bonus to defer to shares for three years. Concerns are raised for the LTIP award, since it is based on the achievement of EPS and relative TSR targets. The absence of Non-financial parameters to assess Executives' long-term performance is considered contrary to best practice as such factors are generally beyond an individual director's control. Non-financial parameters allow the remuneration policy to focus on the operational performance of the business as a whole and the individual roles of each of the senior executives in achieving that performance. The vesting period is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term, however a two year holding period apply which is welcomed. Further concerns for the variable pay are that the performance metrics are not operating interdependently, such that vesting under the incentive plan is only possible where all threshold targets are met. There is no evidence thatdividends may not accrue on vesting awards from the date of grant. Such rewards misalign shareholders and executive interests as shareholders must subscribe for shares in order to receive dividends whereas participants in the scheme do not. Malus and clawback provisions apply to all variable pay.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are

EY proposed. No non-audit fees were paid to the auditors in the past three years. This approach is commended.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).
The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

Despite having some climate targets, the company does not have both a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 and an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change not having both adequate short term target and a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors. 8. Re-appoint PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP as auditors of the Company
PwC proposed. No non-audit fees were paid to the auditors in the past three years. This approach is commended. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

Authority is sought to repurchase up to 14.99% of the issued share capital. The authority would expire at the next AGM. Before considering approval of buybacks (and this should come from the board, not the manager, nor a company secretary in the employ of the fund manager), we would like to see a public statement: - addressing whether any part of the discount can be explained by capitalisation of the costs (the total costs as in the Key Investor information Document - 'KID'), - setting out why the board believes that the performance of the incumbent management is not a contributory factor to the discount, and - setting out how the current fee structure might be contributing to the discount, for example some investment companies cap management fees, or reduce the manager fee the larger the fund gets, - setting out the effect of prior year buybacks to help determine the effectiveness of prior buybacks.

CAPRICORN ENERGY PLC AGM - 26-06-2023

2. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The CEO's salary is in the median of the comparator group. Total CEO realized variable pay was 189% of base salary. The ratio of CEO to average employee pay has been estimated and is found appropriate at 7:1.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

Vote Cast: Oppose Results: For: 99.3, Abstain: 0.0, Oppose/Withhold: 0.6,

3. Approve Remuneration Policy

Changes to the remuneration policy include: i) the value of regular ongoing benefits will be reduced and car allowance removed; ii) executive pension benefits will be aligned to the workforce rate; iii) 25% of the annual bonus will be deferred, as opposed to the portion over 100% of salary.

Potential variable pay could reach 375% of the salary and is deemed excessive. 25% of the annual bonus is deferred to shares for a three year period. This is not considered adequate, it would be preferable 50% of the Bonus to defer to shares for at least three years. Concerns are raised for the LTIP awards, since there are no non-financial performance measures attached to the LTIP and so the focus of remuneration policy is not the operational performance of the business as a whole or the individual roles of each of the executives in achieving that performance. Instead, the focus of the remuneration policy is financial KPIs, which mainly include factors beyond an individual director's control. The vesting period is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term, however, a two year holding period apply which is welcomed. Malus and clawback provisions apply to all variable pay.

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

PwC proposed. Non-audit fees represented 26.21% of audit fees during the year under review and 15.90% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees raises some concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. The current auditor has been in place for more than ten years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).

The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

The Board is seeking approval to issue up to an additional 5% of the Company's issued share capital for cash for use only in connection with an acquisition or a specified capital investment. Such proposal is not supported as it is considered that the 5% limit sought under the general authority above is sufficient. Best practice would be to seek a specific authority from shareholders in relation to a specific transaction if such situation arises. Incumbent Chairman. It is considered the responsibility of the most senior Board member to ensure that there is appropriate outside oversight of Board decisions. As there are three or more outside directors, it is considered that there is adequate outside presence on the Board.
Despite having some climate targets, the company does not have both a clear commitment to net zero by 2050 and an adequate short-term target. These targets are considered essential for companies that are strategically important for the transition to net zero. Having a target for net zero by 2050 at the latest shows overall commitment of the company to adequately manage climate risks. Short term emission reductions are required to keep alive the ambition of holding global warming to 1.5 degrees while short term targets are also critical for accountability purposes. Given the time passed since the Paris Agreement and the scale investment risks posed by climate change not having both adequate short term target and a net zero by 2050 commitment is considered to fall short of best practice and poses a major risk for investors. As such, an oppose vote is recommended.

4. Shareholder Resolution: Initiate Share Repurchase Program
Proponent's argument: Shareholders proposed to repurchase of the company's common stock up to a total of 21,500,000 shares or up to the total amount of 180,000,000,000 yen, in cash, within one year from the conclusion of the Ordinary General Meeting of Shareholders. "Taking into consideration the current deterioration of ROE due to the accumulation of cash assets, even when we take into account future M&A's, capital investments, R&D expenses, and business operation funds which are necessary to prepare for unforeseen risks, the current levels of cash assets are excessive. The accumulation of cash assets in excess of necessary funds will lead to a decline in capital efficiency and damage to corporate value. Given the fact that Secom is engaged in superior businesses with a high ROIC and that ROE is deteriorating due to the increase in cash assets, Secom should aim to improve ROE by further enhancing shareholder returns. Accordingly, we believe that to further enhance shareholder returns and improve capital efficiency Secom should adopt measures to repurchase approximately 10% of its shares outstanding (excluding treasury shares) as treasury shares."
Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "In order to implement [...] priority strategies (set forth in the "SECOM Group Road Map 2027"]and realize them, the Company believes that it is extremely important to allocate cash flow from operating activities to growth investments, funds for business operation and shareholder returns, while considering the balance among them. As a result of social changes and the rapid evolution of technology, our businesses including security services are approaching a period of major transformation. The Company believes that all of the priority strategies outlined in "SECOM Group Road Map 2027" will yield appropriate returns as growth investments to enhance corporate value by expanding earnings and improving productivity. The Company also intends to actively pursue domestic and overseas M&A opportunities necessary to realize the "SECOM Group's Vision for 2030" as one of growth investments, while carefully monitoring investment efficiency.

PIRC analysis: This resolution will not be supported unless the proponent has set forth a clear, cogent and compelling case demonstrating how the authority would benefit long-term shareholders. As no clear justification was provided by the proponent, an oppose vote is recommended.

Deloitte proposed. Non-audit fees represented 2014.84% of audit fees during the year under review. This level of non-audit fees raises major concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor. A break down of the nature of the non-audit fees has not been provided, in addition, the Company has not adequately addressed the reasoning for why the amount of non-audit fees are so high in comparison to the statutory audit fee. The current auditor has been in place for more than five years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.

8. Approve Capital Management Plan for 2023-2027
The board seeks approval of the Company's Capital Management Plan 2023 - 2027, as required by the latest capital regulatory requirements of the Chinese banking industry. The proposed strategy is to: (i) closely keep abreast of the implementation of the international regulatoryrules, and reinforce the connection between capital planning and budget management; (ii) optimise economic capital management, and take full advantage of the critical role of capital management in strategy implementation; (iii) strengthen the internal capital adequacy assessment mechanism.
Such proposals are considered on the basis of whether they are deemed fair, whether they have been adequately explained, and whether there is sufficient independent oversight of the recommended proposal. The circular contains sufficient details of the transaction, but there is insufficient independence on the Board. This is considered to be a potential risk for the decision not to be taken with appropriate independence and objectivity. Abstention is recommended.

All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The CEO salary is in the median of the comparator group. The variable pay for the year under review was at 113% of the salary. The ratio of CEO pay compared to median employee pay is considered excessive at 57:1.

MASTERCARD INCORPORATED AGM - 27-06-2023

1.a. Elect Merit E. Janow - Chair (Non Executive)
Non-Executive Chair, Chair of the Nominating and Corporate Governance Committee. Not considered independent due a tenure exceeding nine years. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that the Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. Furthermore, the Chair of the Nominating and Corporate Governance Committee is considered to be accountable for the Company's sustainability programme, and given the concerns over the Company's sustainability policies and practice, an oppose vote is recommended.

4. Approval of Mastercard Incorporated Employee Stock Purchase Plan
It is proposed to approve a restricted share plan for employees and corporate officers. The Board would receive the authority to set beneficiaries and other conditions. After allotment, shares will be restricted for three years, which is not considered to be sufficiently long term. The Company states that exercise of shares will be based on targets, which at this time remain undisclosed.
Plans to increase employee shareholding are considered to be a positive governance practice, as they can contribute to alignment between employees and shareholders. On the other hand, executives are also among the beneficiaries: it is considered that support should not be given to stock or share option plans that do not lay out clear performance criteria, targets and conditions. On balance, opposition is recommended.

6. Shareholder Resolution: Report on Ensuring Respect for Civil Liberties
Proponent's argument: National Center for Public Policy Research (NCPPR) request the Board of Directors evaluates how it oversees risks related to discrimination against individuals based on their race, color, religion (including religious views), sex, national origin, or political views, and whether such discrimination may impact individuals' exercise of their constitutionally protected civil rights. "The Statement on Debanking and Free Speech identified many companies in the financial services industry that frequently include vague and subjective standards in their policies like "hate speech" or promoting "intolerance" that allow employees to deny or restrict service for arbitrary or discriminatory reasons. The 2022 edition of the Viewpoint Diversity Business Index3 also identified numerous examples of this in many companies' terms of service. The inclusion of vague and arbitrary terms risks impacting clients' exercise of their constitutionally protected civil rights, by creating the potential that such persons or groups will be denied access to essential services as a consequence of their speech or political activity. Moreover, they risk giving fringe activists and governments a foothold to demand that private financial institutions deny service under the sweeping, unfettered discretion that such policies provide."

Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "As described in our Human Rights Statement, Mastercard's franchise standard of use for our services and brand is governed by the rule of law. When it comes to transactions permissible by law, we respect individuals' right to transact privately with others. Our core commitment is to enable consumers and businesses to access their financial assets and engage in private commerce-expanding their liberty, connectivity and individual agency-consistent with the rule of law. While we hold all stakeholders in our payments system to high standards, if illegal activity is identified, we work with partners to act.[...] Inclusion is a core value at Mastercard, and we consider it a leadership skill that all employees are called on to foster. We have adopted longstanding policies and procedures and train our employees to ensure that they do not discriminate against our customers or each other in the performance of their services. For example, in 2021, we launched and completed a guide and training on bias in product and data practices. Our training programs provide our employees with the framework they need to maintain our commitment to servicing clients with diverse viewpoints."
PIRC analysis: The potential benefits of diversity lie in widening the perspectives on business issues brought to bear on innovation, avoiding too great a similarity of attitude and helping companies understand their customers, marketplace, supply chain and workforces. Disclosure surrounding the workforce's composition allows shareholders to consider workforce diversity in the context of the long-term interests of the company. Disclosure of a policy to improve diversity and goals that have been set to meet this policy also reassures shareholders that a diverse workforce is not just an aspiration but a goal. However, this resolution has been filed as a spoiler resolution to prevent other shareholders from filing resolutions regarding the company's workforce diversity and focuses on ideological diversity with the clear intent to ensure that conservative views are represented in the workforce as well as so-called liberal perspectives. While there is nothing inherently wrong about the proponents request for political and idealogical tolerance, the requested report is too one-sided to provide any real benefit to shareholders. For these reasons, a vote against the resolution is recommended.

Vote Cast: Oppose Results: For: 0.6, Abstain: 0.8, Oppose/Withhold: 98.6,

10. Shareholder Resolution: Report on the cost-benefit analysis of diversity and inclusion efforts
Proponent's argument: Ridgeline Research request that Mastercard issue a public report prior to December 31, 2023, omitting confidential and privileged information and at a reasonable expense, detailing a cost vs. benefits analysis of Mastercard's Global Diversity & Inclusion efforts. "We view Mastercard as being organized to provide the best quality goods and services to its customers while maximizing the return to the investors who fund the Company. As with any corporate initiative, prioritizing diversity comes with a cost. It's clear that Mastercard's Diversity & Inclusion program (D&I) is a major strategic initiative and as shareholders we feel the 2021 Global Inclusion Annual Report1 lacks a complete analysis of the quantified net benefit to shareholders, costs, and risks and is thus incomplete. Given the substantial resources committed to the program, as well as its visibility and importance, as shareholders we feel its net benefit should be measured and quantified using sound financial analysis. Without establishing such a full business justification, the program's benefit to shareholders, as well as its sincerity and motives are in doubt. "
Company's response: The board recommended a vote against this proposal. "Mastercard is committed to creating a global corporate environment where all people are treated equally and fairly and have equal access to opportunities and advancement. For example, in 2021, our global pay equity ratio for women versus men was $1.00 to $1.00, and in the U.S., Black, Hispanic and Asian employees earn $1.00 for every $1.00 earned by white employees. We also strive to develop a workforce and management and leadership teams that reflect the identities, experiences and perspectives of the more than 210 countries and territories we serve. Our Global Inclusion Report provides details regarding our approach to hiring. In 2021, the vast majority of our final candidate interviews in the U.S. included a person of color candidate and globally included a woman, and 51% of our new hires in the U.S. were people of color and 41% of our global new hires were women. In addition, 40% of lateral and promotional opportunities in the U.S. were received by people of color and 42% were received by women globally."
PIRC analysis: The potential benefits of staff diversity lie in widening the perspectives on human resources brought to bear on decision-making, avoiding too great a similarity of attitude and helping companies understand their workforces as a kaleidoscope of customers, marketplace, supply chain and society as a whole. Disclosure surrounding the company's staff composition allows shareholders to consider diversity in the context of the long-term interests of the company, including the ability to attract and retain key talent. Disclosure of a policy to improve diversity and goals that have been set to meet this policy also reassures shareholders that a diverse board is not just an aspiration but a goal. However, this resolution appears to be filed by a right-wing policy think tanks as a spoiler resolution to prevent other shareholders from filing resolutions regarding the company's diversity and focuses on financial analysis with the clear intent to ensure that conservative views are represented on the board as well as so-called liberal perspectives. In addition, its focus on costs and benefits appears to be flawed and artificially focusing on the short-term costs, while deliberately ignoring the long-term impacts from effective diversity and inclusion at the company. A vote against the resolution is recommended.

5. Re-appoint PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP as auditors of the Company

PwC proposed. No non-audit fees were paid to the auditors in the past three years. This approach is commended.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).
The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

achievements and the corresponding variable remuneration has been calculated. There are claw back clauses in place over the entirety of the variable remuneration, which is welcomed.

The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

8. Issue Shares with Pre-emption Rights
The authority is limited to one third of the Company's issued share capital. This cap can increase to two-third of the issued share capital if shares are issued in connection with an offer by way of a rights issue. This authority expires at the next AGM. Not all directors are standing for annual re-election and there is no commitment from all the directors to stand for re-election in case this additional authority is used. In the absence of such commitment, an abstain vote is recommended.

10. Issue Shares for Cash for the Purpose of Financing an Acquisition or Other Capital Investment
The Board is seeking approval to issue up to an additional 10% of the Company's issued share capital for cash for use only in connection with an acquisition or a specified capital investment. Such proposal is not supported. Best practice would be to seek a specific authority from shareholders in relation to a specific transaction if such situation arises. As this is not the case, an oppose vote is therefore recommended.

11. Authorise Share Repurchase
It is proposed to authorise the Board to purchase Company's shares until next AGM. This resolution will not be supported unless the Board has set forth a clear, cogent

No proposal is available at the present time. As per market practice, the proposed remuneration is likely to be made available only at the meeting.
Although this is a common practice for a standard item in this market, support will not be suggested for resolutions concerning remuneration when sufficient information has not been made available for shareholders in sufficient time prior to the meeting, as such practice prevents shareholders from reaching an informed decision. As abstention is not a valid voting option, opposition is recommended.

3. Re-elect Mr. John Hallam - Chair (Non Executive)
Non-Executive Chair. Not considered to be independent, as this director is considered to be connected with the Investment Manager and has also served for a tenure of over nine years. It is a generally accepted norm of good practice that the Chair of the Board should act with a proper degree of independence from the Company's management team when exercising his or her oversight of the functioning of the Board. In addition, it is noted that the director is a member of the Remuneration committee which should comprise wholly of independent directors. Based on these concerns, an oppose vote is recommended.

7. Re-appoint KPMG Channel Islands Limited as the independent auditor of the Company
KPMG proposed. No non-audit fees were paid to the auditors in the past three years. This approach is commended. The current auditor has been in place for more than ten years. There are concerns that failure to regularly rotate the audit firm can compromise the independence of the auditor.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations gap" in the sense that the public expect more of auditors than is expected of them. By reference to conclusions of the BEIS Select Committee of Parliament and High Court decisions, there isn't an expectations gap so far as the UK at least is concerned. Indeed auditor duties in respect of fraud are onerous and in the Barings case at the High Court the issue of negligence didn't merely involve the signing of the public accounts by the audit partner with misstated amounts in, but earlier at the time more junior members of staff missed the fraud when it was smaller reviewing a bank reconciliation (a private and not public document).
The IAASB model of auditing is based on auditors certifying information that is "useful to users". That construct side-steps the crucial duties auditors have for the benefit of the company itself as the Barings case demonstrated. In PIRC's view that model fuels an unwarranted expectations gap and, if audits are limited by the standards misdirect the focus of audits to being "useful for users", a delivery gap because the legal standard and duty is broader than the standards themselves state. PIRC has therefore asked the IAASB to reissue its consultation and has also written to the largest accounting firms to repudiate the IAASB consultation and confirm that the concept of an 'expectations gap' does not limit the scope of their work. In parallel PIRC has reviewed responses from the largest accounting firms to the IAASB determine whether they were encouraging or refuting the concept of an expectations gap. Both Deloitte and BDO correctly referred to the "expectations gap" being dependent on local laws. Both firms also referred to problems with international auditing standards and international accounting standards. BDO went so far as to make other recommendations as well. Mazars did similar in giving evidence to the BEIS Select Committee. In the absence of similar statements from PwC, KPMG, EY or Grant Thornton, PIRC is unable to support re-election or re-appointment of those firms as auditors.

10. Authorise Share Repurchase
Authority is sought to repurchase up to 14.99% of the issued share capital. The authority would expire at the next AGM. Before considering approval of buybacks (and this should come from the board, not the manager, nor a company secretary in the employ of the fund manager), we would like to see a public statement: - addressing whether any part of the discount can be explained by capitalisation of the costs (the total costs as in the Key Investor information Document - 'KID'), - setting out why the board believes that the performance of the incumbent management is not a contributory factor to the discount, and - setting out how the current fee structure might be contributing to the discount, for example some investment companies cap management fees, or reduce the manager fee the larger the fund gets, - setting out the effect of prior year buybacks to help determine the effectiveness of prior buybacks.

7. Issue Tier 1 Capital Bonds for up to RMB 200 billion

It is proposed to issue additional Tier 1 capital bonds for up to RMB 200 billion and until 31 December 2024, at an interest rate to be determined with reference to market interest rates.

The use of Tier 1 capital bonds are not considered appropriate as they put investors at significant risk of dilution in the event that conversion occurs. Such instrument are relatively new instruments and there are concerns that they may create a situation which whilst converting some debt to equity actually disincentivises equity investors from putting more new funds in to banks via rights issues, due to the dilutive effect of the conversion taking away much, or some, of the premium that would ordinarily accrue to shareholders. Based on these concerns, an oppose vote is recommended.

3i GROUP PLC AGM - 29-06-2023

2. Approve the Remuneration Report

All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The CEO salary is in line with the rest of the Company. The CEO's salary is in the median of the competitor group. The total CEO realized variable pay for the year under review is 1138.3% of salary (Annual Bonus: 343% : LTIP 795.3%), which is considered excessive. The ratio of CEO pay compared to average employee pay is acceptable 10:1

The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

3. Approve Remuneration Policy
Total potential variable pay could reach 800% of the salary for the CEO and 500% of the salary for the Group Finance Director (GFD) and is deemed excessive since is higher than 200%. 50% of the Bonus is defer to shares vesting in equal instalments over four years, which is in line with best practices. Concerns are raised by the LTIP award since there are no non-financial performance measures attached to the LTIP and so the focus of remuneration policy is not the operational performance of the business as a whole or the individual roles of each of the executives in achieving that performance. Instead, the focus of the remuneration policy is financial KPIs, which mainly include factors beyond an individual director's control. Vesting period is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term, however a two year holding period apply which is welcomed. In addition, dividend accrual is not prohibited. Such rewards misalign shareholders and executive interests as shareholders must subscribe for shares in order to receive dividends whereas participants in the scheme do not. The performance metrics are not operating interdependently, such that vesting under the incentive plan is only possible where all threshold targets are met. Malus and clawback provisions apply for all variable pay.
The expectations for pay schemes for approval for general meetings are: a going rate true market salary, director service contracts approved by vote, a single profit pool to be distributed company wide, exceptional bonuses only and no long-term incentive plans (LTIPs). The 'binding' pay policy vote has not been effective. The disappointment with the policy vote comes across in the levels of dissenting votes on remuneration reports, which disclose outcomes under previously agreed policies. When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. KPMG proposed. Non-audit fees represented 14.29% of audit fees during the year under review and 12.50% on a three-year aggregate basis. This level of non-audit fees does not raise serious concerns about the independence of the statutory auditor.
In late 2020 International Auditing and Assurance Standards Board (IAASB) produced a consultation entitled, Fraud and Going Concern and refers to the "expectations

2. Approve the Remuneration Report
All elements of the Single Total Remuneration Table are adequately disclosed. The CEO salary is in line with the workforce since for the year under review the CEO salary increased by 4.9% and the workforce salary increased by 5%. The CEO salary is on the median of the competitor group. Variable pay for the year under review was 179.4% of the salary which is lower than the limit of 200%. The CEO pay compared to average employee pay is not acceptable at 21:1. PIRC consider acceptable the ratio to be up to 20:1.

Regardless of local practice or recommendations, or average percentage of diversity on the boards of local listed companies, it is considered that gender diversity should be explicitly taken into account when appointing directors. Namely, it is considered that at least one-third of the board should be reserved for the less represented gender. There is an increasing amount of research that suggests that more diverse companies actually perform better than less diverse companies, and they lead to higher returns. DOMINO'S PIZZA GROUP PLC EGM - 30-06-2023

Background: At the time of the Company's Annual General Meeting on 4 May 2023, the Company's remuneration committee (Remuneration Committee) remained in consultation with our major shareholders on proposals to amend the Policy and amend the rules of the Plan. The Remuneration Committee has now concluded its consultation and is now seeking approval for the Proposals at the General Meeting on 30 June 2023. The Proposals reflect the feedback received by the shareholders of the Company. The remuneration policy proposed is the same as that previously approved other than it has been amended to allow for the one-off grant of premium priced options (structured as share settled stock appreciation rights) to Executive Directors in permanent roles which will be granted under the Company's existing 2022 LTIP and a few minor textual changes for the purpose of clarity.
Proposal: Approve the Remuneration Policy of the Company.
Recommendation: Under the proposed remuneration policy a new one-off award is proposed the Premium priced options under the 2022 LTIP. Awards can be granted on a one-off basis to Executive Directors in permanent roles. The CEO will receive options with fair value of no more than 300% of salary and the Executive Directors will receive options with fair value of no more than 150% of salary. An EPS underpin will apply such that the Company's fully diluted EPS must achieve a compound annual growth rate of at least 3% per annum before the Awards can vest. Awards vest in three equal tranches after three, four and five years from date of grant; the first two tranches are subject to a post-vesting holding period until the fifth anniversary of grant.
Total potential variable pay could reach 650% of the salary for the CEO and 450% of the salary for the Executives in case the one -off award received, this is considered excessive since is higher than the recommended limit of 200%. Bonus deferral is one third of the payment, this is not considered adequate, best practice consider that 50% of the Bonus should defer to shares for at least two years and 50% paid in cash. LTIP award is dependent on both EPS and TSR metrics, the absence of Non-financial parameters to assess Executives' long-term performance is considered contrary to best practice as such factors are generally beyond an individual director's control. Non-financial parameters allow the remuneration policy to focus on the operational performance of the business as a whole and the individual roles of each of the senior executives in achieving that performance. Performance period is three years which is not considered sufficiently long-term, however a two year holding period apply which is welcomed. Malus and clawback provisions apply to all variable pay.

When there are contentious circumstances with executives leaving the instrument that really matters is the service contract. As such, the concept of alignment with shareholders' for pay purposes is a fallacy, because the risk and responsibilities are different. Executives who are directors have unlimited liability, fiduciary duties and Companies Act s172 and contractual duties. The delivery of objectives covered by these duties should not be additionally rewarded with bonuses or LTIPs but considered part of the job. It is believed that the fallacy of 'alignment' with shareholders needs to be retired. Not only do schemes not align, but executives are employees of the company with duties to it. The duties including the new s172 duties should already set the alignment. It is incongruous to use pay schemes as a vehicle for alternative means of 'alignment' which can actually create a competing set of director 'duties'.

It is proposed to the shareholders to approve the amendments of the 2022 Long-Term Incentive Plan in order to enable SARs to be granted in accordance with the new Policy. The Plan provided for the grant of a number of different types of award. It is now proposed to add a further award type, namely SARs which provide essentially the same benefits as a Premium Priced Option. The amendments proposed do not promote better alignment with shareholder. Moreover, PIRC does not consider that LTIPs are an effective means of incentivising performance. These schemes are not considered to be properly long term and are subject to manipulation due to their discretionary nature. Therefore, opposition is recommended.
